"I am heartily in accord with you in considering the demands of the Indians upon you as more serious to-day than ever before. But I have never had any faith that a Government school without any religion in it would ever make much of a self-supporting, self-respecting, self-relying citizen of a poor savage. The Indian children need something more than this policy makes it possible for them to get in a Government school alone. I have no doubt that it is hard times and not lack of interest that brings you into present straits, yet the call upon you is louder and more imperative."

The generosity of our Indian Christians deserves a word. At a recent gathering of the Native Indian Missionary Societies of the Dakotas, six Jubilee share pledges of fifty dollars each, making a gift of three hundred dollars, were pledged to the American Missionary Association. It is a large gift for these Christian men and women, who have only a very limited amount of funds.

In a word, the Indian work was never more encouraging in presenting opportunities than it is to-day. On the other hand, unless the central missions are largely and strongly reinforced, the out-station work, so promising and hopeful, cannot be permanently maintained.

Alaska Mission, at Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska,—the mission temporarily closed—has been reopened. Our missionaries returned to this country last year, but could not feel happy to leave this great field unoccupied. Special appeals were made to the friends who were interested in the work among the Eskimos, and as a result sufficient funds were contributed to warrant the committee in returning these missionaries to their much-loved work and people. Word has already reached us of their safe arrival and the promising opening of the work. This is the only mission under Congregational auspices in all the territory of Alaska. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of the missionary. As these reindeer increase in number they furnish supplies of food and method of transportation to the Eskimos. This will not only better the physical condition of these people, but open up new fields of Christian and missionary work.

If the enthusiasm, faith and desire of the superintendent of our Chinese work and the testimony of our teachers, as well as that of pastors in California, may indicate the greatness and necessities of this part of our Christian work, we may magnify the importance of it many times before we shall overstate it.

That 166 Chinese give evidence of hopeful conversion during the past year, and that forty-two have professed their faith in Christ by uniting with Christian churches, is a fact in itself which is significant when we remember that these have had no previous knowledge of Christianity. It is, however, when we consider the bearing of this work on the evangelization of China, and the bearing of the redemption of China on that of the world, that we can worthily begin to appreciate it.

The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886 and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton, with property worth $4,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church. During most of three years past they have employed a traveling medical missionary, who was converted in the Chinese Mission in San Francisco and afterward returned to China and completed a thorough medical course under foreign instruction. The statistics of this Chinese Missionary Society inform us that through their missionaries—converted Chinese who have returned to China—the gospel has been preached to more than 300,000 people.

Three workers are now supported in China by this California Chinese Missionary Society, two of whom are in Canton. Additionally they contribute from $50 to $60 each year to the American Board, and this year they have taken one share in our Jubilee Fund. This is a wonderful record.

An interesting Chinese school and mission in Salt Lake City is keeping full step with those of California in interest and Christian hopefulness.

Probably in no part of our field has there been shown a greater degree of Christian zeal and consuming sacrifice for the gospel's sake than is exemplified in these people who have been redeemed from heathenism to knowledge and love of Christ. We trust that their undertaking for a mission house in San Francisco as a center and nucleus of their Christian fellowship and work may prosper with the favor of God and men. We would that this work were nearer to the sight of our constituency. It would be nearer to the heart.

FINANCES.

While we face the year before us with a debt of $66,572.51, we have reason for gratitude to God and to His people that the receipts for the year have enabled us to reduce the debt with which the year began by the sum of $29,575.30.

This reduction of the debt means a large sacrifice from the supporters of our work, as well as severe retrenchment in the mission fields. But the hearty response to appeals for the work and for the Jubilee shares gives great encouragement to hope that even larger gifts are to follow from churches, Sunday-schools, women's missionary societies, young people's societies, as well as from individuals and from bequests, so that the debt can be paid and the work be strengthened.

The executor of the Daniel Hand estate has paid over to the Association during the year securities the face value of which is $305,025. It will be borne in mind that the income only of this Daniel Hand Fund can be used, and this only for the education of colored youth. This has enabled more than two thousand students to continue in schools, who could not have done so but for this beneficent provision.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

The organization of the Bureau came with the first general movement of Women's Missionary Unions, in 1883. In that year the contributions distinctively related to woman's work were $2,426. From that time until now these women's organizations have passed into the American Missionary Association's treasury $229,000. During this Jubilee Year the Association has received from women's societies $29,071.21, the largest amount contributed in any year. A deep interest has been shown in the Jubilee movement, and 152 shares ($7.600) have been taken in the Jubilee Fund.

Women have had a large part with this Association in both home and field service. From the beginning of our present distinctive work men and women worked side by side in the mission fields. The heroisms and noble sacrifices of women teachers ostracized in their misunderstood work, their ability and fidelity, have made the greater part of the past accomplishment possible as well as actual. It is fitting that the women at home should cherish their interest in those who represent them.

With this survey of our great work, its methods, policies, reasons, and results, we look forward to the year which now opens as we pass into the second half-century with deep sense of God's gracious and overruling providence. The divine leading of the past strengthens our faith in the hopes of the future.

Obituary.

PROFESSOR GEORGE L. WHITE

was born in Cadiz, N. Y., in 1833, and was a member of the 73d Ohio Regiment. He fought in the battles of Gettysburg and Chancellorsville, and his life was always characterized by a spirit of loyal devotion to his country. At the close of the war he held office in the Freedmen's Bureau and was appointed to be the first treasurer of Fisk University.

Here he became the leader of the band of Jubilee Singers, and started with them on their first journey and remained with them in their trip through this country and during their campaign in Great Britain and on the Continent. It was to his faith and energy that their success was in large measure due.

In 1881 Mr. White, while at Chautauqua with a band of singers, fell from a platform and suffered injuries from which he never wholly recovered. For several years he was at Sage College, Ithaca, N. Y., where he performed a work of great personal influence and endeared himself to all those with whom he came in contact. Mr. White died suddenly November 9, 1895, being stricken with paralysis. Services were held in the chapel of Sage College, and also at Fisk University, where some of the original band of singers rendered some of the old Jubilee hymns. He was buried at Fredonia, N. Y., and the interment service was held in the Presbyterian church. A useful career of a consecrated man has terminated amid the sorrows of many friends who yet do not mourn without hope.

MISS ADA M. SPRAGUE.

On the 23d of November, Miss Ada M. Sprague, assistant in the normal department of the Ballard School at Macon, Ga., breathed her last, after a brief illness of two weeks. She was born in Keene, O., November 15, 1863, of New England ancestry. Her first experience in teaching was in a country school near her home, where she was very successful. She labored faithfully for four years in Tillotson College, at Austin, Tex.

In October of last year she went to Macon, Ga., where she did her work thoroughly up to within two weeks of her death. She leaves a widowed mother and twin sister. She has gone in the prime of her young womanhood and in the midst of her usefulness. But she has left behind the example of a consecrated life which will endure.

MRS. N. D. MERRIMAN.

On the 1st of October, 1895, on the anniversary of her entering upon work as a teacher in Burrell School, at Selma, Ala., we buried Mrs. Narcissa Dorsey Merriman, wife of Professor James A. Merriman, of the class of '91, Talladega. Mrs. Merriman took the full college course at Fisk University, graduating in 1891.

Miss Dorsey taught in '91–2 at Beaumont, Texas; '92–3–4 in Birmingham, Ala., and '94–5 in Burrell. In all these places she will long be remembered for her gift of song, scholarly attainment and genial bearing—a lovely woman. Besides a sorrowing husband she left a widowed mother, bereft of her only child, and a helpless infant three weeks old, thus seeming to lay down her work at the very dawn of great usefulness in home and society.

MISS LILLIAN BEYER.

Miss Lillian Beyer, who taught in the Warner Institute at Knoxville, Tenn., last year, under this Association, died on November 29th, and was laid to rest December 2nd. A week before her death she had every appearance of good health. She had secured a position as city missionary in the neighborhood in which she used to live in New York, and was expecting to begin her life work there on the very day on which she was buried.

But a few days before she was attacked with a violent fit of coughing and grew rapidly worse, falling asleep two days later, on her twenty-fifth birthday.

MISS LUCELIA E. WILLIAMS.

This estimable lady, after four years of severe but patient suffering from neuralgia, passed away Sunday, December 22, 1895, at her home in Deerfield, Mass. Miss Williams was a native of Deerfield, an old historic town in the Connecticut Valley, and a descendant of Rev. T. Williams, who was taken captive by the Indians. During the war of the Rebellion Miss Williams was sent by the National Freedman's Aid Society to labor among the Freedmen of Port Royal Island, S. C. The following year was spent at Richmond, Va., teaching among the refugees who had come into the city at the close of the war. The next year she taught a large school in Washington, D. C., at Kendall Green, and in the autumn of 1867, accompanied by her sister, Miss P. A. Williams, she began her work at Hampton, Va., teaching in the Butler and Lincoln schools. Miss Williams was connected with the institution two years when she was appointed by the American Missionary Association as Principal of the Stanton Normal Institute, Jacksonville, Fla., where she remained seven years. Miss Williams always secured the confidence and esteem of those with and for whom she labored, and was considered one of the most efficient teachers in the employ of the Association.

REV. HENRY SWIFT DE FOREST, D.D.

The death of this honored servant of God, January 27, at his house in Talladega, Ala., was sudden and unexpected. Although he had suffered for several years past under impaired health, yet on the day preceding the accident he appeared unusually well. He had performed his usual college duties, attended and spoken at the memorial services for Dr. Cutler on the afternoon of Friday, and was present at the college social on Friday night. The accident occurred on Saturday morning. On crossing the hall at the head of the stairway he fell down the entire flight and was found on the lower floor. It was the doctor's opinion that the fall was due to an apoplectic stroke. Funeral services were held on Tuesday forenoon, which were attended by many of the best citizens of Talladega, two of the pastors of the Talladega churches speaking warmly and sympathetically of Dr. De Forest and of the institution over which he had presided. Mrs. De Forest and her daughter, accompanied by one of the professors of the institution, attended the remains to their last resting-place in Sherburne, New York.

Dr. De Forest was of Huguenot descent; was born in So. Edmeston, N. Y., March 17, 1833, was graduated from Yale College in 1857, and obtained his theological education at Yale and Union Theological Seminaries.

He was ordained in New Haven, Aug. 2, 1863, and served as chaplain in the Eleventh Connecticut Volunteers during the Civil War. After occupying several important pastorates, he accepted the call to the presidency of Talladega College, Talladega, Ala., in October, 1879, a position he filled with great acceptance to the day of his death.

Dr. De Forest was a man of fine personal presence, affable in manner, gifted as a speaker, a scholar, and a man of practical affairs. His life was varied, but in whatever position he was employed he soon won the confidence and esteem of those with whom he was associated.

MISS EVELYN E. STARR.

Our school at Greenwood, S. C., mourns the loss of one of its teachers, who, though she had been but a few months in connection with the school, had endeared herself to both teachers and pupils. Miss Evelyn E. Starr departed this life February 6, 1896. The principal of the school writes: "She came to the work with a sincere love for it, was intensely in earnest, and devoutly Christian."

HON. SEYMOUR STRAIGHT.

In the death of Mr. Straight the American Missionary Association and the colored people of the South lose a firm and helpful friend. Mr. Straight passed away on February 21, 1896, in the 81st year of his age. When the Association in 1869 planted a school for the higher education of the Negroes in New Orleans, La., it found there a few persons of Northern birth, but who had long resided in that city, and were men of established character and of large influence, who took interest in the proposed institution and gave it their encouragement and support. Among these persons the Hon. Seymour Straight was most conspicuous for his deep interest in the project, for his useful service on the Board of Trustees and for his large gift at the outset—in view of all which the institution took his name.

Under Gen. Sheridan's laudable desire for good government in the city of New Orleans, Mr. Straight was made a member of the City Council. In 1868 he was appointed by the Chamber of Commerce as a member of a committee in regard to improvements in the cities of the State. In 1872 he was appointed a member of the International Penitentiary Congress, to assemble in London, Eng., which appointment, however, he was unable to accept. He received other marks of the esteem in which he was held by his fellow-citizens. In 1869, at the incorporation of the Straight University, he was appointed President of its Board of Trustees, which position he held till the time of his death. A good man has gone and his works do follow him.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, Secretary.

THE JUBILEE.

The fifty years of the American Missionary Association mark a period luminous with the development and universal recognition of woman's influence and activity for the welfare of the country and the Church. Possibly her first effort toward direct participation in educational and religious movements was not less surprising than have been the rapid changes since, resulting in the various Women's Organizations now in operation.

But long before this period there were those who watched the signs of the times with a consciousness of personal responsibility for the betterment of humanity and the salvation of souls, and who sought opportunities to give their money wisely for the spread of the gospel. Among the cases on record is a contribution of $100 to the American Board, more than eighty years ago, recorded thus: "From an obscure female who kept the money many years, waiting for a proper opportunity to bestow it upon a religious object." In this good woman's day, the keeping of her money many years is doubtless a testimony to the genuineness of its consecration to religious purposes; but, in our time of opportunities, numerous, proper and apparent, we have no need to delay the speedy bestowment of our money upon those objects to which our heart's allegiance to Christ tells us it should be given.

Women's Work in connection with the American Missionary Association has been two-fold, home service and field service, and dates from its organization in 1846; even then the principles of the society had deep root in the hearts of many devout women.

HOME SERVICE.

It has been well said that it was the human cry from the dark heathenism of the old world that pierced the hearts of Christian women. So also it was the human cry from the suffering, slave-bound men and women in our own land that roused woman's attention and called her noblest qualities into action. It overcame her timidity, gave her utterance; it so inspired the pen of Harriet Beecher Stowe as to cause her thrilling plea to go "echoing through the land."

The women's organizations that first offered aid were not limited to denominational or even church lines. "The Female Benevolent Society," and "Female Anti-Slavery Society" included all of any name with kindred purpose; and many of them, especially the anti-slavery societies, found in the American Missionary Association just the missionary channel they desired. Often without any formal organization women combined their contributions for specified needs. The first number of the magazine The American Missionary, issued in October, 1846, contained an invitation to

"some female association" to defray the expense of Sarah Magru, one of the Amistad captives, while studying at Oberlin and for her return to Africa in due time. Two months later we are informed that "a few pious ladies in West Meriden, Conn., will undertake her support." But it was the anti-slavery ladies of Great Barrington, Mass., who sent not only liberal contributions of money and clothing, but, with a view to winning new friends, also sent subscriptions for twenty-five copies of the magazine; an example worthy of emulation at the present day. Within the first five years of its work the Association received twelve legacies from the estates of women. Within the first fifteen years it had 812 women Life Members, and has added to the list annually until more than 7,000 women have been thus enrolled. There was not a large following of the cause represented by this Association during the first fifteen years of its history, but it was steadfast, loyal, self-denying, and the women who had part in it worked and prayed with the intensity of strong conviction and with sympathy quickened by that "human cry" that never ceased.

It was not without some experience in associated work, therefore, that women entered upon the memorable five years opening with 1861. In town, in farming center, and city church, women's relief work was carried on under the leadership of those who were most experienced and able, Christian patriotism kindling anxious hearts and nerving tired hands. Auxiliaries to the Sanitary and Christian Commissions were formed, and 40,000 women went bravely to the hospitals and army tents to care for the sick and wounded. It was the day of "volunteers."

These auxiliaries being mainly absorbed in care for the soldiers, the aid to the American Missionary Association was not large through organized channels, but individual gifts increased. Women sent their offerings enclosed in paper bordered with red, white and blue, bearing devices suggestive of peace and Union with such messages as "I hope you will follow up the Federal Army with all your might."

A widespread movement for organization of Women's Missionary Societies followed naturally the experience of the war time. The Woman's Union Missionary Society of New York, led by Mrs. Doremus, had been the forerunner in 1861; then followed the Woman's Board of Missions for Congregational Foreign work in 1868.

In 1872, Women's State Home Missionary Societies began to be organized, limited, however, in their range of work. By 1883 the plan was developed of "State Unions" auxiliary to all the Congregational National Societies for Home, and in a few cases combining Foreign Missions. There are now forty-two Women's State Unions with about 2,800 auxiliaries in the churches, for missionary information and aid to the National Societies. It was in line with this movement and to aid in its development that the Woman's Bureau of the American Missionary Association was organized in 1883. This associated work of women has afforded delightful fellowship and has kindled zeal. It has developed the missionary spirit, quickened the sense of personal responsibility, widened the range of missionary intelligence, defined and emphasized the fields and needs of the National Societies and brought additional money to their treasuries.

The records show that in 1883, when the Woman's Bureau was organized, the contributions to the American Missionary Association through Women's Missionary Societies, distinctively, were $2,426. Since then these women's organizations have passed $229,000 to the treasury of the American Missionary Association.

During the year just closed, the Association has received through Women's Missionary Societies $29,071.21.

In the Jubilee movement, women have shown a deep interest and have taken one hundred and fifty-two shares in the Jubilee Fund. While the women of Massachusetts and Connecticut contributed one-half these shares, twenty-one States are represented in this response from women to the Jubilee appeal.

May these results, so helpful to the prosecution of the mission work, bring also their blessing to those who have by their labor and gifts made such record possible.

FIELD SERVICE.

The American Missionary Association has always recognized and welcomed the help that women could give, not only in the collection of funds, but in the field. From the outset there was a call for women as teachers, men and women working side by side in the mission field; and by 1861 there had been under commission one hundred and nine women as missionaries to Africa and the West Indies, to the Indians and the colored people in Canada.

From all these missions, particularly from Africa, came reports of wide and inviting fields, where the natives were ready to receive the gospel messengers. It was in 1859, that one missionary wrote: "It is a privilege to be engaged in this blessed work, to suffer and toil, and, if need be, die, to help in starting the wave of influence that shall redeem Ethiopia." The cry was "Come over and help us." But laborers for Africa were yet to be prepared.

By 1861, the American Missionary Association had reached the point in its history when the great barrier to the progress of missions South was to be swept away. The Association followed the Federal army closely. There was no lack of volunteer missionaries to teach the Freedmen. Women not infrequently offered to go at their own charges or for merely their traveling expenses. They lived in tents or perchance a forsaken Southern mansion, or in army barracks, and taught the thousands of freed people that flocked to the schools, until three separate schools a day, forenoon, afternoon and evening, became necessary that all might be enrolled. Fearless of the Ku-Klux, unmindful of ostracism, they set themselves to the work before them with an enthusiasm matched only by the brave boys in blue who had opened the way.

By the year 1865, with one hundred and thirty-six as earnest men, there were two hundred and eighteen women at work among the Freedmen—the pioneers of the thousands of women who were to engage in this grand mission as the years rolled on. Although teachers in the schools, they made the mission homes the real centers of operation. To these the poor people might come freely and frequently; here were held the sewing meetings, the Bible classes, the mothers' meetings; here the neighbors might come in to family prayers or to an evening meal. The "Teachers' Homes" of the American Missionary Association have ever been the "Hull Houses" and "College Settlements" of the Negro neighborhoods. It was of this work that Gail Hamilton said in her characteristic style, "I never heard that Peter and Paul did much more than preach the gospel. Being men perhaps it was the best they could do. But these godly women wash the gospel into the little dirty faces, comb it into the little kinky heads, patch it into the unspeakable rags." To the present day the mission of this Association has been to uplift the people physically, intellectually, morally and spiritually.

Among the first appointments made, was that of Mrs. Peake, of Virginia, who taught the first school of "contrabands," the initiative of the work that developed the Hampton Institute. From the beginning until the present, women have had a large place and influence in the development of the higher institutions. In all the graded and normal schools the majority of instructors are women. Three hundred and ninety-two have been in the work of the Association the past year as missionaries to Alaska, the Chinese, the Indians, the Southern Highlanders, and the Negroes. They have had the entire work of fourteen of the graded schools, several of which have boarding departments, and of sixteen common schools. They have been teachers, matrons, preceptresses, financial agents, principals, and in the latter capacity have had the charge of the special religious work connected with the schools.

In the fifty years, 3,500 women have been numbered in the American Missionary Association's ranks. They have given and are giving valuable service. It seems fitting in this Jubilee Year to look back over the past and pay tribute to the part women have had in this marvelous work.

Yet in the mission field there is no such distinctive term as "Woman's Work." It is never thought of as such. The work is emphasized; the missionaries, whether men or women, are there as representatives of the Church of Christ to do the work of the churches in this part of the Lord's great vineyard. We are not called to Woman's Work, but to our Lord's great mission, committed to His Church. If through woman's influence in home service and field service the entire Church membership should be stimulated to missionary activity, all would indeed rejoice.

On this Jubilee occasion we have given an outline of Woman's Work for fifty years, but we do not live in the past. We serve the present age. There is work before us of magnitude and importance. The Negro race has not its leverage of leadership; it never needed vigorous, wise, generous help more than now. So also every other field of the Association needs support and expansion. The field service is dependent on the home service. May we find in the past the promise of the future that this work will be generously sustained by large gifts and by small, by legacies and by ready offerings until it shall be accomplished. May it all our powers engage to do our Master's will; and in such way as will most surely and quickly bring in His kingdom.

This is to certify that we have examined the accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1896, with the vouchers, and find the same correct, as stated in the above accounts.

We also certify that we have examined the property accounts, and the certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association, representing the investments of the several funds, and find them to correspond with the balance sheet of September 30th, 1896, and with the detailed statement of the books of the Treasurer.

New York, October 9, 1896.

BRIEF HISTORY, 1846-1896.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846, its distinctive characteristic being freedom from all complicity with slavery and caste.

The object as stated in its Constitution is "To conduct Christian missionary and educational operations, and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own and other countries, which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort."

It began its work in Missions in Africa, Siam, Sandwich Islands, West Indies; and its work in our own country, in the Western States and among the Indians.

In 1848 it began work in the South among whites and blacks, although attended with great opposition and danger.

In 1852 it undertook to reach the Chinese in California, the plans ripening in 1870 to successful work.

In 1861, during the civil war, it began the enlargement of work in the South, which has been marked by steady progress and success.

In 1882 it transferred its Foreign Missions and enlarged its Indian work by receiving the Indian Mission of the American Board.

The work of the American Missionary Association is therefore at present among the colored and white people of the South, the Indians, the Chinese in California and the Eskimos in Alaska.

THE FIELD.

The field reached by the Association is in the United States: in the South, among the Negroes and whites, especially in the mountains; in the West, among the Indians; in the Pacific States, among the Chinese; and in Alaska, among the Eskimos. Through its pupils it reaches Africa, China, Cuba, Honduras and Mexico.

In our country, three-fourths of the nation's illiteracy is in the South. Forty per cent. of the whole population of the South cannot read the New Testament. Of the 2,000,000 illiterate voters in our country, 1,500,000 are in the South. The Negro population, now about 8,000,000, increases at the rate of 500 per day.

Among the more than 2,000,000 mountain whites in the South, one half cannot read. Of the 50,000 Indian children, less than 15,000 are in school. The Chinese in America are few, but they represent one-third of the population of the globe.

Contributions are solicited from Churches, Sunday-schools, Missionary Societies, Y. P. S. C. E. and Individuals. Send the contributions to H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, Room 108 Bible House (9th Street entrance), New York City.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-Eighty of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-Two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-Five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled An Act Relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars; * and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P.M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting, the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.
4. A Committee on Collections.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON COLLECTIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Collections to consider each month the collecting work and to report thereon to the Executive Committee, and to prepare for the consideration of the Committee plans for increasing the collections.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first four Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of the Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present at an Annual Meeting and voting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-Eighty of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-Two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-Five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled An Act Relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars; * and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P.M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting, the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.
4. A Committee on Collections.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee, and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEES ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meeting of the Executive Committee), and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON COLLECTIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Collections to consider each month the collecting work and to report thereon to the Executive Committee, and to prepare for the consideration of the Committee plans for increasing the collections.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first four Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them, with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient working of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to indorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purposes of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursements shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.
5. Reading the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Collections. (5) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive Session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such a meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

The Mission of America.

SERMON

BY

REV. DR. LYMAN ABBOTT.

Text—Matt. xxiii. 8. "One is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren."

In the new library building at Washington, the artist has undertaken to interpret by symbolic figures upon the interior of the dome the religious significance of the world's history. Each great nation is represented by an allegorical picture with a legend underneath. The legend for Judea is "Religion"; for Greece, "Philosophy"; for Rome, "Administration"; for Germany, "Printing"; for America, "Science." The artist has perceived and interpreted a great fundamental spiritual truth—that to every nation God gives a special mission; that as the Washington Monument was built, every State contributing a stone to its erection, so the kingdom of God is built in the history of the world, every nation contributing something; that in that great development of the human race, which the scientists call evolution and the Christian calls redemption, each nation has had some part to fulfill; that in that great progress toward what political economy calls democracy and religious faith perceives to be the kingdom of God, every nation has had some share.

This message appears and reappears in the Hebrew prophets. The Bible is not merely an anthology of Hebrew literature. It is not merely a collection of various messages from prophets and apostles to the church of the olden time—the Jewish, or the church of the more modern time—the Christian. It is true, these prophets were messengers to the people of Israel, but they were more than that. They were interpreters of Israel to itself. It was their function to do what is the work of the prophet in all ages, to pierce beneath the mere temporary experience, the mere mask of humanity, and discern the innermost light of the soul, which is itself the life of God, and bring it to consciousness. There was a message of Moses and of David and of Isaiah and of Paul; but in all these messages, uniting them all and making them one great message, there was a message of Israel to the world, and this message of Israel to the world the Bible interprets to us.

But it is not more true that Israel had its message to the world than that every other nation has also had such a message. The secret of national success has always been the understanding of God's message and giving it forth; the secret of national failure has always been the failure to understand God's message and the failure to give it. Moses, gathering the children of Israel at the Mount, says to them: "Ye are a holy people, a nation of priests." He does not mean that they were better than other people—he tells them they are not; he means that they are consecrated and set apart to do a work of God in the world. The great unknown prophet, speaking to the Israelites in exile, says to them, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come; the glory of the Lord hath risen upon thee." Their illumination is itself a summons to illuminate others. Paul, in the later ages tells the Israelites that they are better than other people only in this: that unto them have been entrusted the oracles of God. They have been entrusted with a message to humanity. These three great prophets do but repeat, what was often repeated by every prophet from Moses to John, that the nation itself had a mission. They do but repeat what the whole course of human history repeats from Moses to the present time, that every nation has its mission and every nation is entrusted with some oracle of God.

Passing the history of the nations in rapid panorama before us for a moment, we may see, I think, although necessarily the interpretation must be brief and imperfect, how these national messages may be discriminated. The message of Israel to the world was the message of righteousness: that God is a righteous person; that he demands righteousness of his children; that he demands nothing else; that no creeds, no ceremonies, no rituals, no services can possibly take the place of practical righteousness in daily life; and, finally, that he will, by his inspiring presence and his personal coming and incarnation in life, help to righteousness those who desire to be righteous. The message of Greece to the world was the message of truth. Greece impliedly and explicitly affirmed the adaptation of the human mind to truth and its capacity to ascertain and know the truth. Hebraism inspired men to act; Greece incited them to study and to know; the typical Hebrew of the olden time is Isaiah, the typical Greek is Socrates; Hebrew literature has its ten commandments but no creed, Greek literature has more than one creed but no ten commandments. The emphasis of the one is expressed in the requirement: "Cease to do evil, learn to do well;" of the other in the formulary: "Whosoever will be saved, before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic faith." Rome had for its message organization. The Roman cared very little about personal righteousness. That he had to learn from the Hebrew. He cared very little about truth. Pilate's half-pitying, half-contemptuous question, "What is truth?" represented the mind of the average Roman. But he did care for organization, and he gave to the world the principles of organization. It is from ancient Rome that we derive the fundamental principles of our jurisprudence. We go back to Rome for the method of the organization of our army. The most highly organized Church in the world, the Roman Catholic, and the most highly organized society in that Church, the Jesuits, borrow their principles and methods of organization from imperial Rome. And even Democracy, while it disavows the notion of imperial Rome that power is derived from the governor, and maintains that it is derived through the governed, still adopts the hierarchical method of Rome in the essential principles of its administration. Order and organization come from Rome, as philosophy from Greece, and religion from Israel.

The Washington artist is right in saying that the message of Judea to the world has been Religion—if by religion is meant the recognition of God as a righteous person and loyalty to Him in a righteous life; that the message of Greece has been Philosophy—if by philosophy is meant the love of truth perceived in its true proportions and right order; that the message of Rome has been Administration—if by administration is meant the orderly arrangement and distribution of power in the social organization. But he is not right in giving the message of Germany as printing, for Germany has given us more than printing. When the world had learned first that God is a righteous person and demands righteousness from His children and will help them to righteousness, and then had learned that truth is for the human intellect and that men may know the truth and are to search for it, and then that there is a divine order in the world and that men must conform to that order in their methods of organization, then it was further to learn the lesson of individual liberty. Luther interpreted the German race to itself, and Luther's message was this: Every man shall stand face to face with God and give account to him and is therefore liberated from all accounting to his fellow men save in subordination to that supreme accounting to the Almighty and the Allwise. That the individual is more than a cog in a vast machine; that the development of the individual is the end of organization; that all social, all political and all religious institutions are to be measured by their adaptation to develop the individual as a child of God: this was the message of Luther to Germany and of Germany to the world.

These messages, once given, need to be constantly repeated—learned afresh by every new generation and repeated to every succeeding generation; relearned by ourselves and retaught to our children's children so long as the world lasts, namely: that God is a righteous person and requires righteousness of his children and will help them to be righteous; that He is the God of truth and has so made the human mind that it may know the truth, so that neither he nor truth is unknowable; that social order and mutual subordination are essential to human society and to individual liberty; and that this social order must be so maintained as to secure and preserve the fullest possible development of the individual in his growth toward truth and righteousness, that is toward God. For still there are formalists who think that they can live unrighteous lives and satisfy God by believing creeds or performing rituals; and penitents in despair because they cannot find their way to righteousness without help and do not know Him who is the source and fountain of all righteousness; and agnostics who think that men cannot know the truth, but must be content to remain forever in ignorance of it; and dogmatists who would have us accept traditions of the past in lieu of knowledge; and superficial gnostics who would give us for knowledge the mere labels of phenomena in place of that truth of which phenomena are but the varying manifestations; and anarchists who would dissolve the bands of society, take away the restraints of law, and send us back to the condition of Israel under the Judges, when every man did what was right in his own eyes and there was no law in Israel; and rulers, both in church and state, who would discourage individual development because growth involves change and change inconvenience, who object to resurrection, because corpses are quiet and living men are troublesome. But the messages of Judea and Greece and Rome and Germany do not sum up God's entire message to mankind. They do not interpret all that is implicit in the teachings of Jesus Christ. They are not the sum of all Christian truth, nor do they include the consummation of Christian life. America has also her lesson to learn, her message to deliver. And if we may sum up the Hebrew message in the one word "Righteousness," and the Greek message in the one word "Truth," and the Roman message in the one word "Organization," and the German message in the one word "Liberty," then we may sum up the message of America in the one word "Brotherhood." Still, the old message needs to be repeated: A righteous God, a truth-seeking humanity, order in the world, and liberty for the individual; but building on those four great foundations, the superstructure we have to rear is the structure of human brotherhood. "One is your master, even Christ, and all ye are brethren." What brotherhood is, what it requires of the rich toward the poor, of the wise toward the ignorant, of the strong toward the weak, of class to class and race to race, that is the lesson set to us to learn; that is the message given to us to deliver.

Not until the world had heard these four great messages was this continent unveiled where a new experience of human life was to be inaugurated. The men who, answering the silent call of God, came here were men who had learned the previous messages. The Puritans in New England, the Dutch in New York, the Roman Catholics in Maryland, the Chevaliers in Virginia, the Huguenots in the Carolinas, came believing in God as a righteous person demanding righteousness, in the great Christian symbols of truth, in law and order, and in human liberty. They brought these four great fundamental lessons with them, and laid here, upon this continent, in these truths the foundation of a new nation—almost a new industrial and social civilization. But they only laid the foundation. Every event in our subsequent history has interpreted the work their children have to do in the world—the message they have to learn and to proclaim.

All the problems of our national life, from the days of the first colonists down to this time, have been problems of human brotherhood. We have not fought over questions of creed statement—those were Greek; nor over questions of ecclesiastical order—those were Roman. We have not had to fight for personal liberty—that was established for us on English soil by our English ancestors; we brought liberty here with our Anglo-Saxon blood. But we have been constantly brought face to face with this profound and perplexing and complex problem: How shall men of various races, nationalities, tongues, characters, classes and conditions live together on one continent in human brotherhood; not bound together by any external bond, not under the law of any superior authority, with only the voice of God speaking in their consciences for law, and with no other bond uniting them than that of human fellowship. The problem of the colonists was a problem of human brotherhood: How should the thirteen colonies, with their conflicting interests and their rivalries and jealousies come together and live at peace with one another? They only learned the answer through seven years of cruel war. The constitutional problem was a problem of human brotherhood: How should a new nation be formed without a king, without a bishop, without a landed aristocracy, and with all the responsibility thrown upon the common people? The great flood tide of immigrants that have flocked to our shores from that time on, bringing here various religious and political traditions, and thrown together into this ebullient population, have brought to us another phase of the question of human brotherhood. The public school question presents another aspect of the same problem. How shall we educate the children of this nation, educate them in intellect and in conscience, without arousing the religious prejudices of a part of the people or violating the religious interests and rights of another part? This is a problem with which we are still wrestling, and which we have not yet fully solved. How shall we carry on our great national debates? How shall we settle our great national questions? How shall we determine questions of tariff and taxation, of coin and of currency, without vituperation and abuse, with mutual respect for each others' widely differing opinions? Every political election puts the American people again to school and teaches them how to carry on, not a great campaign that sets man against man and class against class, but a great debate in which intellect clashes against intellect, and conscience against conscience, until we find the truth "with malice toward none, and with charity toward all"—in brief teaches them the meaning of brotherhood. How shall we adjust the relations between employer and employed, capitalist and laborer? How form a true partnership between them? How share equitably and justly the profits of this corporate enterprise? This one great industrial problem is a problem of human brotherhood, evidently not to be solved until each man recognizes in his fellow worker a brother man, and understands what brotherhood means and obeys its laws. Our great religious problems are problems of brotherhood. They are chiefly two: First, how shall all the various churches of Christ become one church in America, where there is no establishment, no ecclesiasticism, no favoritism, and where the government does not recognize nor help one church more than another? How shall all these conflicting churches, Baptist and Pedo-Baptist, Episcopalian and Congregational, Roman Catholic and Protestant—yea, I venture to say, Jew and Christian—how shall they work together for a common end, the redemption of the human race? Second—How shall we make this church in very truth a church of the common people? How shall we prevent it from becoming a church of caste and aristocracy? How shall we keep its doors wide open and illustrate in its mission the glorious truth: "The common people hear it gladly"? These are the two great religious problems to-day in the United States, and they are both problems of human brotherhood. When you trace the history of the past and look to our colonial and constitutional and immigration and educational and political and industrial and ecclesiastical questions, we see that all of them are different phases of the one great problem of human brotherhood. It is for this that God has put us into this country. We are not to make money. Men are not to make money; money is to make men. We are not commissioned to create a nation great in population and in acreage, but to discover for ourselves what human brotherhood means and then teach it to the nations of the earth.

In learning and in teaching this, we must recognize the lessons already learned—liberty, organization, truth, righteousness. We must find a principle or principles of human brotherhood that will help to develop every individual along the line of divine development into the sonship of God. We must find principles of human brotherhood that will promote a social order founded on human liberty. We must find principles that will be consistent with the great eternal truths of life written in human history. And last, and most important of all, we must find principles of human brotherhood that are consonant with a righteous God, his righteous law, and his demand of righteousness in human conduct. For these four words are, after all, only different forms of the same word; whether you call it righteousness or truth or order or liberty, they are all one; there can be no human brotherhood, as there can be no Kingdom of God, which is not founded on all four.

Even were the time not too short I should not venture to undertake to unfold the principles of human brotherhood. I speak to-night only of one special truth of human brotherhood which we have here to learn in this country and teach to other countries: God's answer to the question, What is the duty, in a Christian brotherhood, of a superior race to an inferior race?

There are three answers to that question, and all possible answers are composed of these three or of combinations of the three. In the first place, we may say of an inferior race, that because it is inferior we will make it tributary to ourselves. That was the Roman method of dealing with an inferior race. Wherever Rome went, whatever province it conquered, it made the province tributary to Rome. It is true that very often the conquered province had better law than it had before, with better administration; but the object of Roman conquest was never to give better law or better administration. It was always to get, never to give. When the province was conquered the right to take the revenues was sold to the highest bidder, and the province was fleeced and its fortunes gradually transferred from the outer circumference to the inner heart of the empire. Analogous was the method by which we dealt with the Negro race in this country. We said, "The Negro race is inferior; therefore the Negro race shall be our servant. The Negro is inferior; therefore he shall work for us without wages." As we make the horses bear our burdens because the horse is an inferior animal, as we take the honey from the hive because the bee is an inferior animal, and do right, so men said "This Negro is an inferior animal; therefore he shall bear our burdens; therefore he shall gather our honey for us." The argument was this: If these men cultivate the cotton, we shall have a wealthy community. If these men do the manual work, the mere drudgery of life, it will leave a leisure class which will grow in culture. But the result did not sustain this conclusion. On the contrary, the South, under the influence of slavery, grew poorer and less cultivated. It was finally left without wealth, without literature, without a free press, without free schools, without great colleges or universities. The process of endeavoring to climb up on the shoulders of an inferior race into a higher position has always failed and always will.

The second answer to the question is extermination, or something like extermination. Because this race is inferior, we will sweep it away and take possession of it with our superior race. That is the answer which to-day the Turk is making to this question in Turkey. The Armenian is an inferior race, he says; the Armenian does not recognize Islam and Mohammed; away with the Armenian! The Turk, indeed, combines the two answers. With one hand he throttles the Armenian while with the other he robs him of his pocketbook. A wicked conscience and a wicked greed combine in partnership in the Turk's answer to the question, "How shall a superior race treat an inferior race?" Now, we are not Turks—not exactly! but though we have not the wicked courage that makes us dare to exterminate the Indians, we say complacently that they are dying out. Though we have not the wicked courage to exterminate four millions of Negroes when the war is over, we complacently have said, "Without the care of the master the Negro will die out; we will not kill him but we will let Kismet kill him; we will not exterminate him, but we will let him die of hunger and cold and nakedness and want." Or, perhaps, we are not willing to kill him; we are not even willing that he should die; but we will put him out of our way altogether. We will shut him up in reservations; we will let civilization approach him on the right hand and on the left, in front and behind, but we will leave his reservations untouched by civilization. Or we will deport him back to Africa and leave him there in barbarism. What are these and kindred solutions of the Negro problem and the Indian problem but these two: Either we will make him serve us or else we will get rid of him that we may selfishly serve ourselves?

There is one other answer, and only one other. It is Christ's answer: "He that would be greatest among you shall be servant of all." The first answer makes the less tributary to the greater; the second destroys the less that the greater may take his place; the third takes the less by the hand and lifts him up and bears his burdens for him, and so fulfills the law of Christ. The first is slavery, the second is extermination, the third is redemption.

It is astonishing how slowly the radical principles of Jesus Christ have entered human society. "He that would be greatest among you shall be servant of all" was a very radical sentiment when Christ uttered it. Cæsar would have scoffed at the idea that the people were to be the masters and he the servant; but the President of the United States is the servant and the people are the masters. Gregory the Great would have scoffed at the idea that the Pope was the servant and the people were the masters; but every Protestant pastor recognizes the fact that he is the servant of the congregation to which he ministers. A hundred years ago, fifty years ago, yea, twenty-five years ago, the wealth of this country would have privately scoffed at the idea that the poor were the masters and the rich were the servants, and there are still a great many that scoff at it; but we are beginning to learn that it is a disgrace to be rich and not be a servant, that it is a shame to have wealth and not leave the country richer for having possessed and wisely and rightly used it. We are beginning to learn that the rich men are the servants of the many.

Now, this is an individual fact and I wish I had time to apply it politically and industrially. But it is also a race fact. It is not merely the strong man that is to serve the weak, the wise man that is to serve the ignorant, the rich man that is to serve the poor, but the wise, strong, rich race is to be the servant of the poorer and the more outcast and the more ignorant race. I said a few moments ago that the question is, what does a superior race owe to an inferior one? Perhaps, some of you think that was assuming too much. But it is certainly true that the Anglo-Saxon is the superior race and the African and the Indian are the inferior races. What they will be one hundred years from now we do not know, but to-day the Anglo-Saxon is the superior race. It would be very strange if, after a thousand years of education in the school of liberty and of Christ, it had not learned enough to be superior to the Negro race which was cradled in barbarism and suckled at the breast of slavery, or superior to the Indian race which is still in the school of paganism. What the Indian race may come to be after it has had all the redemptive influences of Anglo-Saxon civilization about it, what the African race may come to be after years have done for it what years have done for us, wiser men may prophesy. But to-day the Anglo-Saxon race, in wealth, in culture, in education, in moral fibre, in all the elements that go to make up greatness, is the superior race. I acknowledge—nay, I claim, what the old Southerner claimed, the superiority of the white to the colored race—but, because we are the superior race, and by just so much as we are superior, we owe to the inferior race redemption. The greater must serve the less.

What does this mean? It means, in the first place, just and equal rights before the law. It means the same kind of law for a black man, a red man, or a yellow man that there is for a white man. We do not object that a Negro should be arrested, tried, convicted and executed for crime; but we insist that he should be arrested under law, tried under law, convicted under law, and executed under law. We protest against the heathen barbarism which hangs a white man for crime after trial and burns a black man for crime without a trial. It is said that the Negro is lynched only for great crimes; but the greater the crime, the greater the offence of the lynching. The greater the crime of which a man is accused, the clearer the right to be confronted with witnesses, to be heard in his own defence, and to be tried by an impartial jury. The first thing we demand in our redemptive process is law working equal justice for black, for white, for red and for yellow, and for any other color that may appear.

In the second place, we demand for the inferior race equal industrial opportunities. Mark the words and weigh them: equal industrial opportunities. I do not say that the Indian or the African is competent for law or for medicine or for the ministry or for mechanics or for anything. I neither affirm nor deny his competence. What I do affirm is this: he has the right to an equal opportunity with every other man to show what his competence is. This seed will not sprout, you say. Of course it will not sprout if you leave it in a drawer. Put it in the same soil with that other seed; let the same sun shine upon it; let the same rain fall upon it, and then see whether it will sprout or not. What we demand for the colored man and for the Indian is that all doors shall be opened to him, all opportunities freely offered to him, the right and the liberty of industry given to him. We protest against a system which puts the wall of a reservation [illegible] the Indian, which denies him the fundamental rights of a free man, the right of locomotion, the right to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the highest market, the right to dispose of his goods wherever he can. We protest against a system which builds a wall around any portion of our American people and confines them as paupers and classes them with other paupers. If we were to take a dozen young men and women under twenty-one years of age out of Boston and shut them up in some great wilderness and were to say to them, "You shall not own the products of your industry, you shall not sell them in the markets of the world, you shall not have free access to the telegraph and the press, you shall not know what is going on in the world; but we will put a mission chapel and a mission school here and there, and if you do not work we will feed you," how long would it take for them to become tramps and paupers? We claim for the Indian and the African absolute and equal opportunities with the white man—the same door as widely open, the same avenues as free, the same wages for the same labor, the same chance to prove his manhood in industrial relations.

We claim for him equal political rights. That does not mean universal suffrage, but it does mean the same conditions of suffrage to the man of one color as to the man of another color. The question whether there shall be a property qualification or not is a very fair question. I do not believe in it but I am not going to discuss it. But if there is to be a property qualification it must be, under any just and equitable system of government, the same for one race as for another. The law which says to a thrifty Negro, "You shall not vote," and to a thriftless white man, "You may vote," is an unjust and inequitable law. The law which provides one kind of educational qualification for this man because his skin is tanned, and another for that man because his skin is not tanned, is an unjust and inequitable law. We stand for equal political rights in this American republic for all men—Indians, Negroes, white men.

We stand too for this: that all the redemptive influences which have been about us shall be about them; that they shall have the same educational and religious facilities and the same stimulus to intellectual and moral growth. Any scheme of education which proposes to furnish the Negro race only with manual and industrial education is a covert contrivance for putting him in serfdom; it tacitly says that the Negro is the inferior of the white race, and therefore we will educate him so as to serve us. The race must have an education which in its final outcome shall be complete for the race as a race, which shall include the curriculum of education and which shall open opportunities for the highest culture of which any individual of that race is capable. I repeat that I do not claim for the Negro that he should be a physician or a lawyer or a preacher. I only claim he shall have the opportunity to be one if he can. But what man is there who has ever heard Booker T. Washington and doubts the capacity of at least one Negro to take a front rank among American orators and statesmen?

Christ's redemptive method—the greater shall serve the less—means the same gospel for the black man and the red man as for the white man. It means the same great fundamental ministry. It means the same great message that God is a righteous God, that he demands righteousness of his children, that he demands nothing else, and that he will help them to righteousness and bring them into his image if they will accept his assisting grace. You may reach one race through the intellect, and another through the imagination, and a third through the reason, and a fourth through the observation, just as you reach different individuals; but in its finality, in its ultimate elements, the message is always the same—the message which declares that God has come down out of heaven and come into humanity, the message of incarnation, the message of atonement, the message of redeeming love, the message which this table of our Lord spread before us has for us here to-night.

I stop for one moment to speak with reverence to those who, in the last quarter of a century, under the auspices of this and of similar societies essaying similar work, have been carrying on this redeeming work in the South, following him who was despised and rejected of men, like their Master acquainted with grief, outcast as he was and for like reasons, entering into the sorrows of the race they have gone to redeem, bearing in their own persons the burden of the ignorance which they are attempting to enlighten, and of the vices which they are endeavoring to restrain. These workers in our Southern fields better illustrate and exemplify incarnation and atonement than any words of preacher have ever done. They show what it is for love to go into degradation that it may save, what it is for love to suffer, that by suffering it may redeem. If ever in human history there was a body of men and women who have felt the breath of the Master on them, and heard his word saying, "As the Father hath sent me into the world, even so send I you," it is these men and women, whose lives have been lives of long self-sacrifice, prosaic service, unhonored and unsung of men, but not unhonored nor unsung above.

What then we are to do for the colored people and for the Indians and for the Chinamen, and for whatever other race may in any wise lack the advantages which have come to us, is to carry to them redemptive influences, not merely in chapels and schools, but in just and equal laws, in industrial opportunities, in industrial liberty, in social order, in the whole instrumentality of our nation, and in the whole administration of our government. For, fellow citizens, what is a Christian nation? It is not made a Christian nation by writing a creed into its constitution, long or short, any more than a church is made a Christian church by putting a creed into its book and hiding it in its archives. That church is a Christian church which is filled with the spirit of Christ; and that nation is a Christian nation which is filled with the spirit of Christ The message of Christ comes to this nation as truly as it ever came to any individual—"He that would be greatest among you, let him be servant of all."

Fifty years ago we were pushing to its consummation a wicked war against Mexico. We had won by annexation one great empire for the slave territory. We were just winning by war another great territory which it was proposed to carve up and add in various states to the slave territory, and the great statesmen and the shrewd politicians of the United States were carrying out the scheme. Both the great political parties were bidding against each other for the vote of the solid South. Cotton was king and ruled press and politician and preacher. The great missionary societies were silent in the presence of slavery, and an overwhelming majority of the clergy were either silent or apologetic. The command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," was expunged from the American tables of the law, and the liberty bell at Philadelphia for more than twenty years had been ominously dumb, no longer able to ring out the revolutionary message, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." Then it was that a few men and women met in Albany, resolved to identify themselves, and in themselves, the law of God and the Gospel of his Son, with liberty and humanity, and to bear a witness which could not be misunderstood, against every form of selfishness, however enshrined and honored it might be. They were not alone. Henry Ward Beecher was just coming from his ten years of service in Indianapolis to make Plymouth pulpit an Abolition platform. Charles Sumner was giving in his address on "The Anti-Slavery Duties of the Whig Party," a presage of his future indictment of the "Barbarism of Slavery." William H. Seward was apparently throwing away his prospects of political preferment by challenging, in his defence of a crazy negro charged with murder, the public prejudice to which even the timid court proved itself subservient. Abraham Lincoln was preparing for his first unsuccessful essay in public life as a Representative in Washington, and was being prepared in God's school for his ever-memorable declaration, "The nation cannot remain half free and half slave." Look back. Who were the great men of 1846? Were they Tyler and Cass, and Douglass and Taney? Were they the leaders in the Pro-Slavery campaign, in the breaking down of the Wilmot Proviso, the abolition of the Missouri Compromise and the extension of the national territory for slave purposes? Were they even Clay and Webster and Fillmore—the men who were studying how to compromise the eternal and irreconcilable conflict between slavery and liberty, and contrive how the two might live in peaceful partnership in the same nation? Or were they Sumner and Seward, and Chase and Lincoln, and Whipple and our own Strieby? What makes a nation great is not acreage, not population, not miles of railroad, not gold mines, or silver mines, or coal mines, or oil fields, or wheat fields. What makes a nation great is hearing the word of God and answering it, accepting the mission of God and fulfilling it. The greatness of this nation is not that in a few short years we shall have a hundred million population; it is not that we are adding mile upon mile of railroad more rapidly than any other nation on the face of the globe; it is not that we build million-dollar coast fortifications that cease to be useful before they are completed; it is not even that we have a white-winged navy, unless it be sent only on missions of charity and good-will. It is doing righteousness, understanding the truth, maintaining a just social order, preserving and promoting individual liberty, comprehending and manifesting human brotherhood founded on righteousness, truth, order and liberty. It is faith in God and hope and love for man—God's child; that, and only that, can make a nation great. Let not the wise nation glory in its wisdom, neither let the mighty nation glory in its might. Let not the rich nation glory in its riches; but let the nation that glorieth glory in this, that it understands and knows God—that he is the Lord which exercises loving kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the gospel to the poor. It originated in sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work recognizes no distinction of race or color. Since Emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as Missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES, especially in the Mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to extend the blessings of the gospel and civilization to the INDIANS of North America.

In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a Life Member. (See Article III of the Constitution.)

LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I GIVE AND BEQUEATH the sum of————dollars to "The American Missionary Association," incorporated by act of the Legislature of the State of New York.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some States three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities the street and number). The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.), as his last will and testament in the presence of us, who at the request of said (A. B.), and in his presence, and in the presence of each other have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator; but this rule does not apply to bequests in the State of New York to this Association.

FIFTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-First Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in Plymouth Congregational Church, Minneapolis, Minn., October 19, 1897, at 3 o'clock P.M., and was called to order by the President, Merrill E. Gates.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. George E. Soper, of Minnesota. Rev. W. C. A. Wallar, of Minnesota, was elected Secretary, and Rev. D. R. Anderson, of Wisconsin, Assistant Secretary.

A nominating committee was elected consisting of Rev. George R. Merrill, of Minnesota, Rev. William Crawford, of Wisconsin, Rev. William M. Barrows, of Illinois, Mr. Harlan P. Roberts, of Minnesota, and Mr. J. Cotner, Jr., of Michigan.

Addresses of welcome were made by Rev. George R. Merrill, of Minnesota, and Dea. Charles M. Cushman, and these were responded to by President Gates.

A business committee appointed by the executive committee during the year as follows: Charles Woods, of Minneapolis, Minn.; P. F. Pettibone, of Chicago, Ill.; Rev. N. Boynton, of Detroit, Mich.; Rev. James Brand, of Oberlin, Ohio, and Rev. A. R. Thain, of Chicago, Ill., reported the order of services and program for this meeting, printed and in the hands of the Association. The report was received and accepted.

Treasurer H. W. Hubbard then read his report, with the certificate of the auditors, which was received and placed on file.

The report of the executive committee was read by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, and was referred to the appropriate committees.

The nominating committee reported the following Committee on Chinese Work, and they were elected: Rev. George Huntington, Chairman; Rev. Eli Corwin, Rev. J. F. Dudley, A. W. Benedict, Esq., Rev. C. D. Moore.

The concert of prayer was conducted by Rev. M. E. Strieby, participated in by Prof. F. B. Riggs, of Nebraska, Rev. O. Faduma, of North Carolina, Rev. F. S. Williams, of California, Rev. J. E. Roy, of Illinois, and Charles L. Mead, Esq., of New York, and the Association took a recess until 7.45 P.M.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening service began at 7.45 P.M. Music was rendered by the quartette of Plymouth Church.

Devotional exercises were led by Rev's George D. Black and David N. Beach, of Minneapolis.

The sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Cooper, of Connecticut, from the text John 3 : 7.

The nominating committee reported the following committees, which were elected: On Indian Work: Pres. E. D. Eaton, Chairman; Rev. J. H. Chandler, Rev. William M. Brooks, Edward T. Cushing, Esq., Ozro R. Newcomb, Esq. On Southern Educational Work: Rev. C. H. Patton, Chairman; Rev. Dr. Fullerton, Charles B. Holdredge, Esq., Rev. H. S. Richardson, Prof. J. J. Dow. On Mountain Work: Rev. Clarence Swift, Chairman; Rev. J. E. McConnell, Theodore Bird, Esq., Rev. S. E. Potter, Rev. Francis Frazier. On Southern Church Work: Rev. W. M. Barrows, Chairman; Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, Rev. H. A. Risser, George R. Lyman, Esq., C. F. Huntington, Esq.

The communion services followed, conducted by Rev. C. N. Fitch, of Colorado, and Rev. Edward S. Tead, of Massachusetts, after which adjournment was taken until 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

At 9 o'clock devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. E. S. Williams, of California.

The report and address on Chinese work were given by Rev. George Huntington, of Minnesota.

Pres. E. D. Eaton, of Wisconsin, read the report of the committee on Indian work, and his address was followed by an account of work done on the field given by Prof. Fred B. Riggs, of the Santee school.

Then followed addresses by Rev. Livingston L. Taylor, of Ohio, and Rev. A. R. Thain, of Chicago, after which adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock P.M.

WEDNESDAY P. M.

Report on Southern Educational Work and an address were given by Rev. C. H. Patton, of Minnesota.

Secretary A. F. Beard read a paper on "The Problem of the Residuum." Rev. E. G. Updyke, of Wisconsin, addressed the Association, as also did Rev. H. A. Bridgman, of Massachusetts.

Prayer was offered by Rev. William E. Griffis, of New York, and the Association adjourned until 7.45 P.M.

WEDNESDAY EVENING — PLYMOUTH CHURCH.

The evening session opened at 7.45, the quartette choir rendering an anthem.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. William M. Brooks, of Massachusetts, and S. J. Rogers, of Minnesota.

Ten-minute addresses were made by Rev. E. S. Williams, of California, speaking for the Chinese; Rev. Francis Frazier, of South Dakota, for the Indians; Rev. C. W. Green, of Kentucky, for the Highlanders; Rev. O. Faduma, of North Carolina, and W. E. B. DuBois, of Pennsylvania, both representing the Negro.

The closing addresses were delivered by Secretary G. H. Gutterson, of Boston, and Rev. J. E. Tuttle, of Massachusetts, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. M. E. Strieby.

FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Christian Endeavor Rally, in connection with the meeting of the Association, opened at 7.45 P.M. with a song service led by Mr. Walter N. Carroll, of Minnesota, who then called Secretary Ryder to preside.

After devotional exercises, led by Rev. George R. Merrill, addresses were made by Miss Dora B. Dodge, of Cheyenne Agency, S. D.; by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts; Rev. H. A. Bridgman, of Massachusetts, and Rev. N. Boynton, of Michigan, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. John A. Stemen, of Minnesota.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Devotional services were conducted by Secretary J. E. Roy, of Illinois. In the absence of President Gates, the chair was occupied by Rev. George R. Merrill, of Minnesota.

After prayer offered by Rev. J. E. McConnell, of Minnesota, report and an address on Mountain work were made by Rev. Clarence F. Swift, of Michigan.

A secretarial paper was read by Secretary C. J. Ryder on "The Yesterday, To-day and To-morrow in the Redemption of Races."

Southern Church work was presented in the report and address of Rev. Walter M. Barrows, of Illinois.

Secretary F. P. Woodbury read a secretarial paper on "The Feudal South."

The finance committee appointed at the last annual meeting reported through its chairman, Rodney Dennis, Esq., of Connecticut, and the report was accepted and filed.

After prayer, offered by Rev. Eli Corwin, the session adjourned.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON — WOMAN'S MEETING.

Dr. Merrill E. Gates presided.

Devotions were led by Mrs. S. V. S. Fisher, of Minnesota, and Miss C. N. Nichols, of Minnesota.

The annual report of the Woman's Bureau, was read by the Secretary, Miss D. E. Emerson, after which missionary addresses were made by Miss Ella Worden, of Nebraska, Mrs. E. S. Williams, of California, Miss Flora

M. Crane, of Tennessee, Miss Ida F. Hubbard, of Tennessee, and Mrs. E. C. Ellis, of Missouri.

The closing address was made by Miss Margaret J. Evans, of Minnesota.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING.

President Merrill E. Gates called the meeting to order, and prayer was offered by Rev. E. P. Ingersoll, of Minnesota.

The nominating committee reported as finance committee for the ensuing year, Rodney Dennis, of Connecticut, C. D. Wood, of New York, J. Howard Sweetser, of New York, William P. Crowell, of Massachusetts, H. L. Pratt, of New York.

It was voted to leave the matter of place and preacher for the next annual meeting to the executive committee.

The following officers were then elected by ballot for the ensuing year:

President, MERRILL E. GATES, Massachusetts.

Vice-Presidents.

REV. F. A. NOBLE, Ill. REV. ALEX. MCKENZIE, Mass.
REV. HENRY HOPKINS, Mo. REV. HENRY A. STIMSON, N. Y.
REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, Ohio.

Honorary Secretary and Editor.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, New York.

Corresponding Secretaries.

REV. A. F. BEARD, New York.
REV. F. P. WOODBURY, New York.
REV. C. J. RYDER, New York.

Recording Secretary.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, New York.

Treasurer.

H. W. HUBBARD, ESQ., New York.

Auditors.

D. C. TIEBOUT, CHARLES NEWTON SCHENCK.

Executive Committee.

REV. WILLIAM HAYES WARD, CHARLES P. PEIRCE, LUCIEN C. WARNER, REV. JAMES W. COOPER,
REV. LEWELLYN PRATT.

The following minute and resolution were presented by Rev. N. Boynton, of Michigan, and were adopted:

Since the feeling is manifestly strengthening in the Congregational constituency that after a reasonable term of service members of executive boards should be ineligible for re-election for one year,

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to take into consideration this matter as it is related to the interests of the American Missionary Association, and to report on the same with recommendation next year.

The committee called for above was duly appointed as follows: Rev. E. A. Dunning, of Massachusetts, Rev. J. H. Twichell, of Connecticut, Rev. A. H. Bradford, of New Jersey, Rev. L. L. Taylor, of Ohio, George R. Lyman, Esq., of Minnesota.

The minutes of all sessions having been read, were approved, and the secretary was authorized to complete them.

Adjourned.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The session opened with music by members of the choir of Plymouth Church, who also furnished other numbers during the evening.

Scripture was read and prayer offered by Rev. E. G. Updyke, of Wisconsin.

The addresses of the evening were delivered by Rev. William E. Griffis, of New York, and President Merrill E. Gates.

Resolutions of thanks were offered to all who had aided in the success of the meeting, and words of farewell were given by Rev. D. N. Beach and Rev. George D. Black, both of Minneapolis.

Adjourned.

WILLIAM C. A. WALLAR, Secretary.

FIFTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1897.

GENERAL SURVEY.

This first year of our new half century has not been as doubtful and critical as was the first year of the half century which we celebrated in Boston last October. Then there was a large vision of faith and little of sight. Now there are many things which we see and in which there is the joy of gratitude to God. Nevertheless the year has been one of great anxiety.

With an extended system of schools and churches looking to us for aid and sympathy, most of them feeling their need the more because the times have been hard, it has been continuously painful to turn deaf ears to urgent appeals which could not be answered.

To see the work of years brought to a standstill, its momentum lost and its future embarrassed, and to share the intense sorrow of those who are thus losing the only chances of life for themselves and for their children, has multiplied our care. Yet while this burden has been upon us, we have been cheered by the reports from our various fields of exceptional hopefulness and satisfaction.

The condition of the colored people is one of steady advancement. There should be no doubt as to this.

At the risk of the charge of repetition we cannot do other than call to mind that only one generation has passed since the race began with their first opportunity in life, and since we began our work with them.

The uplifting of four millions from what they were to the attainments and hopes of to-day is abundant reward for the prayers and self-denials of these thirty swift years. That four millions of people can now read their Bibles for themselves is a fact the significance of which cannot be put in words. Tens of thousands are now living in their own comfortable homes. Through enlightenment of mind and obedience of the heart to the truth many of the temporal blessings of life have been secured. The mere material values created by these, who have been quickened and trained in our schools, would be a large percentage upon the expenditures made for the education of this people as a pure philanthropic result. For a people who have emerged from a condition where they were not allowed to care for themselves, where their daily bread was weighed out to them, where the cabin which was one's shelter to-day became the abode of someone else to-morrow, where, indeed, men and women did not own their own persons, the result is evidence that there is nothing more immediately practical than the development of the power to think clearly, accurately, largely, continuously and righteously and to follow their thinking to its issues. This is the surest path to prosperity. The improved material condition of the colored people who have been in our schools is a striking testimony to the utilitarian influence of our schools. Their moral condition is a greater witnessing.

It is of striking significance that the Secretary of the International Sunday School Association in the South says, that in a canvass personally made by him in sixty counties of Georgia in his official relation he had found that more than 70 per cent. of the teachers and preachers and leaders in reputable standing among the colored people of these counties had been educated directly by the American Missionary Association or by those who were educated in our schools. He found these with comfortable homes and with a legitimate share of material welfare pressing forward for larger attainment. Teaching a people how to work out its own salvation in this way is certainly the surest contribution that can be made to the future of the race. To prepare the race to save the race is the speediest and indeed the only solution of our great problem.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

The elementary instruction inaugurated in the public school system of the Southern States in most villages and in all the larger towns and cities, but also in many rural places, is invariably given by colored teachers who are almost entirely secured from the institutions conducted by missionary societies for the education and training of teachers. We thus are reaching, in the most effective way possible to us, many hundreds of elementary schools every year among the million and a quarter of children and youth now in the colored schools. We are caring for many who otherwise would not receive this elementary instruction.

GRADED AND NORMAL SCHOOLS.

There are 44 of these. Each one has its own characteristics growing out of localities and environments. A single feature of a few that are typical may give a composite picture of all.

In Cappahosic—on the York River—Virginia, e. g. we have a school Agricultural, Mechanical and Academic, wholly directed and taught by colored teachers. This school was taken up by the Association after the colored people of Cappahosic had expended their self-denying but insufficient energies upon it. It is one of many schools now under the care of the Association where the problem of entrusting schools of a higher grade entirely to colored administrators and instructors is in the process of solution. We are frequently solicited thus to come to the rescue of those who either have planned beyond their ability to sustain, or who for other reasons have found it more difficult to continue than it was to begin.

A very prosperous school under the care of colored principal and teachers is Knox Institute in Athens, Georgia. In addition to the ordinary grades it has advanced to normal grades and has added manual instruction for both sexes. From its own printing offices it sends forth its monthly paper and its own catalogues.

A large school wholly directed by graduates of our own higher institutions is located at Albany, Georgia. It has likewise received repeated and emphatic endorsements from the Southern school boards of the county, both for the quality of its work and the moral and Christian influence which it exerts.

Still another under the care of colored graduates of our chartered institutions is the important Normal, Industrial and Agricultural School of Enfield, North Carolina. Standing upon a rich and beautiful plantation of more than a thousand acres of land, with several buildings upon it, it is a gift of Mrs. Joseph K. Brick in memory of her husband. This institution, though now but beginning its second year, has already attracted the attention of the people in this section of North Carolina, and in the ability of its administration in the various departments of its work, Academic, Industrial and Agricultural, has won the encomiums of many Southern people. This is a new source of Christian power for a wide extent of country among a class chiefly rural, and has already changed the opinions of many of our Southern Anglo-Saxon friends who had not yet recognized the capacity of the negro after he has taken on a generous education and has had opportunity to prove his powers.

These must suffice in the way of suggestion as to higher grades of schools which are now being directed by the children of former slaves. There are above a score of schools, of greater and less degree, now under the care of the Association which are wholly administered by colored teachers, while in our higher institutions several professors ably represent in race the people whom they are teaching with high attainment.

Then again we have a class of schools with teachers of our own race, like Lincoln School at All Healing, N. C., to the value of which President Atkins of the Slater Industrial Institute in North Carolina thus testifies: "I wish to bear witness to the excellent work done there. There is not within my knowledge an educational effort showing greater results for the means in hand. Out of a wide acquaintance with our institutions of learning I have never seen greater consecration nor more heroic self-sacrifice. The Bible and the Holy Spirit are ever-present, powerful aids in Lincoln Academy. Parents are almost assured that their children will return from this school Christians. Withal a vigorous course of study is vigorously pursued."

This witnessing to Lincoln Academy on the part of an experienced educator could be repeated forty times from those who have seen other centres of education and Christian influence in our work in other states. The story of one is substantially the story of all. It is gratifying to us that the faithful and able instruction given, the thoroughness and quality of which take Northern visitors by surprise, is bringing to us more frequent and often very generous recognition from observant educators and thoughtful people of the South.

As a single illustration. The Superintendent of Education in Shelby County, Tennessee writes of Le Moyne Institute in Memphis: "I found in my appointments of teachers, that the great majority of those qualified to teach were graduates of Le Moyne. This institution now provides our entire county with the great bulk of its teachers and is a feeder for our public school system. Not only are the students given the best book knowledge necessary for teaching but they are given the moral training without which they are unfit to be teachers. This school also is justly established as foremost in training workers industrially as well as teachers."

In our last General Survey we called to notice the single case of hostility to our school work of which we know, viz.: at Orange Park, Florida. With satisfaction we can now announce that this school is freed at last from all hindrances and threats of opposition. The better sentiment of Florida has been so constantly gaining in strength that the former "Sheats Law" no longer represents the present intelligence and conscience of the State.

We rejoice that the Congregational Churches of the United States which instructed us to make this issue in the courts have this single justification of their faith in upholding human rights. The School which has been greatly injured by the attacks upon it in respect to its numbers must now begin anew to recover its former strength and usefulnesss. It opens this new year under happiest auspices.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS.

Our Higher Schools: Fisk University at Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College at Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.; Straight University, New Orleans, La.; and Tillotson College, at Austin, Texas, each report a year of exceptional progress. All of them are economically administered and there are none of them which do not need the larger benevolence of the Christian public for the sake of the long look forward in the sound learning and Christian power of the race. They plead for larger and better appliances and endowments for their necessary work. Tougaloo and Talladega are suffering for want of college chapels which could also be used as churches. These splendid institutions are living upon the lowest margin of expenditure and not one of them that does not deserve to be heard with generous response in the appeal for help. Beginning with the kindergarten and continuing through the primary and grammar and normal grades, the college preparatory, the college, the training classes for preachers, the theological classes with manual, industrial and agricultural schools, their work in importance cannot be unduly magnified. They are carrying out and keeping abreast with the theory of education which has made our country what it is in institutions and character. Our fathers who cherished sound learning and sound thinking, knew that in these were the secrets of material progress and prosperity. Mental and moral welfare are good foundations. It were a sad day for an undeveloped people when they should be denied intellectual development to be trained on a single line. These higher institutions are necessary to the uplifting of the race, and we urge their necessities upon our large minded people who have themselves inherited the blessings of generous instruction.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

We find it necessary to repeat our testimony as to the extent and value of our Industrial instruction. It is not sufficiently realized yet to what degree of thoroughness and attainment our schools are carrying on this part of education. Hand in hand with mental and moral culture the industries receive constant honor. Our first industrial teaching began in 1867 and has been since introduced in greater or less degree in every school. The most complete building in the county, in the way of a barn costing several thousand dollars from the legacy of Mr. Erwin of New Britain, was constructed this year at Talladega by the students of the college. The Southern people are beginning to realize somewhat of the accomplishment along these lines of self-help and independence. A leading newspaper in Georgia uses the following words in a late issue:

"Negroes are rapidly filling the trades. As carpenters, bricklayers, plasterers, blacksmiths, wheelwrights, they are growing more plentiful, and making it more and more difficult for white men to prosper in those fields of labor." It says: "A glance at the white schools and the negro schools of the South will show that the negro schools are teaching their pupils more of the practical needs of life, and fitting them to earn a livelihood better than the white schools are. For every white technological school the negroes have half a dozen, with technological and industrial features. Every year young men are being turned out of the negro schools in the South who have been taught carpentry, shoemaking, printing, the general use of tools, scientific farming, in addition to the usual academic courses, and young women who have been taught cooking, washing, sewing, dressmaking, nursing and housekeeping. When a young negro man or woman leaves any one of more than a dozen schools in the South, he or she is equipped for earning a livelihood, and for advancing the standard of the race." We add that there are many more than a dozen schools of which this last sentence is true. We are sending out many such well-equipped persons every year from many schools.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.*

Number of Mountain Schools	18
Enrollment	2,195

The principle of political economy that the demand creates the supply, is not operative in the educational work among our American Highlanders. The demand must be created by a partial supply. A mountain man once remarked, "We'uns got on first rate here in the mountings before you'uns came with your screechin' old engines and your schools." The older generation of American Highlanders was satisfied with the conditions in which they were born and in which their ancestors had lived. The largest value of the mountain schools and academies planted by the American Missionary Association at different strategic points, is in the creation of a desire for education on the part of the younger generation. Many of these will never reach any one of these academies. The desire for better things, however, stirred in the heart of a Highland lad or lass, stimulates study at the fireside of the cabin and to the largest improvement of the poor opportunities furnished for a few months by the free school in his neighborhood. Who knows how many a boy of such stuff as Abraham Lincoln, has been encouraged to pursue the hard and thorny path of self-education in this mountain region, the birthplace of our martyred President, through the influence of the schools and teachers sent down by the American Missionary Association. The effect of the educational work of the American Missionary Association in creating a desire for better education and larger intellectual growth, can not be computed in statistics.

Another value which can not be measured by statistics is the influence of these academies through the mountain teachers who are trained in them and the higher standards adopted in general educational work of the public schools. This is twofold in its effect. It brings about in the first place, improved methods of instruction; and in the second place, an increase of the length of the school year. The free school system, that did so much for New England and the North, has never had a place in any proper sense in the mountains. The school year is only from three to five months at the longest. The making of the "craps" keeps the mountain boy and girl afield much of the time. The American Missionary Association schools, planted in various neighborhoods, in their eight or nine months of the school year and in their careful and exact methods of instruction and enforced attendance, are an educational revelation both to Highland school boards and pupils.

Turning to the statistics of the educational work among our American Highlanders for the past year the following facts stand out prominently. All the schools have pursued their work with exceptional success. The enrollment of the schools in every case has been limited only by the capacity of the school buildings and the possibilities of the teaching force. Many mountain schools have desired and really demanded an increase in the number of teachers. This has been impossible on account of our restricted treasury, and pupils have been discouraged from coming, or sent away. Pathetic letters have reached superintendents and teachers begging for admission, which have been very reluctantly declined. The crowded condition of the schools not only opens an opportunity but makes absolutely essential, practised teaching of those in the normal grade. This is an advantage to those who are fitting themselves to teach, although such conditions are not the best for the training of young teachers.

At Big Creek Gap, Tenn., the enrollment last year was 198 pupils. There were only two teachers supported from the American Missionary Association treasury for the instruction of this large number of pupils. Many of the pupils were in the normal grade fitting themselves for teachers. This school alone sent out last year twenty young teachers, well furnished, for the free school of the mountain region. We think with one exception they were all Christian young men and women.

At Grand View, Tenn., a disastrous fire destroyed the Boys' Dormitory early in the season. This calamity, however, has not affected the enrollment of the school. Temporary arrangements were made for the accommodation of pupils and the institution has been crowded through the year.

At Pleasant Hill, Tenn., the academy has been enlarged by the erection of two cottages to be used for dormitory purposes. These cottages were built by the labor of the boys without expense to the Association only so far as tuition was paid by students' work. This is certainly a practical evidence of the value of the industrial training that all our constituency can appreciate.

Skyland Institute, Blowing Rock, N. C., has suffered sad bereavement in the death of Miss Agnes Ruth Mitchell, who had for years been a most faithful teacher and consecrated Christian worker. She was buried on the mountain side in the midst of the people for whom she gave her life. The death of one so young and prominent is exceedingly sad, but her life will live in an increasing influence among the Highlanders who knew her only to respect and love her.

In mentioning certain mountain schools the distinction seems almost invidious. Each of the institutions in this region has some feature of especial interest worthy of mention. Together they form an educational and religious force, increasing as the years pass, which is effecting for the uplifting of these American Highlanders large and important results. The enlargement of the present academies and institutes is imperatively demanded and the opportunities for planting other schools of a similar kind is almost unlimited. One of the American Missionary Association schools, established only a few years ago, reached a constituency of a thousand children of school age, and was the only school within a radius of twenty-five miles. These children were entirely unprovided with educational advantages excepting through this one institution. This condition is not exceptional, however. There are hundreds of strategic points to be occupied by such institutions in this vast region, and each would be a center of far-reaching Christian influence where no such influence exists to-day. The lack of funds is the only limit to the vast development of our Christian educational work among our American Highlanders.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of Churches	224
Ministers and Missionaries	133
Number of Church Members	11,317
Added during the year	1,382
Added by profession of faith	1,016
Scholars in Church, Mission and Sunday School	16,955

Our Church work through the year has been maintained in its various departments. We have to report the organization of 18 new churches, 12 of which are colored, 4 in the Southern Mountains and 2 in the Indian Field. The increased effort in our general church work which was planned by the Executive Committee, five years ago, with the appointment of Rev. George W. Moore, a graduate of Fisk University general missionary, has been carried forward so far as possible under the restrictions of necessary pecuniary retrenchment. In a review of the decade its advance is very manifest. During the last five years 121 new churches have been added, of which 81 are colored churches, 35 are churches in the mountains and 5 are in the Indian fields.

These churches have come into being independently of any direction or suggestion from the Association. It is manifest that there is a strong growing tendency throughout our Southern fields towards having churches which are independent of any external ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and are left free to manage their own affairs in their own way, while they maintain fraternal fellowship with one another. In some cases the people can almost entirely sustain their own work. The influence of our schools, whose former students are scattered by thousands through all the South, has been increasingly strong to awaken a sense of the value of our free church polity and an impatience with centrally organized forms of church government which sometimes have been considered oppressive. As education progresses large numbers of colored people in the rural regions are ready to break away from old church forms, which tolerate ignorance and immorality, and to associate in church organizations which stand for moral purity and personal freedom. Aside from the lack of means for the slight aid which would be necessary, there is no reason why the Congregational fellowship of our present American Missionary Association should not be increased by hundreds within the next few years.

The year now past has been one of successful effort on the part of our missionaries, not only in carrying on their own church work but in the establishment of missions in their neighborhood. Several of our ministers have had from three to seven regular preaching appointments, ranging from five to forty miles apart. More than ever before, we have been compelled to conjoin under one minister churches which formerly had independent pastors. Our narrowing means and the inability of the Association to furnish adequate aid has enforced this method.

Many of the churches have reported deep spiritual interest during the year, and many blessed revivals have taken place, although there has been no organized effort by the employment of evangelists to assist the pastor. The members received on confession during the year are 1,016.

Many churches have reported special seasons of religious interest, which have resulted in hopeful conversions.

The Christian Endeavor Societies of the churches have been most efficient aids in conduct of Church and Sunday-School work and their number has increased during the year. Many of these churches have Sunday schools in outlying districts in addition to the home schools which are carried on by the members of the church under the direction of the pastors. Quite a number of the poorer churches have been engaged in the erection of church buildings at the expense of great effort and self-denial on the part of members who feel the absolute necessity of providing the church with a building which shall be the home and centre of Christian service and labor.

The experiences of the past year taken in connection with the additions of churches during the last ten years, are an encouragement for the future. It is evident that our Congregational principles are making their way into the minds of great numbers of the colored people and that the future success of our work in this direction is assured by its rapid increase in the past, and its present outlook of promises.

MOUNTAIN CHURCHES. *

Number of Mountain Churches	55
Membership	1,619

Our mountain churches are naturally divided into two quite distinct classes. First, those in purely rural communities; and secondly, those in settlements that have gathered into large villages or towns during the past few years. The latter class have been seriously affected by the radical changes which have taken place in the mountain regions within these years.

The stringency of the times has especially affected many of these mountain communities. Mining interests developed in recent years have built up towns in many sections. As the hard times reached these communities many of them have disintegrated. This affects our church work in two directions.

In the first place, it scatters the membership of the churches to their rural communities. They are not gathered in centers of population as they were when the mines were generally in operation.

In the second place, the membership have become so impoverished that they cannot do so much as they would otherwise do in the support of their own Christian work. In cases in which these community changes have been radical and promise to be permanent, we have stricken the churches from our lists. This does not mean that these people do not demand help nor that the work carried on at these former centers of Christian influence was not important. It means simply that the population has changed and a large portion of it returned to the original rural conditions in which the Mountaineers have been for many years. Many of these towns were developed far beyond their possibilities. Not long ago hunters were seen in the fields outside one of these mushroom towns hunting 'possum by electric light! The plant had been established and the line run out to reach the outlying regions, all of which were staked off in city lots.

Indeed, almost every difficulty that presents itself in the new communities of the West presses upon us more emphatically in the Mountain field.

These Mountaineers have felt the inspiration of a new life even through these movements that have failed. It predicates greater hopefulness for the church work in the future.

Four new churches have been added in the Mountain Field during the year. Each church has been organized with very great care. Many more might have been added to the list but counsel has been given by superintendents knowing the work, that delay will do no harm. Congregational methods are new to these Mountaineers, but are thoroughly appreciated when understood. Several Congregational councils have been held for the recognition of these new churches or the ordination and installation of pastors. Young men from our Northern seminaries and pulpits, of splendid quality, have been especially attracted to this Mountain field during the past few years. They form a strong body for the leadership of the people. Young men of mountain birth educated in American Missionary Association schools in preparatory course have gone to Oberlin and other Northern colleges to complete their education. These also furnish excellent leadership for their own Highland people.

One prominent characteristic in the development of the church work in the mountains is the rapid increase of the sense of responsibility for self-support. But self-direction and self-support must go together in the development of this church work. It is constantly the effort of the American Missionary Association to encourage this self-direction. In the call of pastors the churches are more and more taking the initial responsibility. They are constantly increasing also in the amount which they contribute to the support of their pastor. They recognize their responsibility for the care of their buildings and local expenses. This year has marked genuine progress in this direction. The church at Deer Lodge, Tenn., has largely increased the capacity of its churchhouse by the addition of two rooms for Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor purposes. This is entirely without expense to the Association. At Mill Creek, Tenn., there has been also improvement of the property without calling upon the treasury for assistance. The church at Jellico, Tenn., has greatly improved their church house and have assumed a larger responsibility for self-support. At Corbin, Ky., a similar increase of self-support has been assumed. In the straightened financial condition of the country this willingness on the part of our brethren in the mountains to assume a larger responsibility for their own support and to increase their contributions to outside benevolence is certainly worthy of appreciative mention.

Two local Congregational Associations among our mountain churches have been organized during the past few years and maintain a vigorous existence. They bear the name of the Cumberland Plateau Association of Tennessee and the Cumberland Valley Association of Kentucky. Their annual meetings are well attended and, in the character of the men representing the churches and the papers and discussions maintained, compare well with similar bodies in the rural regions of the North. Congregationalism especially appeals to these liberty-loving Mountaineers and promises much for the spread of intelligent Christianity throughout these Highlands.

INDIAN FIELDS AND WORK.

Number of Churches	17

Number of Schools	23
Number of Pupils	592
Missionary Outstations	26
Missionaries and Teachers (White 49, Indian 37)	86

There are four general divisions of the Indian department of missionary work; that in Nebraska and the Dakotas, that in Montana, that in Washington and that in Alaska.

The three central schools for the training of Indian pupils and especially native Christian missionaries are situated in the first of these fields. Santee Normal Training School now averages about one hundred pupils a year. It includes various forms of industrial training. In the higher classes special emphasis is given to the training of missionaries in Bible study and methods of Christian work, that young Indian men and women may be fitted for this active Christian service. A large percentage of the Indian missionaries in the outstations have been trained at Santee. The government school building, formerly situated at Santee, has been burned and the government has no school among the Santee Sioux except a small day school. Our school there occupies a strategic position and is absolutely essential for the training of missionaries in this field. As our constituency are well aware, the number of pupils there has been greatly reduced in the past few years through the lack of funds sufficient to carry on the work.

Another school in this division of the Indian field is situated at Oahe S. D., about 175 miles northwest from Santee. The number of pupils in this school this year has been 44. This school reaches especially the Cheyenne River Reservation, although it does not stand on the territory of that reservation by the present allotments. This school is a feeding school for Santee and also has a course of training for those who are old enough to prepare themselves for missionary work. The outstations scattered throughout this reservation are largely dependent upon the Oahe school for their strength and reinforcement. The superintendent and teachers at Oahe make frequent missionary tours through these outstations and constitute a large factor in this work.

Fort Berthold, N. D., reaches three tribes, the Mandan, Ree and Gros Ventres. A school was sustained by the government at Fort Stevenson for some years but is now discontinued. Fort Berthold enrolled 46 pupils last year. The Christian work among these tribes is absolutely dependent upon this school.

The Crow Mission, situated at Fort Custer, Montana, represents a very important work. The only Protestant mission among them is that sustained by the American Missionary Association. Our missionary there has recently been visiting the former students of our own and other schools who have settled on their reservations. His report was exceedingly encouraging. He found these young men and women almost uniformly engaged in farming or herding or other useful occupation. Their homes were decent and many of them Christian homes. His report furnishes abundant evidence that the statement so often made that the Indian boys and girls slump back into the immoralities of paganism when they return to the prairie is absolutely false so far as the Crow people are concerned.

At Skokomish Mission in Washington, our missionary has been engaged in addition to his own work, in visiting other Indian stations. In one missionary journey of this kind he found a community among whom there had never before been a Christian minister. The people were anxious to organize some work under our missionary's direction. His report indicated the desirability of such work and the hopefulness of the people. He could not engage in carrying on this work, however, because of the lack of funds in the treasury of the American Missionary Association.

INDIAN CHURCH WORK.

The church work among the Indians has been unusually encouraging during the past year. Two new churches are added to our list this year, making the total number of churches seventeen. These churches are mostly served by native pastors who go out from Santee and other Christian institutions. Four white general missionaries occupy central positions from which they superintend the work of the native pastors in the outstations. This out-station work is of supreme importance. Every Christian Indian home in which a native pastor and his wife are living, exemplifies the Christian truth in their lives and is an oject lesson to their people. No people can be permanently uplifted by foreign missionaries. It is only as a native Christian leadership is trained up that abiding results are obtained. These native pastors and their wives in these scattered outstations must be the most important factors in the Christian solution of the Indian problem.

This outstation work, however, pivots largely upon our three central schools. These schools are planted each in a separate region and furnish the best forces for the outlying mission work. They also offer opportunity for reaching government schools and stations through the pupils.

In closing, a single reference to the statistics may not be out of place. We note with especial satisfaction the large ingathering of Sunday-School pupils during the year, amounting to 1,145. This means the Christian instruction of a large number of Indian children who come from their tepees and cabins to our Sunday-schools.

Another significant fact is the large amount contributed by these Indian churches for benevolent purposes. They gave $1,612 to missionary work outside of their own support, and $814 to their own church expenses. This certainly is a remarkable showing for a little group of seventeen churches. If equalled by the white Christians in our churches the country through, no society would be in debt, and the coming of the Redeemer's Kingdom would not halt for lack of consecrated funds.

ALASKA.

The report of our missionaries in Alaska, written under date July 29, 1897, has reached us. They present a very hopeful picture of the work among the Eskimos. The year has been one of marked prosperity to the people among whom our missionaries labor. Walrus fishing, upon which they largely depend, has been much more successful and profitable than usual. This means to the Eskimo, skins, oil and ivory for barter and the general improvement of his condition. In the report the following interesting paragraph illustrates the strength and stability of the Christian purpose of these people, who have so recently become acquainted with the gospel privileges and light. "Three of the best days for walrus hunting happened to be three Sundays in June. Some of the canoes got as many as seven big walruses on one Sunday. Our boys did not seem worried because they could not hunt on Sunday." We are glad that the week-day fishing of our Christian men was successful and that the missionary reports "five walruses, two half grown ones and two calves, besides a quantity of whale skin as the result of their efforts."

Our missionaries have built a log house which has proved to be very comfortable. Another cottage has been erected for the herders of the reindeer who are occasionally stopping over for a night. The reindeer herd has increased and proved all that was expected of it. It furnishes food through milk and carcasses, skins for clothing, bones and horn for needles and useful utensils of various kinds. The reindeer also furnishes the best means of transportation possible, going very rapidly with the sledges across this snow-covered region. This mission in Cape Prince of Wales is entirely supported by special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. It was closed for a year, but Mr. and Mrs. Lopp begged to return and were ready to go on the doubtful support of these voluntary contributions. They have entered the field with great heroism and sacrifice, and certainly merit the support of all Christian people in their work. This mission occupies the most western portion of our continent over which the stars and stripes float and will some time be the basis of large missionary operations across the straits in upper Siberia.

CHINESE MISSIONS.

Schools, including one in Salt Lake City	20
Teachers, including 8 Chinese	32
Pupils	1,084
Number who give evidence of conversion	164
Professing faith during the year	60

The "Chinese Missionary Society" was organized in 1866. One cannot read the letters and reports which come from it without recognizing the gracious providence of God in overruling for the furtherance of the Gospel what many thought was a national misfortune.

To see the "Central Mission House," in Portsmouth Square, San Francisco, with its diligent students who have been converted from Paganism to Christianity preparing sermons to preach to their Pagan brethren, to share their devotions when in large numbers they gather for their meetings of prayer, to study their efficient organizations for Christian work, is an experience not to be forgotten, and is to realize to some degree the significance of this wonderful mission.

These Chinese brethren, since the organization of their Chinese society, have themselves contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With a property worth $4,000, they are carrying on their missionary work at Canton. With a property in Hong Kong valued at nearly $10,000, they are engaged likewise from this center in their native land. They have organized a prosperous and aggressive church work from their chapel in the city of Ci Nung. During the year fifteen adults were received into the membership of this church at Ci Nung. We are informed that through Chinese converted in this country who have returned to China the Gospel has been earnestly taken to more than 300,000 people in China. Besides sustaining their three missions, they have helped the American Board in China to start a number of chapels and free schools, and have either wholly or almost wholly supported them. The last one started is the Lee Keow Mission, for which they have lately raised and sent to China ninety dollars. "In Secretary Baer's report at the great convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, held in San Francisco, the third Christian Endeavor Society in our whole country contributing to Foreign Missions was the Congregational Chinese Endeavor Society of San Francisco. If all the funds could have been counted from these not-in-due-form members of Young People's Christian Endeavor, this society of hard-working and humble Chinese laborers would have ranked second in the world in this respect."

The consecration of the members of this Chinese Mission does not confine itself to the propagation of their faith in China. They are actively engaged in Christian work in this country, and are most generous supporters of their missions here. They are now doing much toward purchasing their new mission house in San Francisco.

During this year the second ordination of a Chinese brother to the Christian ministry has marked the steady development of the mission. On the 16th of January last, the Rev. Joe Jet, thus ordained, sailed for his native land as the Field Superintendent of the Congregational Church Missionary Society. The Moderator of the ordaining council writes: "Joe Jet and Jee Gam, as they stood together in this epoch-making service, giving and receiving the hand of ministerial fellowship, were living illustrations of the aim of Christian missions. Both were born in the darkness of Christian superstition, and one could want no more complete justification of our California Chinese Mission than the picture of these two men standing in the pulpit of Bethany Church."

Our Chinese work in Salt Lake City has been marked with the same spirit of devotion, and has in it like elements of hopefulness. During the last two years nine who have been taught here have returned to China, and we have reason to believe that these also who have carried with them the teachings of the Gospel will not fail to pass it on to their benighted countrymen. It is a sorrow to us that our Chinese Mission work has with our other work been subjected to severe retrenchments during these trying years.

In all this work under review and in every phase and feature of it, the supreme fruition is in the education and development of the spiritual nature. For this reason in all of our schools for intellectual development the Bible is a daily text book, and the hopeful conversions and evidences of Christain growth among those to whom we are sent are our highest and most complete rewards. Our Theological schools and seminaries, as they send out well prepared ministers to replace the untaught of old time and to carry our church work onward and forward, are but developing this purpose of spiritual upbuilding. Our highest conception of this work is its missionary character.

FINANCIAL.

There have been received for the year ending September 30th, from donations (including Jubilee Shares), $184,250.79; from estates, $82,169.39; from income, $14,877.18; from tuition, $40,432.68; from Slater Fund paid to institutions, $7,500, and from sale of property, $210; total, $329,440.04. The payments have been $317,812.56, leaving a credit balance on the year of $11,627.48. The debt September 30, 1896, was $66,572.51. The present debt is $54,945.03.

The Jubilee rally last October quickened enthusiasm and deepened the interest in this missionary work. The receipts of the first year of the second half century of the Association represent sacrifice and devotion characteristic of the early years of its history. The hearty support of the churches during these recent years of financial stringency is worthy of special mention. The donations for the four years previous to the first year of financial depression (1893) averaged $183,713.40. The donations for 1892-93 were $179,303.46, only about $4,400 less than the average for the previous four years. The donations for the four years just passed averaged $179,386.06, about the same as the year of the panic, and the donations for the year just closed are $184,250.79, or about $500 more than the average per year for the four prosperous years preceding the panic. To have maintained this average during these depressing years is very significant and inspiring, and a convincing proof of the devotion and sacrifice of the church for this missionary work.

During the four very prosperous years immediately preceding the financial panic several very large bequests were collected. The receipts from legacies for this period averaged $145,634.28 per year. The legacies collected for 1892–93, the year of the panic, were $76,487.90 or about $70,000 less than the average per year for the previous four years. The financial stringency of this and the subsequent years has so seriously affected market values, that securities belonging to estates have been held by executors for a better price, or sold at very great sacrifice. The legacies for the four years just passed averaged $86,343.30, or about $60,000 a year less than for the four years previous to the year 1892–93, or a decrease in four years of about $240,000. This very sudden and severe decrease in receipts from legacies could not at once be met by a like reduction in the expenditures of the Association without bringing disaster and ruin to the missionary work which had been nurtured and built up with so much care, and which gave such encouraging promise for the future. Your committee, therefore, has pursued a conservative policy in considering the question of the retrenchment and relief from a burdensome debt. Each year they have given careful and protracted attention to the appropriations for the coming year, and they have had the hearty cooperation of the executive officers in their effort to bring the expenditures within the available receipts of the year. The schedule of appropriations for the new year has been reduced over $43,000 because of the debt. Your committee is glad to report that the executive officers have each donated one month's salary for the new year, in addition to their gifts through churches and other channels; also that the Honorary Secretary, has made a very liberal donation on his salary. We earnestly hope that during the coming year the debt of $54,945.03 will be extinguished and the work maintained as planned. The better times, so earnestly desired, have been delayed in their coming, but more prosperous days seem now at hand. The devotion of God's people in these depressing years gives courage and hope for larger gifts and deeper interest in this missionary work. The endowment funds of the Association have been increased this year by a gift of $50 from Mary R. Bishop, Boston, Mass., and $225 from the estate of Comfort Ward, a colored man of Wilmington, N. C. We hope these amounts are the beginning of increased gifts and a more permanent income for this missionary work.

DANIEL HAND FUND.

There have been collected as income from the Daniel Hand Fund during the year, $71,656.04, which with the balance at the beginning of the year of $4,182.23 makes a total of $75,838.27. There have been expended to Sept. 30th, $63,606.90, leaving a balance in hand and appropriated $12,231.37. There has also been received the sum of $500, as a part of the Daniel Hand Endowment Fund. This fund, with the income, is separate and distinct from the other funds of the Association.

Forty-one schools have been aided wholly or in part from the Hand income this year, and this is in addition to the number of schools sustained by the churches. Many hundreds of pupils have received instruction and aid who otherwise would have been deprived of an education. This munificent gift is accomplishing the purpose so wisely planned by Daniel Hand for the education of the colored people in the Southern states.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

This department has continued helpful to the treasury of the Association. Generous aid has been given in the Jubilee effort. The receipts through Women's Missionary Societies for the year have been $28,753.61.

There has been encouraging evidence of interest in the entire work of the Association. The Women's Societies have been in communication through our system of missionary letter-writing with twenty-four of our mission schools, where they have sustained forty-nine missionary teachers—twenty-four for the colored people, twelve in the mountain field, twelve among the Indians, and one in Alaska. They have also aided the work for Chinese women in California. They have rendered valuable help in the furnishing of supplies in our missionary schools. Thirty-two of the State Unions have been on the contributing list the past year.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT ON CHINESE WORK.

BY PROF. GEO. HUNTINGTON, CHAIRMAN.

The committee to whom was referred that portion of the "general survey" relating to the work of the Association among the Chinese have given such attention to the topic as has been possible in the brief time elapsing between their appointment and the hour set for the presentation of this report. Their task has been rendered easy by the clear and comprehensive statements of the general survey, which leaves little to be added by your committee, except by way of emphasis and hearty commendation.

The statistics of the work are brief but suggestive. Twenty schools, all but one of them in California, indicate the extent of its field. Two ordained missionaries, one of them Chinese, and thirty unordained teachers, six of them

Chinese, constitute its working force. One thousand and eighty-four pupils form its immediate constituency so far as its educational work is concerned. Its current expenses amount to something over $10,000. Measured by the cost of the work and by the number of persons directly affected by it, this department is the least among those maintained by the Association. Of the total amount expended in the various fields occupied by the society, the Southern work receives, in round numbers, four-fifths, the Indian work four-fifths of the remainder, and the Chinese work the other one-fifth of one-fifth—one twenty-fifth of the whole. This ratio has, of course, been adopted with intelligent regard to the claims of the several fields, and represents the deliberate judgment of the secretaries and executive board. Your committee would not be understood as calling in question the wisdom of such an apportionment, or as suggesting any change in the respective amounts. But we would call attention to the fact that whatever has been accomplished in this department has been accomplished within an exceedingly narrow sphere, and with the slenderest resources.

A tabulation of the comparative statistics of the last three years is significant:

	1895.	1896.	1897.
Schools	20	19	20
Teachers	36	32	32
Pupils	1,011	893	1,084
Appropriations	$11,674	$10,841	$10,951
Conversions	160	166	164
Professing faith	40	42	60

That is, with a diminution of nearly 10 per cent. in appropriations as compared with two years ago, and of more than 11 per cent. in the teaching force, the number of schools was not diminished; the number of pupils increased, and the spiritual results were proportionately augmented. But no statistics can represent the real value of these results. Such a work is to be estimated not extensively but intensively. Consider what it means for a single Chinaman to embrace Christianity; what a reversal of all his previous conceptions and convictions; what an overturning of pagan ideas; what a surrendering of the ties of kindred and of friendship; what struggles with life-long prejudices; what battles in his soul of the old faith and the new. And consider the fact that 164 such conversions have taken place within this Association's sphere of influence during the year, and almost five hundred during the last three years.

The quality of Christian character developed is also remarkable. Not only has there been, to all appearances, a genuine faith in Christ, but a thorough transformation of character through divine grace. The converts have entered at once upon aggressive Christian work, so that these hundreds of believers are so many centers of evangelization among their countrymen, and have adjusted themselves at once to current methods and forms of activity, like the Young Men's Christian Association and the Society of Christian Endeavor.

But the most significant aspect of this work is, without doubt, its relation to foreign missions. With admirable zeal these converts have given themselves to efforts for the conversion of their pagan fellow countrymen in China, contributing of their meager earnings with a liberality that puts us all to shame, and going into the work themselves wherever Providence opens the way. There is one kind of deportation at which we all rejoice—the voluntary self-deportation of the Christian Chinaman, going to carry the gospel to his kindred beyond the sea.

The ordination of another Chinese brother to the Christian ministry, and his consecration to the missionary work in his own land, marks an epoch in that work, and is, we believe, an earnest of great and increasing blessing for China. It is doubtful whether foreign missions in that land ever received or could receive from any other human source, an impulse so potent as that which is now making itself felt through these native witnesses for Christ. Three hundred thousand people, we are told, have already heard the gospel, and there is every reason to believe that the thousands will soon become millions.

Meantime, the least that we can do is to foster and intensify the work in this country, on which the foreign work so largely depends. One dollar expended in California may be worth a hundred dollars expended for foreign missions.

Is it not time to increase the ratio of appropriations, not by subtracting from other departments, but by adding to the sum total of our gifts?

The Providential opportunity to the Chinese mission in San Francisco, to buy a large and commodious and well located house in the very center of "Chinatown," at half the price it would cost to build it to-day, appeals with special force to our immediate attention and charity. Fifteen thousand dollars will secure a building that cost $40,000. The widening work in China, the Christian Endeavor work and the church work here, the heated battles now going on to stop the sale of Chinese girl slaves, all emphasize the appeal of the devoted Dr. Pond that we at once equip this Gibralter for our Chinese work.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

BY PRESIDENT E. D. EATON, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

A rapid survey of the Indian work of the Association calls our thought to the billowy prairies of the middle west, the passes of the Rocky Mountains, the broad fields and forests of the Pacific Coast, and the furthermost northwest, where our flag fronts the near-pressing Asia. It is a wide sweep; it is a vast work; fundamental in character, heroic in endeavor, inspiring in achievement, pathetic in limitation to appropriations pinched by hard times and the lagging enthusiasm of a Christian public.

The year's work has been a distinctly successful one. The number of churches has been increased by two, and the devotion with which the work of all has been carried on is evidenced by the large numbers gathered into Sunday Schools, by the faithful living in Christian homes, and by the nearly twenty-five hundred dollars contributed by these humble dwellers in cabin and tepee, eighteen hundred dollars of it for distinctly missionary purposes. The riches of their liberality makes our own giving seem poverty-stricken.

The faithfulness of the Alaska Christians to their principles of Sabbath keeping in the midst of the walrus season, when their unstable harvest tempts them to the sea, suggests the general stanchness of their faith and practice. It is good to learn that their season was a prosperous one and that their missionary clings to them, although dependent upon the uncertain support of special contributions for his mission.

The educational work among the Indians is as indispensable as it is effective. The lift out of savagery into Christian civilization is manifestly dependent upon enlightenment and discipline of mind and heart. The Christian school must lead all other agencies here. The schools of the Association, while sadly contracted by lessened funds, have made a noble record for the year. Nearly six hundred pupils, at various stages of their development, have felt the vitalizing touch of their teachers' minds, have had hands growing more and more skillful for participation in the employments of industrial life, and thoughts broadened and strengthened by enlarging relations with the universe of truth.

It is with pain that we learn that, in the judgment of the Executive Committee of the Association, the work of the Oahe School must be entirely suspended the present year. As a feeding school for Santee, as a fitting school for Christian workers and as a center of inspiration and support for scattered out-stations it is widely serviceable. The committee deems it wiser, however, to cut off an entire school than to keep cutting and crippling all the schools. May it not be long before many disappointed and darkened lives are cheered by the rekindling of this love in the twilight of Indian life!

It is our earnest hope that the present meeting may give such consideration to the work of the Santee normal training school as may lead to a deepened conviction of its immense importance, and may result in securing means for its strengthening and enlargement. This institution, regarded by competent judges as the best Indian school in the entire country, may justly be viewed as the center of our activities in this great field. Here our industrial work has its fullest development. Here is given the highest intellectual training which we can provide, and to the best prepared minds. Here is the focus of the evangelizing activity which through native pastors and lay workers aims to give the gospel to ever-widening circles.

The unique university extension movement inaugurated by Professor Riggs and now in successful operation, is worthy of highest appreciation. Only a favored individual here and there is able to have the advantages of our schools, and when he returns to his village he may be able to give little impression of what he has learned; but the simple scientific apparatus and the stereopticon pictures of sacred story or of human progress may amaze and arouse entire villages with never-to-be-forgotten impressions of wisdom and life; with doubled resources how vastly increased might be the potency of this noble institution. Has not the time come for bidding it go forward into a greatly enlarged future?

Very interesting are the statements respecting the hospital for Indians at Fort Yates, N. D., where 800 persons, including out-patients, were treated by the skilled woman physicians in charge; 300 of those under treatment being children. What do these figures suggest as to the alleviation of a suffering, the lifting of a burden of pain, the passing of the influence of the tribal medicine man with his fearful aggravation of his people's misery?

This agency also ought surely to be sustained and extended.

The Indian work of this Association merits a larger share of our attention, our prayers, our giving. With gratitude for what has been accomplished during the past year, we unite in the earnest hope that the coming year may be one of enlarged resources and so of widening outlook and still richer results.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

BY REV. CORNELIUS H. PATTON, CHAIRMAN.

Notwithstanding severe retrenchment, due solely to the falling off of legacies, the Association closes a year of splendid work in this its chief department. To have sustained this great educational system of six colleges, forty-four normal schools and twenty-seven common schools, embracing in all over 12,000 students, in such times as we have been passing through, is evidence that this work has a stronger hold upon the affections of Congregationalists than ever before. Perhaps no one fact better suggests the magnitude of this work and its possibilities for good than that, during the past year, we have sent out into their life's work as preachers, teachers and trained workers in other lines, some 500 colored young men and women.

We note with gratification that more than twenty schools are now administered entirely by Negro teachers. It is also a fact worthy of emphasis that out of 8,000,000 colored people, 1,250,000 are now enrolled in schools of some kind.

The work of the year in this department attests the wisdom and the faithfulness of the officers of this Association in administering the great trust committed to them by the churches. We are glad to see our secretaries in close touch with the field through frequent journeys in the South, and we believe the money incident to such visits is well expended.

In my opinion the American Missionary Association is the greatest agency that stands between the Negro race in this country and a bondage scarcely less intolerable than slavery. In the providence of God, to us Congregationalists has been committed the foremost part of this great undertaking, and we want to emphasize with all the force of language and conviction that this Association has done and is doing a work of which every Congregationalist should be proud. We especially say to our pastors of this northwest region that, if they wish to inspire their people with enthusiastic loyalty to our Pilgrim faith and ways, they cannot do better than inform them of this work in the south.

REPORT ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

BY REV. CLARENCE F. SWIFT, CHAIRMAN.

"Discouraging" is a word not to be found in the dictionary of loyal discipleship. If it were, your committee would be tempted to use it in the report upon the present outlook for work among the Mountain Whites. This remark would apply, however, only to certain phases of the work, as in many respects the conditions justify hope and courage.

When we confine our attention to the character of the work done; to the loyalty of the workers; to the amount of dividends to show for the investment made; we have only words of praise and thanksgiving. In the eighteen schools, eight of which are academies, our teachers have been training the minds and hearts and bodies of 2,195 pupils, "with excellent success." "One hundred pupils for one teacher" is the story of more than one school. Of these hundreds, scores are going out as teachers into the districts round about, equipped with better methods and inspired by higher ideals, while a countless number beside are being stirred to study in the home. In almost every school "standing room only" is the familiar announcement. The excess of demand over supply allows great care in locating the schools. Those who have read the leaflet, "A Message from the Mountains," with its bright descriptions and its pathetic appeal will partly appreciate the loss sustained in the death of the writer, Miss Agnes Ruth Mitchell.

In the fifty-five churches the truth has been interpreted to 1,619 members and a host that no man can number are being stimulated to a religion that includes morality. In the matter of establishing churches also great caution has been practiced, good Congregational councils with the pastors in the immediate neighborhood, being called upon to decide upon the advisability of the organization. Two Congregational Associations, founded during the year, bear witness to the growth of the principles of our polity among the churches

But when we center our attention upon the amount invested, in its relation to favorable opportunities, the servant of the Lord may well feel blue. A year ago there were fifty-six churches. During the year four were added, but during the year five were dropped, so that now there are only fifty-five. There is also one school less than a year ago. The hard times have struck the mining towns, work has not been available, and village churches have evaporated by the departure of their members. This is a Providential dispensation, and no one is to blame. But the same hard times, and something else, have struck the valleys and the cities and the givers in the north, so that churches have been abandoned, simply for lack of funds to pay the missionary. This is not all a Providential dispensation; it is partly a failure on the part of the sons of the Pilgrims that we will have to answer for.

Secretary Ryder says: "We could have added twenty-five churches just as easily as four." It is hard for the general of any army to see strategic points, which ought to be taken, turned away from without an effort. This has been the constant burden of the leaders in this work since its inception. Every year has brought increase, but with the regret that there might not be more increase. It is a tremendously harder thing for a general to expend energy and sacrifice life in occupying points that seemed absolutely essential and then be compelled to call off his troops and abandon the field for lack of supplies. This latter is the hard duty to-day of the leaders of our work among the mountains. The supplies are not in sight, and the orders have already been issued for next year: "Abandon six schools of the eighteen with their 573 pupils; abandon fourteen of the fifty-five churches with their 286 members." Yet not one of the schools or churches but is doing a work in its locality absolutely essential to the uplifting of those people.

To-day the story of our work with the Mountain Whites must be told in a minor strain; God grant the stirring of our hearts to give the cash to send out the workers to multiply the results that shall justify next year a hallelujah of triumphant progress.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

BY REV. DR. W. M. BARROWS, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee on the Southern church work of the Association is convinced that no mistake was made when, five years ago, the executive committee began a forward movement in our church work among the Mountain Whites and the Colored people. With gratitude to God, we recall what has been accomplished during these five years. There have been organized one hundred and sixteen new churches in the Southern field, as compared with forty-seven churches organized throughout all the missionary fields of the Association during the preceding five years of the decade.

Each of these churches has become a center of evangelizing influences.

The pastor of the central organization ministers frequently to from three to seven other congregations, often at widely separated points. Many revivals are reported, and some years nearly fifteen hundred converts have been received into these churches. Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies have been organized and houses of worship erected at great self-sacrifice on the part of the members.

The evolution that has been going on in these places of worship from the rude log shanty to the roughly boarded chapel and from this to the commodious sanctuary of brick or stone or wood, typifies the growth that has been going forward in the moral and spiritual power of these churches.

Some of the more precious results of this work cannot be tabulated and will only gradually appear in regenerated lives, in purified homes, in renovated communities.

The policy of our Association in joining churches to schools and schools to churches has been vindicated by the results. At the outset the school was the pioneer. It went before and prepared the way for the church by educating a constituency suitable for it.

But your committee is impressed with the greatness of the opportunity now opening before us for the expansion of our church work, and the importance of placing in the hands of our Association the means that will enable it to meet this emergency.

For, encouraging as is the survey of what has been done, we believe that it is only a beginning of a much greater work. For this there will be an ever increasing need as the Southern portion of our country is brought more and more fully into the currents of our natural life. Let us remember that the changed conditions at the South impose new duties upon us as Christians and Congregationalists in meeting this demand for churches of our free polity and high standard of Christian living.

Churches of our democratic polity are needed at the South as training schools to prepare the Colored people for civic and business life. A friend of this race and a member of it has pointed out as one of their race weaknesses their inability to act in connection with others. As individuals they exhibit strength and can carry forward to success the work that they undertake. But when they attempt to co-operate with others in any common enterprise they often fail. To remedy this defect what better training can they have than that which will come to them in connection with the duties that will devolve upon them in a Congregational church, where the will of the majority is law: where the people choose their own pastor and elect their own officers and administer their own affairs, and where is combined with local freedom the principle of the fellowship of the churches? As our Congregational churches constituted the model after which our Republican government, in part at least, was originally patterned, so now a training in its methods and responsibilities furnishes one of the best preparations to fit men for their civic duties.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

Appointed at the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, held in Boston, Mass., Oct. 20-22, 1896.

BY RODNEY DENNIS, CHAIRMAN.

Your committee have to report that they have performed the duty to which they were appointed, have visited the office of the treasurer of the Association, where they were furnished with every facility therefor, and they have examined the books and records of the office. The committee are pleased to commend the care, fidelity and detail in which these are kept. They evince a careful and intelligent method in caring for and explicitly accounting for the securities, assets and properties possessed by the Association; they find the confidence and commendation entertained and expressed in former reports fully justified.

No material change has seemed or seems to be necessary from the uniform, practical and business methods now pursued. Books are kept by double entry; records are simply and intelligently made, with as great detail and fullness as their nature requires. The cash book records, the daily receipts and disbursements and daily cash transactions are journalized and posted in the ledger. Deposits are made in banks selected by the executive committee, and no moneys are withdrawn therefrom, except upon checks that bear the signature of two of the officers of the Association, and in payment of appropriations made by the executive committee. Auditors, who are annually elected by the Association, make quarterly examinations, finding proper vouchers for all receipts and expenditures, and their certificate attesting the same appears upon the treasurer's books.

The securities of the Association are kept in a safe deposit vault, accessible only to the treasurer and one other officer of the Association, each having possession of an adequate key. A real estate record is kept showing each parcel of real property held by the Association, with a full history of the same, the expenses attending each, with the income therefrom. A record of trust funds and of each legacy is kept, showing the character and revenue derived, with the accompanying history and conditions.

THE DANIEL HAND FUND.

This fund is kept separately, in books specially devoted to the purpose of showing the character and condition in detail of this large fund, its investments, revenue and expenses.

There has been collected as income from the Daniel Hand Fund during the year, $71,656.04 which, with the balance at the beginning of the year of $4,182.23, makes a total of $75,838.27. There have been expended, to Sept. 30, $63,606.90, leaving a balance in hand and appropriated $12,231.37. There has also been received the sum of $500 as a part of the Daniel Hand Endowment Fund.

It is the duty of the auditors to make careful examination of certificates of stock and titles to property, to see that they correspond with the treasurer's account, and to make annual report of the same.

Your committee, in short, commend the system, methods and care exercised in the treasurer's office, and also the thorough accounting made through the auditors.

GENERAL STATEMENT.

There have been received for the year ending Sept. 30, from donations (including Jubilee Shares), $184,250.79; from estates, $82,169.39; from income, $14,877.18; from tuition, $40,432.68; from Slater fund paid to institutions, $7,500, and from sale of property, $210; total, $329,440.04. The payments have been $317,812.56, leaving a credit balance on the year of $11,627.48. The debt, Sept. 30, 1896, was $66.572.51. The present debt is $54,945,03.

There has also been received $275 for the endowment funds.

LEGACIES.

The legacies for the four years just passed averaged $86,343.30, or about $60,000 a year less than for the four years previous to the year 1892-93, or a decrease in four years of about $240,000. This very sudden and severe decrease in receipts from legacies, together with the great shrinkage in values, the difficulty of selling property at its worth, and the diminution of income and dividends, could not at once be met by a like reduction in the expenditure of the Association, without bringing disaster and ruin to the missionary work which had been nurtured and built up with so much care.

DONATIONS.

The donations for the four years just passed averaged $179,386.06, about the same as the year of the panic, and the donations for the year just closed are $184,250.79, or about $5,000 more than the year of the panic, and $500 more than the average per year for the four prosperous years preceding the panic.

The past year has been a year full of anxiety and uncertainty to business men of every class—to corporations of all kinds, not excepting the many eleemosynary and educational enterprises which are dependent upon a prosperous and liberal public; values in properties of all kinds have largely diminished; systematic givers, who have been relied upon to respond to urgent calls upon their generosity, have been disabled. This failure of the ordinary resources has necessitated a considerable restriction in benevolent work; and these causes have entailed a full share of solicitude upon the officers of this Association; but they may find much cause for congratulation that they have accomplished a large and successful year's work in their many fields of endeavor; they have not increased, but have diminished the debt with which they were confronted at the beginning of the year.

It will be observed by reference to the report of the executive committee that the appropriations for the coming year are over $43,000 less than last year, because of the debt which still burdens the Association. It is a notable fact also that the officers of the Association have made a handsome contribution to the Association in a reduction of their salaries for the next year. In fact, a reduction of 22 per cent. has been made in the operating expenses and 17 per cent. in the mission fields.

It would seem as if the churches of the country, who are proud to claim this great Association as their child, if they take a wide and comprehensive view of the vast and complex work it is attempting, would give it such prompt and substantial aid as to relieve it from the incubus of a debt not only, but endow it with ample means to prosecute a work, limited in extent and importance only by the means in hand. Let us hope that this will be done promptly and cheerfully in His name.

Obituary.

MISS MARTHA J. ADAMS.

At the home of her niece, Mrs. Rev. C. D. Merrill, in Beloit, Wis., Miss Martha J. Adams fell asleep in Jesus, October 7th, from a second attack of paralysis, aged 75 years and three months.

While returning from one of her prayer meetings among the colored people, Jan. 7, 1896, with her horse and carriage, with one of the teachers at Tillotson Institute, Austin, Texas, she was stricken with paralysis of her right side, rendering her unconscious and helpless when they arrived at the institution. After five weeks she rallied from this unconsciousness, and as soon as able to endure the fatigue, she was brought to Beloit, Wis. She continued in this condition, able to converse some, and enjoy meeting friends, but perfectly helpless until her decease. Her remains were brought to the home of her sister, Mrs. Rev. H. H. Benson, in Wauwatosa, and after appropriate funeral services, were laid to rest in Forest Home Cemetery, Milwaukee.

Miss Adams early made a profession of religion in her native village in Conway, Mass., and united with the Congregational Church.

After coming to Wisconsin in 1846, she continued her early profession, teaching at Green Bay, Beaver Dam and Ripon College, but her most important work was among the Freedmen of the South, five years at Montgomery, Ala., and fifteen years at Tillotson Institute, Austin, Texas, which institution she aided in opening.

MISS AGNES RUTH MITCHELL.

Miss Agnes Ruth Mitchell, one of our earnest and enthusiastic workers, has recently passed away. Her home was in Acworth, N. H. In the fall of 1893 she left this mountain region of New Hampshire to labor in the Blowing Rock School in the mountains of North Carolina. She was greatly devoted to her work, and continued for three years at the same place.

She was suddenly taken ill, and gave up work December 5th, on account of sore throat, which was pronounced diphtheria. The doctor was skillful, the nurses untiring, but on the morning of December 14th her spirit quietly departed to be with Christ in the realms of blessedness. In days of health she had earnestly tried to lead others to the Saviour, and had said, "If I die here, bury me near the little church."

The neighbors were kind and helpful. Very tenderly was she buried among the pines and laurels near the German Reformed Church, about two miles from our school. The spot will be held sacred and cherished by her many friends.

MISS PATTI J. MALONE.

When in 1875 another voice was wanted for the Jubilee Singers, Miss Patti J. Malone, born in Athens, Ala., and a student of Fisk University, was secured, and thenceforward hers was a part of their romantic story. Before enthusiastic multitudes in America and Europe she sang the weird, soul-touching songs of her people when in their bondage. She continued in the service of the American Missionary Association, especially in the interests of Fisk University, until Jubilee Hall had been erected, and the work on Livingstone Hall had been begun. After that she continued with those who went with Mr. F. J. Louden, singing as their own enterprise. With these she journeyed around the world, singing in all climes and among all peoples and before all the crowned heads of the land, and wore medals from the most prominent kings and emperors in the world. With all this she never forgot her station in life, and was the most popular colored person who ever lived in Alabama. With the proceeds of her years of travel she erected in Athens, the place of her birth, the most attractive and comfortable residence in the colored resident portion of the town. On January 25th she passed from the music of earth to that of heaven.

MR. AND MRS. HORACE C. SARGENT.

On January 22, 1897, Mrs. Cynthia A. Sargent, aged 76, died at her residence in Thomasville, Ga., and on February 4th, thirteen days afterward, her husband, Mr. Horace C. Sargent, aged 78, died in the same place. These worthy friends had lived long and happily together, and in death they were not divided.

Mr. Sargent was a native of Worcester, Mass., but went South twelve years ago, locating in Macon, Ga., where he became identified with the American Missionary Association. Seven years ago he removed to Thomasville and assumed the position of treasurer in the Allen Normal Industrial School, which office he held until the day of his death. He and his wife exhibited at all times the highest traits of Christian character, devoting themselves earnestly to the best interests of those for whom they labored.

MISS EMILY NEWCOMB.

Miss Emily Newcomb, whom some of our readers will remember as matron at our Talladega College in 1878 and 1879, died in Kansas City, Mo., March 5th, and was buried in Farmington, Ill. Miss Newcomb was born in Lewistown, Ill. At sixteen years of age she taught school. She afterwards graduated at Knox College, and taught in a private school. For twenty years previous to her service at Talladega she served as a Missionary at large, gathering up waifs of children and locating them in respectable homes and helping to care for the poor generally. In 1880, she went to Kansas City, Mo., and opened a charitable work to which she gave herself to the day of her death. To make that kind of charity more effective, she studied medicine and obtained a diploma, proving herself very skillful in medical practice. Thus was her whole life spent in labors for the poor, knowing no distinction of black or white in her helpful ministrations.

MISS A. D. GERRISH.

Miss Addelyn D. Gerrish, of Leetonia, Ohio, entered the work of the American Missionary Association at Macon, Ga., in the fall of 1873, and was connected with the Lewis High School, where for three years she was an efficient teacher and missionary. Ill health then interrupted her work, but in the fall of 1882, she again accepted appointment, as visiting missionary in connection with the Central Church, New Orleans, La. She continued in this work until 1885, when failing health again compelled a return North. She died on the 19th of February, 1897, while in the service of the Young Women's Christian Association of Boston.

MRS. M. M. MAIR.

We have just learned by a brief note from Glasgow, Scotland, of the death of Mrs. M. M. Mair, one of our early missionaries in Africa. Mr. Matthew Mair and wife were appointed to the Mendi Mission, November 17th, 1855, and sailed for Africa December 1st, 1856, in company with Mr. and Mrs. Burton, who were returning to the mission after a short absence. They reached Freeport, January 14th, 1857, and after spending a short time at Good Hope Station, went to Boom Falls. In March of the same year, Mr. Mair was taken ill, and in April he died. Mrs. Mair remained on the field. In 1876, twenty years after her appointment, she returned to her home in Scotland for a vacation. In 1877, she was again at the mission; this time at Avery Station. After that year, she left the mission, and has spent the remaining years of her life among her home friends.

She died of pneumonia, on the 9th of January after an illness of fourteen days. She was a consecrated and earnest worker in a very hard field.

MRS. CATHERINE MACKIE SPENCE.

The family of Fisk University has been called to mourn the death of Mrs. Catherine M. Spence, wife of Prof. A. K. Spence, both of whom have been so long and so closely connected with the work of the American Missionary Association.

Mrs. Spence was called home April 17th, and on Easter day her body was laid to rest in the beautiful Cemetery of Mt. Olivet, Nashville, there to await the resurrection morning. She had been frail for many years, but the last illness was short, and her departure sudden and unexpected.

Mrs. Spence came with her husband to Fisk University in 1870, and from the first threw herself into the work with all the ardor and intensity of her nature. In those early years, when peculiar trials attended the work, she gave herself wholly to it. After the death of two little children she seemed to take the students into her heart in a special manner, and for ten years spent most of her time in the North getting aid for the needy ones who came knocking at the doors of the University. The time thus spent included a year in England and Scotland, whither she and Prof. Spence went in the interests of the Association.

Mrs. Spence will be remembered by many friends throughout the North by her earnest appeals to their sympathy and interest in behalf of the needy students of Fisk University; and these same students, many graduated and now engaged in work for the Master, and many still able to pursue their studies, as well as those yet to receive the benefit of her labors—to all these her memory is precious. A very touching testimony to this effect has been received by Prof. Spence from thirty-three members of the Alumni of Fisk University.

MRS. A. A. MYERS.

Mrs. Ellen Myers, the wife of Rev. A. A. Myers, pastor of the Congregational Church of Cumberland Gap, Tenn., died at her home June 26th. Mrs. Myers had been for many years a devoted missionary of the American Missionary Association in the Mountain Field of the South. She was a woman of remarkable consecration and self-sacrifice. She was born in Cherry Valley, Ohio, and received her education at Hillsdale College, Mich., from which institution she was graduated in 1866. She joined the church when only eight years of age, and through her whole life illustrated the power of the gospel. She gave herself and all that she had in loving service to the Master and his most needy children.

REV. JOHN H. BYRD.

Mr. Byrd, who died July 29, 1897, in the eighty-first year of his age, was secretary of the convention that formed the American Missionary Association at Albany, N. Y., in 1846, and for a year before his death was, so far as we knew, the only surviving member of that convention. He graduated from Oberlin College in 1846, and, under appointment of the American Missionary Association, spent some time as a minister in Michigan. He removed to Leavenworth, Kansas, in 1855. He was once the victim of a violent attack by a furious pro-slavery man, at another time his religious service was surrounded by a furious mob, and once he was arrested and held as a prisoner for several days. He was a pioneer preacher in Kansas, holding his services for a time in a grove, and at length organized the Congregational Church in Atchison in 1857. He leaves a family of four children, and one of his daughters has attained distinction as an astronomer, and now has charge of the astronomical observatory at Smith College, Northampton, Mass.

REV. S. B. HALLIDAY.

The death of Rev. S. B. Halliday in the eighty-sixth year of his age, takes away another from the thin ranks of the veterans who for more than half a century have done such useful service in the army of the Lord. Mr. Halliday was active in the revival era of 1830 and onward in the anti-slavery struggle which began about the same period, and in the temperance movement in its varied forms. No small share of his active life was given to practical efforts for the benefit of orphans, the destitute and the afflicted. He was a pastor in his earlier and in his later life, and one of the most conspicuous and useful periods of his labors was the quarter of a century which he devoted as assistant pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn. Mr. Halliday was for twenty years a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, to which he gave regular attendance and wise counsels. His pen was not idle and he has enriched our Christian literature with several useful volumes. He was a man of great decision of character, yet of most winning manner and with a heart full of kindliest sympathy and affection. His memory is blessed.

REV. BENJAMIN DODGE.

Rev. Benjamin Dodge died at his home at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., Tuesday, July 13th. Father Dodge, by which title he was generally known in the locality of his home, in former years was one of the missionaries of the American Missionary Association, in connection with the interesting mountain school at Pleasant Hill. In the earlier years of the history of this institution he labored with great earnestness in the erection of buildings and the development of the educational work among the mountaineers. Aside from all his value as a Christian man and administrator he was an example as a successful farmer, handling the thin soil of our mountain as an expert.

REV. C. W. JOHNSON.

We are called to record the death of an esteemed pastor of one of the churches of the American Missionary Association. Rev. C. W. Johnson died on the 12th of July, after an illness of two weeks. He was a minister of spotless integrity and a devoted pastor, who was building up his church in strength. His early death is mourned by his church—the Spain Street Church of New Orleans, La.—and by all who knew him.

REV. R. F. MARKHAM.

This earnest and faithful laborer in the cause of the Master among the needy and helpless people in the country, passed from earth Aug. 7th, 1897, aged seventy-nine years and one month.

Mr. Markham was born in Ohio, educated at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., and entered the gospel ministry in 1846. His labors were devoted largely in the South and West, and were varied in their character and useful in their results. In the service of the American Missionary Association, he spent the years 1875-80 in Savannah, Ga., as pastor of the church and superintendent of missions in the vicinity. He was for a time local financial agent at Beach Institute, Savannah, Ga. He also devoted his services in soliciting funds for the erection of the new church edifice in Savannah.

From 1881-85 he had charge for this Association of a needy work among the Kansas refugees, in Topeka. The last years of his life were spent in Kansas, where he served as pastor of the church in Kirwin, for eight years.

Mr. Markham was a zealous worker with wide sympathies for every form of Christian labor; earnest in early days as the opponent of slavery, and constant in his labors in promoting Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavor Societies. His death was sudden and peaceful.

ANNUAL REPORT
OF
BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

Faith in a work undertaken, that it is truly of the Lord, always makes a stout heart, though it meet difficulty and hindrance at every step. Livingstone, alone in unexplored Africa, facing disappointment that taxed his endurance to the utmost, put himself on record thus: "Nothing earthly will make me give up my work in despair. I encourage myself in the Lord my God and go forward."

This fifty-first year of the American Missionary Association, the fourteenth of its Bureau of Woman's Work, has had its periods of distress but never of doubt. When at the close of its Jubilee year, twelve months ago, the Association found that it must again take up its burden of debt, somewhat lightened but still heavy, there were many women who did encourage themselves in the Lord their God and go forward. The "hard times" continued, an excellent cover for the uninterested, and an obstacle to be overcome by the interested, yet they were so dealt with that in our Woman's Department we come to the close of our year with at least a fair record. We have about held our own in the amount of contributions. The receipts for the year through Women's Societies are $28,753.61. This does not by any means represent all that women have done, but simply what has been done through their organized channels. For women came nobly and generously to the aid of the Association in the Jubilee effort, bringing many an offering rich in self-denial, some of the costliest from the Negro and Indian women of the mission fields. We look to God in humble gratitude for these results.

This is also a gratifying indication of genuine interest in the entire work of the Association, for a large proportion of the contributions from Women's Societies has been the result of interest in some particular missionary or mission. While recognizing the value of the personal element in arousing interest in missions we have somewhat deprecated the tendency to limit knowledge and interest to any one mission station or missionary, and we have endeavored to guard this by mailing, without increase of postage, helpful leaflets with our missionary letters. In our department of letter-writing, we have, during the year, put into circulation twenty-five thousand copies of mimeographed type-written letters from twenty-four schools where teachers were sustained. In addition to much unassigned aid to our treasury, forty-nine missionary teachers have been supported by contributions from Women's Societies, twenty-four in the colored field, twelve in the Mountain White, twelve in the Indian field, one in Alaska. The work for Chinese women in California has also received aid from our Women's Unions.

The rigid economy applied to the mission fields was not in the way of reducing the moderate salaries of our women workers, but rather in limiting the number of helpers, thus to hold the growth of the missions in check until the offerings for the Lord's work should be more nearly equal with its progress. But who can check the progress of the mighty forces started by awakened intellect, quickened moral sense and spiritual hunger that has just tasted of the food that satisfieth? The leaders of the colored race, few though they be as yet, and the aroused Mountain people, both see in the Christian schools and an educated ministry the salvation of their people; and now their influence is added to all our teaching of the past to bring their youth under the healthful instruction of our missionary schools. Also the work among the Indians has reached its critical period when missionary effort demands larger range and emphasis. None realize this as do the missionaries, and thus, in many an instance, the financial restrictions have resulted only in dividing the increasing duties among the few. The testimony of one is that of many: "The burdens are heavier than ever, and we thought them more than mortal frame could bear before, but we have great reason for thankfulness that, in the general retrenchment, we have the same number of helpers, though not the one more we have been wanting so long."

It is because, and only because of this inflexible restriction in the field that the Association is able to report at the close of the year, "No increase of debt." The work has been kept within the income. But the burdens upon some of the missionaries, which they assume voluntarily, rather than lose the opportunities for influencing the character and the whole future of those needy souls to whom they are sent, may well spur us on to attempt greater things than ever for the American Missionary Association. God has blessed our effort to aid in raising money. He will continue to bless if we continue to work. Can we do yet more in this new year than we have done in the past? It seems clear that instead of reducing working force and closing schools, as we are now obliged to do, we should put more workers into the field, and so relieve the grievous burdens imposed by too meagre support. More field workers means more home workers. Let us not undertake too large a thing, but something definite and within our ability. There are various ways of helping.

1. If every woman who believes in this work will do her utmost to win for the American Missionary Association one other, as a contributor to this missionary service, and persist in her effort until it is crowned with success, it must inevitably add to the strength and efficiency of this glorious work. Will to do it, and the will will find the way.

2. We should gain somewhat also by more definiteness or clearness in the assignment of contributions. Much is contributed under the general term of "Home Missions," which covers the work of five National societies. Experience shows that the more intelligently and definitely we contribute, assigning our offerings to the particular society whose work is to be aided, the larger the total of the gifts.

3. Use the leaflets and letters sent you for others in your church as well as for your own family or missionary society. Keep them circulating.

4. Take the American Missionary and try to get others to take it. Solicit subscriptions. Take the Congregational Work also as a supplement to the magazine.

5. Do not allow barrel help to become a substitute for a cash contribution to the support of the work.

The year has been one of great blessing in the field. At Pleasant Hill, Tenn., where the Iowa and Ohio Unions have a teacher, there has been a truly remarkable work of grace. At King's Mountain, N. C., and Moorhead, Miss., aided by the New York Union, there have been many conversions, even the children from ten to twelve years in the latter school giving evidence of a genuine change of heart. We mention these highest results as the culmination of our missionary effort. But the work of the American Missionary Association includes, as has been aptly said, the three Ms (mental, moral and manual), as also the three Rs. The schools at Savannah, McIntosh and Thomasville, Ga., aided by the Iowa, Vermont and Connecticut Unions, have been doors of hope and mercy to hundreds of boys and girls who have come daily for instruction. Blowing Rock school, where Maine, Connecticut and Illinois Unions have each a teacher, has sought out new paths of usefulness in neighborhood meetings for village improvement, beginning at the door-yards, and in careful, though fearless work for temperance and purity. The large and increasingly useful school at Cotton Valley, Ala., has been sustained in full, as in previous years, by the Massachusetts and Rhode Island organization, which has also aided liberally in other directions, as may be seen in the tabulated statement appended. New Jersey, New Hampshire, Michigan, Missouri and Minnesota have each had the entire support of teachers.

All the missions thus associated have been hopeful and prosperous. There have been no signs of decay in the mission vineyard, it is a fruit-bearing field; we only deplore the retrenchment that causes the closing of some schools and makes the laborers too few. If it is a pain to us who have followed the work with so much of interest, what must it be to the needy people who lose the guidance and instruction of the Northern teachers.

But we enter hopefully upon a new year. We know that both the wealthy and the poor are stewards of the Lord, and that as good stewards, their gifts can release this American Missionary Association for the large work of its fields. We know that for every Woman's Society to become a contributing society will make the Woman's Work a power in lifting the barriers of retrenchment and permitting growth. It is our purpose and our joy to render loving service to our Lord Jesus. But to turn away from any portion of these people, Colored or White, Indian or Chinese, so near us, so dependent on us for the living truth, seems to invite for ourselves, "Inasmuch as ye did it not." We do the utmost within our power, not halting at any sacrifice, when we see Christ in these poor.

A missionary experienced in both home and foreign fields, expressing the hope that the stewards of the Lord's money may put enough into this American Missionary Association's treasury to relieve its present need adds: "Our home work must be done or there will be no heart for foreign work." If our womanly energy can prevent it, let us not have any mission station closed to undo what has been already well begun in this home work.

In a Roman Catholic Church we sometimes see placed by the box for offerings, a card in large clear print, "For the new stations of the Cross." Shall not we Protestants so sustain our missionary work that our gifts shall not be needed for debt, but shall enable us every year to report some "new stations of the Cross"? It can be done, if with an intense belief in the work, we encourage ourselves in the Lord our God and go forward.

This is to certify that we have examined the accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1897, with the vouchers, and find the same correct, as stated in the above accounts.

We also certify that we have examined the property accounts, and the certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association, representing the investments of the several funds, and find them to correspond with the balance sheet of September 30th, 1897, and with the detailed statement of the books of the Treasurer.

New York, October 8th, 1897.

JAS. H. OLIPHANT,
D. C. TIEBOUT.

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854 its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees, and in North America among the Indians.

The home department embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South, and the largest number of home missionary workers employed by the Association was 112 in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave States and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave States gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

AMONG THE NEGROES.

The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of those who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk, the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo.; and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

CLOSE OF THE WAR—FREEDMEN'S BUREAU—BOSTON COUNCIL.

The year 1865 was marked by the close of the war, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the Northern States. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,769 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux Klans —the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870!

PERMANENT EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains as higher institutions Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana, and Tillotson College, Texas, together with forty-four normal and graded schools and twenty-seven common schools scattered over the South and among the mountains, twenty-three schools among the Indians, twenty among the Chinese on the Pacific coast, and one in Alaska.

Theological departments also have been established in Howard University, Fisk University, Talladega College and Straight University, with an aggregate of sixty-nine students. Industrial instruction first began in Southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools, and has been constantly extended. Talladega College and Tougaloo University have large farms. In all the larger institutions and normal schools, mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well qualified teachers and ministers.

CHURCH PLANTING.

Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions, the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 241, located in nearly all the States of the South, among the negroes, the mountaineers and the Indians, with most fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Conferences or associations have been formed, and of these there are now eight, designated as the Conferences of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee, and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations or schools have been established along or near the lines of railroads traversing the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and sweeping nearly across both States: in Kentucky at Williamsburg, Pleasant View, Rockhold, Corbin, Grey Hawk, Combs and Campton; in Tennessee at Robbins, Helenwood, Jellico, Pomona, Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Bon Air and Mill Creek; in North Carolina at Saluda, Whittier and Blowing Rock; in Alabama at Nat (Bending Oaks) and Joppa. The Sunday-school work in these districts renders most efficient service in laying the foundation for churches and day-schools, and in promoting the cause of temperance.

THE INDIANS.

Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions at S'kokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S.D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number seventeen, with a membership of 971, and Sunday-school scholars 1,145. Schools number twenty-three, with 592 pupils. The out-stations number twenty-six.

Our Alaska Mission at Cape Prince of Wales, formed in 1890, temporarily closed, has been re-opened. It is entirely supported by special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. It is the only mission under Congregational auspices in the territory of Alaska. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of the missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska, under date of May 29, 1897, presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

CHINESE IN AMERICA.

The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of teachers is thirty-two, and schools twenty, located at Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Petaluma, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Ventura, Vernondale, Watsonville, and two in San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of women's aid to the American Missionary Association. Forty-two Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

New Life for the World.

SERMON

BY

REV. J. W. COOPER, D.D.

JOHN iii. 7.—"Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again."

When the Jewish ruler came to Jesus for his nocturnal interview, he did not come as a religious inquirer, anxious concerning his personal salvation. The question in his heart was not that of the Philippian jailer, "What shall I do to be saved?" As a pious Jew, and an educated and complacent Pharisee, he believed in the resurrection of the dead and the future life, and he had never for a moment doubted his own predestination to all the glories of the world to come. His anxieties were of a different sort. His investigations lay in another direction.

The whole Jewish nation had just been startled by the announcement that the Messiah was come. The people were alert with expectation; "and all men mused in their hearts concerning John the Baptist, whether he were the Christ or not." A deputation of the Pharisees—the self-constituted guardians of the people's faith—waited upon the stern wilderness preacher and asked him plainly, "Who art thou?" His reply was frank and positive: "I am not the Christ. But there standeth One among you, whom ye know not, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose. He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire. He will thoroughly purge His floor, and gather the wheat into His garner, and the chaff will He burn with unquenchable fire." The voice was that of the ancient prophets. Surely the long-looked-for deliverance was nigh!

Then Jesus appeared at Jerusalem. Amid the repressed excitements of the multitude, He cleansed the temple courts of sacrilege, wrought miracles of healing among the people, and preached the gospel of the Kingdom of God.

It was at this juncture, and it was with reference to this great matter of national concern, that the Jewish senator interviewed our Lord. He was investigating the claims of Jesus to the Messiahship. He was moved by "the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers." His mind was on the deliverance of Israel from the power of the Gentiles. He was meditating the advisability of political revolution, and the promise of national emancipation. He was seeking this information, not for himself only, but for others like him, who were cherishing the same religious and patriotic hope. It is even possible that there had been a consultation among them; for Nicodemus speaks in the plural, representatively: "We know, we Pharisees, we rulers of the people, that thou art a teacher come from God."

It was to such a man, on such an errand, that Jesus announced the necessity of the New Birth.

We cannot believe that in doing this our Lord ignored the conditions under which He was speaking—conditions which He had Himself created. We cannot believe that He sought to divert the discussion from the great national crisis which He was Himself forcing to an issue, that He might talk over with Nicodemus the matter of personal religious experience. Such a course would have been nothing less than an evasion of the supreme question of His Messiahship. No! He met the Jewish ruler on his own ground. He addressed Himself to the religious problems that were pressing upon his spirit. Here was an opportunity to proclaim to a ruler of Israel the true nature of the coming Messianic Kingdom. And this proclamation our Lord made in His very first words: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he can not see the Kingdom of God." This is the only time that the phrase, "Kingdom of God," is to be found in St. John's Gospel—here in the third and fifth verses of this chapter—here, in connection with the doctrine of the New Birth.

What is the significance of this? Surely it is that human regeneration has wider relations than those that pertain to individual destiny. The New Birth is necessary, not only that the individual man may be saved, but also that the nation may be saved, and that the Kingdom of God may come. Christ is here speaking directly to the question at issue between Himself and this "man of the Pharisees." "Marvel not that I say unto thee, Ye must be born again." If Nicodemus had addressed our Lord representatively, our Lord now addresses him representatively. "Ye must be born again." He is speaking to the nation, through the person of this ruler. He is describing the genesis of the new Kingdom. He is explaining the process of the world's redemption.

When the Pharisee called Jesus "teacher," Jesus was not satisfied. Not even though His patron admitted that He was a divinely commissioned teacher—a teacher "sent from God." The appellation betrayed an utter lack of apprehension concerning the office and mission of the Messiah. Teaching was not to be His great work on earth, but saving. Knowledge was not His supreme gift to the world, but life. "For God sent His Son into the world that the world through Him might be saved," and "Whosoever believeth on Him hath eternal life."

The message of Jesus was, therefore, the message of Life. Life for the world! New Life! This third chapter of John, with its insistent refrain, "Ye must be born again," is Christ's Inaugural of Life. It stands at the beginning of the teachings of our Lord, and bears the same relation to the Gospel of John that the Sermon on the Mount does to the Gospel of Matthew. It is, indeed, the counterpart of the Sermon on the Mount.

It sets forth in one startling and expressive figure the fundamental truth which the Sermon on the Mount developes and applies in detail.

That truth is, that the Kingdom of God comes, not by new laws, nor by changes in administrations, but by a new spirit; not by new environments but by a new heart; not by doing new things, but by becoming new men, in order to do them. The righteousness of the new Kingdom must exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees;—that is, it must be a higher order of righteousness, a divine passion, a life of love, God-inspired and heaven-born.

Christ's first lesson in social philosophy was, therefore, on the necessity of regeneration. His first essay on the reconstruction of society and the introduction of the Kingdom of God on earth, was a setting forth of the doctrine of the New Birth. His first address on the political condition and aspirations of His countrymen (and He spoke many times on this subject, with great earnestness and authority), was an appeal from the maxims of politicians and the programmes of parties, to new spiritual ideals, which were to rule in the hearts of the people by the spirit of God. The Pharisees would have the country saved by revolt and war and a new national government, when the right leader should appear. Jesus told them that it could be saved only by a change of heart. They looked abroad and cried: Lo, here! Lo, there! believing that the kingdom cometh with observation. Jesus admonished them to examine their own lives. "The Kingdom of God," He says, "is within you."

The hope of the nation lay in its moral and spiritual regeneration. Deliverance was to come, not through the tumult of assemblies, the waving of banners, or the clash of arms, but by the secret consecrations of humble souls, upon whom the divine Spirit, like "the wind which bloweth where it listeth," should silently and mysteriously fall. The long-looked-for deliverer was to be, not a monarch on a splendid throne, but the "Son of Man, lifted up," as the serpent was lifted up by Moses in the wilderness. The honors of the new Kingdom were to be adjudged, not according to the accident of birth, nor the profession or display of party loyalty, but according to the soul's response to that "Light that is come into the world," which maketh manifest the deeds of men whether they be "wrought in God."

It has not always been easy for the church to grasp and hold the doctrine of the New Birth and Eternal Life, in the profoundly spiritual and all-inclusive form in which it is presented by our blessed Lord. Standing at the open gate of the new era of the world's redemption, Jesus proclaims the terms on which humanity may hope to gain an entrance within. We hear His word, calmly insisting on the single, simple truth, that all human progress is spiritual. He makes no mention of wealth, or power, or knowledge, or skill, as necessary factors in the case. He commits Himself wholly to the religious sentiment. And practical men of experience in the world, who distrust sentiment in the presence of the hard conditions of human life, find themselves asking the very question that sprang to the lips of Nicodemus: "How can these things be?"

Regeneration is such a transcendent event in the history of a single human soul that good men often shrink from the presumption of assuming it to be a part of their own religious experience. And yet it is set forth here as universally necessary. The new social order is made dependent upon it. We are led on from the thought of the regeneration of the individual to the still more startling conception of the regeneration of the race. And however faithfully we may seek to realize the divine purpose, or to follow the divine method, in our efforts for humanity, we easily fail.

The best of us need to come back often to the teachings of Jesus,—nay, to Jesus Himself, with His broad and clear spiritual conceptions, His lofty idealism, His firm reliance upon the divine Spirit as the moral motive power in human lives. When we stand face to face with great social and national problems, and faith grows weak, and courage falters, and hope fails; when we set our hands to the work of ministering to the poor, the ignorant, the vicious and the oppressed, and are tempted to rely on other than the divine methods, hoping to reclaim lost men without saving their souls; or when we find ourselves losing our high spiritual ideals in the complex details of our daily work; then we need, like the Jewish ruler, to seek an interview with the Saviour of men, be admonished by His wisdom and reassured by His wonderful revelations of the love of God as the life of the world.

I have laid special emphasis upon the fact that Jesus taught a social as well as an individual regeneration, because this is the truth that we need to take especially to heart to-night; and also because it is a truth which has been long forgotten by theologians, and has only recently been re-discovered. We do believe in it now, in its widest applications. We can speak with confidence of the regeneration of the Negro, of the Indian, of the Chinaman, meaning thereby the Negro race, the Indian tribes, and the Chinese empire. Our minds broaden to the divine conception. We look to Jesus Christ, our Lord, as the Regenerator of the World.

But it becomes a serious question to many who are greatly interested in the social problems of the day, whether this diffusion of Christianity may not be made at the expense of its intensity. There is a drift of thought just now which tends to sacrifice personality in its impatience for universal results. And for this reason conservative men distrust the term, "social regeneration;" some of them would reject it altogether. Let us understand one another. Jesus said "Except a man be born again," before He said "Ye must be born again." Christianity is primarily a personal force, and only secondarily does it deal with masses of men. A perfect society cannot be created out of imperfect people. Or, as one social reformer puts it, "A world of comfortable animals will hardly meet our ideal of the millennium. The supreme need is a changed man." But at the same time, it is also to be remembered, that no individual man can ever be saved apart from human as well as divine relations.

Regeneration is toward God. It makes a man the child of God. Then, two men, who have been regenerated, are made brothers to each other. A new human relation is established. A new social unity is created. A new motive is furnished for all social life. The man is not saved to God alone, nor to himself alone; he is saved to the world. Regeneration is not a private and personal matter between a man and his God,—supreme as this relation always is. It has its social bearings as well. It involves all the subordinate relations of life. The regenerated man is made a better neighbor, and a more useful citizen. A number of such men will transform a community. A sufficient number of them will regenerate a race.

The individual is never to be forgotten in the mass. On the contrary, the secret of all social progress is the discovery and development of individuality, in those human beings who have before been but worthless atoms in the great inert mass of mankind. And the necessity of individualizing these men would never have been felt, if the establishment of Christianity had not issued in a clear conception of the value and dignity of the single human soul.

Our modern sociologists are acknowledging this. Let me quote from one of the latest writers on the social question in America. "The desire and need of our time," he says, "is not less individuality, but an individuality that is more vital and deep, because more free from the tyranny of fate in the form of inherited standards." "What is at stake in our social agitation is a vast extension of the area over which the principle of individuality operates. Equality means, equality in the right to be an individual. The root of the social question is the problem, how shall the downmost man bulk large enough before the terrestrial reason and conscience to force them to take cognizance of him." "Individualization means moralization. And a man is moralized when he is taken to heart by the highest conscience to be found, when he is brought within the pale of the highest known ideal. A man's right to be an individual himself puts him under the highest conceivable obligation to create individuality in others." "If we do not clear our minds on these points we shall find ourselves hiring the devil to fight the Lord's battles."

If you will review the history of human progress from the Christian era to the present day you will find that it has always proceeded according to this principle. Wherever individual men have been reborn, and have come into the life of Christ, and have lived that life loyally and sacrificially, there social advancement has been made. Old abuses have given way, despotisms have fallen, poverty, ignorance and human woe have relaxed their grasp, wherever this Christ-life has been in exhibition. Social regeneration becomes spiritually inevitable as the result of individual regeneration. Men are fused together by the fire of a common faith; and are made one, in a brotherhood where each seeks the good of all. What the world lacks, and has always lacked, is a spiritual force which shall so bind men together, that they will be united in an enduring fellowship of mutual confidence and respect, and in a common purpose of unselfish devotion to the unfortunate. This spiritual bond Christianity alone supplies. The hope of unity in church and state, the development of the sense of brotherhood between man and man, the elevation of the race and of the races, and the saving of the world, are all involved in our acceptance of that supreme utterance of our Lord, when, confronted with the problems of Israel's redemption, He looked long and searchingly into the troubled face of one of Israel's most honored and representative men, and calmly insisted: "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again."

This profoundly spiritual view of great national problems and of all social progress in the world, gives new significance to individual Christian life, and sets before us, as in a flood of Gospel light, the true motive and mission of the Christian Church.

I. If all that has been said is true, then there is an overwhelming responsibility which rests upon the Church; to do that which it has as yet but very imperfectly done, and to do it in a spirit which it has as yet but very inadequately exhibited.

It seems passing strange,—it is, in truth, utterly inexplicable and without any possible excuse, that at this late day, after the lapse of nineteen centuries of Christian history, we should still be discussing with one another the importance of social reform; presenting the claims of whole races of undeveloped and unprivileged men who are living their narrow and defective lives in the very heart of our own land, and urging these claims in vain upon so many who bear the Christian name. These Indian and Negro problems ought to have been solved long ago. We are responsible for the ignorance and poverty and savagery and vice of these neglected neighbors of ours. God has regenerated us for their sakes. New life for us should mean new life for them. A burning Christian love, like that which blazed forth in the person of the Well Beloved Son, would have so inspired the Church of God to sacrificial ministries that long ere this these lost races would have been both sought and saved.

We have intelligence and wealth and virtue and religion, but the promise of the risen Christ to His disciples was: "Ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you;" power to bear witness to the Christ and to do His works; power to teach and heal and elevate and redeem. Dr. Mackenzie tells the story of how Thomas Aquinas once visited Innocent IV., and the Pope displayed the rich treasures of the Church, and boasted, that "The time had gone by when the Church must say, 'Silver and gold I have none.'" "Yes," was the reply of the saintly doctor, "and the time has gone by when the Church can say to an impotent man at the temple gate, 'Rise up and walk.'" Let us fondly hope that that time has not gone by. Or if it has, let us persistently pray that it may come again! If not by miracle, then by the homelier, but no less honorable, methods of the present day, in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, we may go forth to serve and save. To these unfortunate races of men, who have halted upon the way of human progress, and lie helpless and hopeless at our gates, broken and weak, degraded and despised, Christ has bidden us carry that word of life and that spirit of life, in the power of which they shall indeed "rise up and walk," and take their rightful place in the advancing columns of the redeemed humanity as it moves onward into the Kingdom of God.

The responsibility is ours. It is enforced, not only by the commandment of Christ but by the seeking love of Christ, by the outgoing life of Christ. It is involved in our own regeneration, through which we were born into that life and that love, and were made sons of God that we might be brothers to our fellow-men. Our privilege is our responsibility.

II. How, then, shall the work be accomplished? By what methods, may we hope to discharge our obligations to God and man in this divine partnership of service for humanity? We receive our working orders, from our Lord's message of the New Life and from His insistence on the regeneration of man as the only hope of human progress.

This world is to be spiritually re-born. It cannot be driven into righteousness at the point of the sword; nor crushed into it by the weight of law. Civilization will not save it. Human culture will not perfect it. These methods have been tried in the past and they have failed. Other social experiments have been inspired by a loftier ideal, and have often been prosecuted in a more Christian spirit, but they, too, must fail. Fallen humanity can be redeemed neither by political economy nor by philanthropy. The economic laws of production and distribution need to be understood; the relations of wealth and labor need to be readjusted; but social redemption is not in these. God's poor must be better fed and clothed and housed and furnished with the requirements of respectable life; but the social reformer who obtains only this good for the people, and leaves the rest to the blind forces of "evolution," is doomed to disappointment. Every child born into the world has the right to a fair chance in life; but a fair chance will not insure the child's salvation.

The advantages which will accrue to any person or to any people by improved social and industrial conditions are very apparent. No one questions them. These material benefits are to be sought for the poor and wretched everywhere. We plead for them. Every sentiment of humanity and religion prompts us to supply this need. We do not propose to rest until the oppressed people of our land are enabled to enjoy all the comforts of our civilization, and take their full part in the larger life of the nation. But the truth which is forced upon our attention by the word of Christ forbids us to rely upon any external advantages whatsoever, whether social, industrial or civil, for the elevation of races or the saving of men. The constructive forces of humanity are in the soul. New life must be developed from within. Men must be furnished with new ideals, morally worthy and spiritually uplifting; ideals of righteousness and ideals of brotherly love, ideals of reverence and of faith toward God. With these new standards of excellence set before the mind as coveted objects of attainment, the man, or the nation, will move steadily forward to a higher and a nobler life.

This is the method of Jesus. He stands above the world and lifts it, by the influence of the Spirit, by the power of divine ideals. No man ever felt the weight of the world's woe as did the Man of Nazareth and Calvary. He carried the burdens of the poor with a more than human sympathy. But, to His clear vision, the sole source of human sorrow, the primal cause of social wrong is sin; sin entailed, and bearing in its train down through the generations the terrible inheritance of spiritual blindness and social degradation. Our Lord's one hope for the world was, therefore, in lifting men out of this hell of lust and low desire and all selfish and sordid views of life, into the heaven of noble aspirations, unselfish purposes, and pure and holy joys. It was in the enthronement in human hearts of the moral and the spiritual ideal. "Ye must be born from above." And that, being interpreted, means, not only that the man must be restored more completely than before to the normal use of his natural faculties; but that the inward man must be created anew, and infused from above with new spiritual power. A radical change must be effected in the whole conception and spirit of the man's life, toward both God and the world.

To do Christ's work in the Christly way we are, therefore, to put ourselves into the current of Christ's outflowing life, and so receive it and interpret it to the lowest and the lowliest of men, that through us they shall feel Him. Living in the light of God and holding such a spirit in exercise as it would see translated in others, the Christian church is to take these dependent ones into its heart of hearts and beget, if by the grace of God we may, the spirit of Christ's life into them.

This I conceive to be the accepted purpose and method of the great missionary society in whose interest we are called together on this occasion. Bishop Tanner said, most felicitously, at the Jubilee meeting last year at Boston: "It was to an ideal that the men who originated the American Missionary Association consecrated their lives." To this ideal let us, their successors, be ever faithful. The ideal of a human brotherhood, embracing every human being, each individual of which is a man, with all the possibilities of a redeemed manhood in him. To the complete realization of this sublime ideal we do, with reverent trust in God and firm reliance upon His Holy Spirit, consecrate our lives, and in all our work we would strive to imitate the methods of the Master!

But we have to confess once and again that it is not easy for us to rise to the high spiritual conceptions of Jesus, and consistently apply to the social duties of the hour the simple teaching of our Lord concerning the power of the New Life. There are those to whom this Association is called to minister, the conditions of whose lives, in poverty, ignorance and degradation, are such as to make all direct spiritual appeal difficult, if not impossible. How can we hope to create high spiritual ideals in the tens of thousands of Negro families who live in one-roomed cabins, or in the thousands of Indian families whose homes is still the tepee? Is it not true for them, and others like them, that their condition determines their character? Can these men ever be saved under the conditions in which they live? Must we not reverse the order already given, and put social regeneration first, that personal regeneration may follow after? Are not environments to be changed before hearts can be changed? Are we not called, under these circumstances, to preach a gospel of cleanliness and decency, a gospel of thrift and industry, instead of a gospel of high spiritual ideals?

No, not "instead of." It is certainly true, that for those who have no fair chance in the world, adverse conditions limit the possibilities of character. The work of Christianity is often to create and make permanent those favorable conditions under which character can be developed. This is not materialism. It is rather the preparing of good ground for religion. A faithful husbandman will give attention to the preparing of the ground as well as to the sowing of the seed. But he will not commit the folly of supposing that the prepared ground, without the seed, will produce a harvest. It is a beautiful work which this Association takes upon itself, in maintaining industrial schools and model farms, teaching trades and training in domestic duties,—stooping to the lowliest services for the lowly folks to whom it ministers. But, along with all these, a Christian society like this should not, and it does not, forget to send its teachers of religion. For permanent results it puts its trust in the spiritualizing and uplifting force of its little churches—planted among the poorest of the poor—where they are striving to cherish and to exhibit the true ideal of Christian character, and to preach Jesus Christ as the only Saviour from social sins. Industrial improvement is greatly to be desired for these people. It is indispensable to their elevation. But it will not save them. A distinguished preacher, speaking recently for his own people, asks the pertinent question, "Is the Negro's elevation to come from the quickening and enlightening of his higher nature? Is it to come from below, or from above?" The question answers itself. All efforts along industrial lines are to be kept subordinate to spiritual ideals. The Negro, like other men, must be "born from above."

Just so it is with the splendid schools of this Association. From the well developed university, with its conspicuous site and imposing buildings, to the humblest schoolhouse, hidden away in the mountain forest, with its few self-sacrificing teachers,—what a noble record these schools have made! The Congregational churches of America have reason to be grateful to God, for their educational work among these so-called "inferior" races. The work already accomplished has demonstrated to the nation the aptitude of these races for intellectual development. Multitudes of them have been trained for, and have entered into, positions of influence and leadership among their own people.

But the chief value of these schools of ours is after all not intellectual; it is moral and spiritual. It is to be found, not in what they have taught, but in what they have inspired. Their crown of success has been won, not in the little learning that has been received by the ignorant, but in the characters that have been developed by the weak and the dependent. It is said of Bronson Alcott, that he began his school by asking each child, "What did you come here for?" After it was generally agreed that the children came to school to learn, the next question was, "To learn what?" A good deal of discussion among the boys and girls presently produced the answer, "To learn to behave well." When you probe it deeply, that is the heart of the whole matter. Behavior is the end of education. Intellectual culture is for service and for life. We educate to save!

In order to do this, something more than the communication of knowledge is necessary.

"Who loves not knowledge? Who shall rail
Against her beauty? May she mix
With men and prosper! Who shall fix
Her pillars? Let her work prevail!"
But "Let her know her place;
She is the second, not the first."
"A higher hand must make her mild,
If all be not in vain; and guide
Her footsteps moving side by side
With Wisdom, like a younger child;
For she is earthly, of the mind,
But Wisdom heavenly, of the soul."

There is no time when we so need to show our confidence in the higher power, in the wisdom, which is both heavenly and divine,—as when we undertake to lift whole races of undeveloped men to a worthier life by means of education. The Christian teachers we send out, go to these people on a holy and exalted mission. To them is given a Christly privilege. Coming into personal touch with youthful and receptive minds they may communicate the very life of God. Virtue goes forth from them; and these schools of ours become the sanctuaries of religion, temples of life, centers of spiritual light and blessing in the surrounding darkness. "Wisdom is the principal thing."

III. Our Lord's message of New Life for the world, has, so far, brought to our hearts the solemn sense of our social responsibilities; it has lightened up the path of duty, and made the way of human service clear before us; it comes to us now, with its glad assurance of a great and universal hope.

Jesus was an optimist. Not with a shallow optimism, that never looks beneath the surface of things, but deludes itself with a rosy colored view of human life. Nor with a complacent optimism, that is contented with a bit of sunshine that falls upon some pleasant place where it finds all things agreeable to itself. We have enough of such optimism as this, sometimes innocent and sometimes culpably ignorant, which goes singing through its idle holiday:

"God's in His heaven; All's right with the world!"

But not so did our Lord look out upon human life. His pitying glance penetrated to the very center of the world's woe. He knew what was in man. He knew what a terrible grip sin had on the hearts of men. He knew the devil, and had faced him. He knew how firmly he was seated as the power behind the throne of the human will. He saw the world prostrate, helpless, impotent, having neither desire for better things, nor power for their accomplishment.

But Jesus was an optimist, with the strong, calm faith of One who lived in the light of God, and felt the currents of the infinite Life surging through His whole being. He could go among the wretched and the evil, He could bear their sorrows upon His soul and carry their grief, He could minister in love to all and give His life for the sins of men, and rejoice, always, in the certain hope of a regenerated world and the triumphs of the time to come!

Men build their hopes on some newly devised plan of moral reform, and set out to reconstruct society according to some carefully adjusted system of checks and counterchecks upon man's selfishness and lust—some new laws, or new learning, or new environments—only to find their cherished plans impracticable and their labor without reward. How many of our generous spirited young men and women have, in recent times, gone down into the slums and set their hands to the hard work of raising up the fallen, and then, have returned weary and heavy laden, or have labored on, heroically, through all the disenchantments of a chastened experience and a disappointed hope. But Jesus, Man of sorrows and Saviour of the lost, never, for a moment, lost His high serenity; because He did the work of the Father in the joy of a quenchless hope. "Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again!" For in such new birth, life is given to the world which no power of earth or hell can resist or overcome; new life, life from above, eternal life, in which there is spiritual health and complete salvation. It comes to the world like the rising of a tide with the power of the boundless sea behind it, and it shall flow through all the narrow channels of men's souls, until they are filled with the spirit of righteousness and love, which this life is.

Then the Kingdom of God shall come. It may be long, but it is sure. Those who wait for it, wait in hope. Those who work for it, work in the strength of the Almighty God, who sent His Son into the world, that we might have life through Him, and might have it more abundantly.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of this Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of its failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting, at an Annual Meeting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-Eight of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-Two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-Five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled: An Act relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars; * and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUITVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Monday of each month, at four o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting, the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Southern Work.
3. A Committee on Indian and Chinese Work.
4. A Committee on Collections.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of five members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN AND INDIAN AND CHINESE WORK.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Southern Work and of that on Indian and Chinese Work to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to them desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the Missionary and Educational Work of the Association in their respective departments. They shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to them, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee. Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee), and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON COLLECTIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Collections to consider each month the collecting work and to report thereon to the Executive Committee, and to prepare for the consideration of the Committee plans for increasing the collections.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first four Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the Committee on Southern Work, or to the Committee on Indian and Chinese Work, according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient work of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.
5. Reading the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Southern Work. (3) Indian and Chinese Work. (4) Collection. (5) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive Session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

FIFTY-SECOND ANNUAL MEETING
OF THE
American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-Second Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the South Congregational Church, Concord, N. H., Oct. 25, 1898, at 3 o'clock P.M., and was called to order by Rev. Frederick A. Noble, Vice-President.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. James A. Chamberlin, of New Jersey, and Rev. Samuel P. Leeds, of New Hampshire.

Rev. Henry A. Hazen, of Massachusetts, was elected Secretary, and Rev. Frank G. Woodworth, of Mississippi, Assistant Secretary.

A nominating committee was elected, consisting of Rev. George E. Hall and Rev. George E. Lovejoy, New Hampshire; Rev. Charles M. Southgate, Massachusetts; Prof. Alfred T. Perry, of Connecticut; Hon. H. M. Bowden, of Massachusetts.

On motion of Dr. Strieby, it was voted that the printed programme be adopted provisionally.

An address of welcome was made by Rev. Henry P. Dewey, of New Hampshire, and responded to by Vice-President Noble.

Treasurer H. W. Hubbard then read his report, which, with the certificate of the Auditors, was received and placed on file.

The Fisk University Quartette sang one of the plantation songs.

The report of the Executive Committee was read by Rev. James W. Cooper, of Connecticut.

The Committee on Nominations made the following report, which was adopted:

To Preside at the Communion Service.—Rev. Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois; Rev. James L. Fowle, Turkey.

Deacons.—Mr. Edward Wilder, Massachusetts; Messrs. John Kimball, Edward A. Moulton, Joseph T. Sleeper, John C. Thorne, New Hampshire; Mr. David N. Camp, Connecticut; Mr. E. L. Tead, Massachusetts.

To Lead the Prayer Meeting Wednesday Morning.—Rev. Ross C. Houghton, Massachusetts.

Committee on Indian Work.—Rev. James G. Merrill, Maine; Rev. Arthur Little, Massachusetts; Cullen B. Foote, Connecticut; Rev. James A. Chamberlin, New Jersey; Lewis B. Stillman, Esq., Connecticut.

Committee on Chinese Work.—Rev. Willard B. Thorp, New York; Rev. Frank G. Clark, New Hampshire; Rev. Byron R. Lang, Ohio; H. Porter Smith, Massachusetts; Arthur L. Douglass, Vermont.

Committee on Southern Educational Work.—Prof. George B. Stevens, Connecticut; Rev. Samuel L. Gerould, New Hampshire; W. W. Taggart, Delaware; Rev. George W. Reynolds, Maine; W. H. Catlin, Connecticut.

Committee on Work in American Highlands.—Rev. William E. Barton, Massachusetts; Rev. Asahel L. Clark, Rhode Island; E. B. Wilder, Mass.; Rev. Lester H. Elliot, Vermont; R. F. Field, New York.

The devotional service was conducted by Dr. Strieby. Letters from the field were read by Rev. Joseph E. Roy, and the exercises were participated in by Rev. W. C. Pond, California; Rev. C. L. Hall, South Dakota; Rev. Frank G. Woodworth, Mississippi; Rev. G. W. Moore, Tennessee; Prof. W. H. H. Hart, District of Columbia; Rev. Elijah Horr, Massachusetts.

After singing by the Jubilee Singers, the Association adjourned until 7.30 P.M.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening service began at 7.30 P.M. Music was rendered by the quartette of the South Church.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. Allen E. Cross and Rev. Edward S. Tead, of Massachusetts.

The sermon was preached by Rev. George A. Gordon, of Massachusetts, from the text Gal. 4: 26.

The communion service followed, conducted by Rev. Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois, and Rev. James L. Fowle, Turkey, after which adjournment was had until 8.30 A.M. Wednesday.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

At 8.30 o'clock devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Ross C. Houghton, of Massachusetts.

Minutes of the previous day were read and approved.

On motion of Rev. George S. Dickerman, of Connecticut, it was voted that opportunity be given at the business hour of the afternoon to any members of the Association to make inquiries concerning the management of the Association during the past year or recent years.

The address on Chinese work was given by Rev. Willard B. Thorp, of New York.

A missionary address upon the Chinese work in California was made by Rev. William C. Pond, of California.

The nominating committee reported the following business committee, which was elected: Rev. Henry P. Dewey, Rev. Franklin D. Ayer, Hon. J. B. Walker, Rev. Burton W. Lockhart, Rev. George H. Reed, all of New Hampshire.

The Jubilee Singers gave two selections.

The report and address on Indian work were given by Rev. James G. Merrill, of Maine. The report was accepted, and after discussion, was recommitted to the committee to formulate a resolution embodying the substance of the suggestions made in debate.

The report of the Finance Committee presented by Rodney Dennis, Esq., of Connecticut, was accepted and placed on file.

Rev. William Hayes Ward, of New York, addressed the Association on the need of higher education.

The Committee on Indian Work made the following report, which was adopted:

The Committee on Indian Work would report with great brevity,

First. We rejoice with the constituency of the society, in view of the effective work of the Association during the past year in behalf of the Indians, as found in the report submitted to us.

Second. We feel that the time has come for this Association to appeal to its constituency, and through them to the people of the United States and the government at Washington, looking toward radical changes in our Federal treatment of these falsely called "wards of the nation," to the end that they may become, as soon as possible, true citizens of the United States. We believe that no solution of the Indian problem can be reached until the present tribal system be disregarded, government reservations be abolished, and the present appropriations for the material support of the Indian be discontinued. We believe that this Association and its individual constituency should vigorously and persistently exert every influence toward the accomplishment of these reforms upon their representatives in Washington and leaders of public opinion in their respective communities. Meanwhile, our efforts should be vastly increased that Christian education, both industrial and literary, and the savory influence of Jesus Christ and the nurture of the Church may be given those who are now hindered in their development as men, as citizens, as Christians, by a system of Federal patronage that, however well intended, works evil to the Indian.

Third. Recognizing that our government bears a friendly attitude toward these reforms, we would recommend also that a committee be appointed to visit the President of the United States, Secretary of the Interior, and others who may have power in the Administration, to urge immediate action, that the policy now theoretically held by the government shall be put into execution.

At 12 o'clock the Association adjourned until 2 P.M.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Association met at 2 o'clock, and prayer was offered by Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee.

The order of the afternoon, questions in regard to the management of the Association, was taken up, and after a few questions, it was voted that all questions be referred to the business committee.

The Jubilee Singers rendered two selections.

An address on "The Southern Educational Work of the American Missionary Association, Evolutionary, not Revolutionary," was given by Rev. William L. Tenney, of Massachusetts.

The report of the Committee on Southern Educational Work was presented by Prof. Geo. B. Stevens, of Connecticut, who followed the report with an address.

Two plantation melodies were sung by the Jubilee Singers, after which special prayer for the educational institutions was offered by Rev. Arthur Little, of Massachusetts.

An address on "Why the Higher Education is Needed" was given by Prof. William H. H. Hart, of Washington, D. C.

A song was rendered by the Fisk Quartette, after which Rev. Philip S. Moxom, of Massachusetts, delivered an address.

The report of the committee on rotation of office of members of the Executive Committee was presented by Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Massachusetts:

The committee appointed at the last annual meeting of the American Missionary Association to consider and report on change of term of service of the Executive Committee, has not been able to hold a meeting, but having discussed the matter by correspondence, are agreed on the following:

1. It is the judgment of the committee that rotation in office of the Executive Committees of our missionary societies is regarded as desirable by the large majority of their constituents.

2. Such rotation can best be arranged by choosing members for a considerable term in such order that as few as possible shall drop out in any one year.

We therefore recommend:

First, that the term of service of members of the Executive Committee be five years instead of three years, as at present.

Second, that three members be elected each year, in addition to those, if any, chosen to fill vacancies of unexpired terms.

Third, that no member who has served one full term of five years be eligible for re-election till one year has passed.

Fourth, that such changes be made in the Constitution of the society that these recommendations may be made effective.

Fifth, that if these changes to the Constitution be made at the next annual meeting, these recommendations shall take effect from the date of that meeting.

A. H. BRADFORD, G. R. LYMAN,
L. L. TAYLOR, A. E. DUNNING.
J. H. TWICHELL,

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO ART. V, SECOND PARAGRAPH.

At each annual meeting after the adoption of this article of the Constitution, three members of the executive committee shall be elected for the term of five years, and such other members as shall be required to fill vacancies. No member of the executive committee who has served one full term of five years shall be eligible for re-election till one year has passed.

The report was accepted and the question of its adoption made the first order of business for Thursday morning.

The nominating committee reported the following nominations, which were adopted:

Committee on Southern Church Work.—Rev. Charles H. Richards, Pennsylvania; Rev. Charles H. Oliphant, Massachusetts; Judge David Cross, Rev. Cassander C. Sampson, New Hampshire; George H. Cross, Vermont.

Finance Committee.—Irving C. Gaylord, Esq., New York; Hon. Henry E. Cobb, Massachusetts; John E. Leach, Esq., New York; Rowland G. Hazard, Esq., Rhode Island; George Wilcox, Esq., New York.

Committee Called for by Committee on Indian Work.—Rev. Frederick A. Noble, Illinois; Hon. William H. Haile, Massachusetts; Rev. Elijah Horr, Massachusetts; Rodney Dennis, Esq., Connecticut; Rev. James G. Merrill, Maine.

After prayer by Rev. De Witt S. Clark, of Salem, Mass., the Association adjourned until 7.30 P.M.

The evening service opened at 7.30 with congregational singing.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. Samuel L. Gerould, of New Hampshire, and Rev. Albert J. Lyman, of New York, followed by singing of the Jubilee Quartette.

Rev. William C. Pond, of California, made an address on some phases of work among the Chinese in California.

An address was made by Rev. Charles L. Hall, of North Dakota, on Indian work.

The Jubilee Quartette sang again.

Rev. Horace E. Partridge spoke upon Mountain Work.

A selection was rendered by the quartette of the South Church.

Mr. John W. Work, of Fisk University, spoke of the work of students of that institution.

The closing address was made by Rev. Charles M. Lamson, of Connecticut, on Nationalism.

After the benediction by Rev. Albert J. Lyman, of New York, the Association adjourned until 8.30 A.M. Thursday.

A Christian Endeavor rally was held at the same time in the North Church, presided over by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan.

Addresses were made by Rev. George H. Reed, of New Hampshire; Rev. Francis E. Clark, of Massachusetts; Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee, and representatives from the field, with music by the Jubilee Singers.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The devotional service at 8.30 was conducted by Rev. Frank G. Woodworth, of Mississippi.

The minutes of Wednesday were read and approved.

The report of the Committee on Rotation in Office of Members of the Executive Committee was adopted.

Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Massachusetts, gave notice of a proposed amendment to Art. V., second paragraph of the Constitution, to be acted upon next year, as follows:

"At each annul meeting after the adoption of this article of the Constitution, three members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of five years, and such other members as shall be required to fill vacancies. No member of the Executive Committee who has served one full term of five years shall be eligible for re-election till one year has passed."

On motion of Rev. Francis E. Clark, of Massachusetts, it was voted that the nominating committee be appointed by the President one year in advance of the meeting at which it is to serve.

On motion of Rev. John L. Sewell, of Massachusetts, it was voted that the nominating committee be instructed to report at least ten names as candidates for the five places to be filled on the Executive Committee.

The time of the business meeting for the afternoon was fixed at 3.30.

The report on Chinese Work was presented by Rev. Willard B. Thorp, of New York, and placed on file.

In the unavoidable absence of Rev. Amory H. Bradford, of New Jersey, and Rev. Dan F. Bradley, of Michigan, it was voted that their papers be published with the proceedings.

The business committee made the following special report, which was accepted and its suggestion referred to the Executive Committee:

"The question raised by Rev. George S. Dickerman, of Connecticut, in regard to the management of the American Missionary Association, having been referred to the business committee, the committee report that they have considered Mr. Dickerman's inquiries and the answers thereto by the secretaries of the Association, the executive board being present, and they see no occasion for any recommendations, but they suggest, simply for greater convenience in consulting the annual report, the consideration of the advisability of specifying the entire expense of each institution for the year."

Prayer was offered by Rev. Edward Robie, of New Hampshire.

Rev. William E. Barton, of Massachusetts, presented a report on Mountain Missions, which he followed by an address.

After singing by the Jubilee Quartette, Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee, gave a little sketch of the singers, Misses Grant and Haynes, and Messrs. Work and Greenlaw.

Southern Church Work was presented by Rev. Charles H. Richards, of Pennsylvania, in a report and an address. The recommendation of enlarged church work was referred to the Executive Committee.

Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee, made a missionary address.

The business committee made a report in answer to the question regarding the percentage of expenditure for administration, which was accepted, as follows:

The business committee, to which was referred the inquiry of Rev. John Curtis, of Hopkinton, N. H., concerning the percentage of receipts expended on mission fields, make the following report: It appears in the Treasurer's report that the receipts for the past year have been $327,487; expenses on mission fields, $228,161, or 84 per cent. of total receipts. Other expenses, $43,675, as follows: Publication, 2.9 per cent.; agencies, 4.6 per cent.; administration, 6.9 per cent.; interest and incidentals, 1.6 per cent., being 16 per cent. of the total receipts.

The report of the business committee on the request of the Anti-Saloon League was accepted and adopted as follows: Upon this request presented to the Association by the American Anti-Saloon League, this committee report, that, while they appreciate the beneficent work of reform which the League is doing, they deem it inexpedient to enter into formal relations with the League by naming a representative in its National Board of Directors and sending delegates to its annual convention.

After prayer by Rev. Franklin D. Ayer, of New Hampshire, the Association adjourned until afternoon.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON—WOMAN'S MEETING.

Dr. Frederick A. Noble presided. After singing by the congregation, prayer was offered by the President.

The Fisk Quartette gave a jubilee song.

The annual report of the Woman's Bureau was read by Miss D. E. Emerson, Secretary. Accepted and ordered filed.

Missionary addresses were made by Rev. Charles L. Hall, of North Dakota; Rev. William C. Pond, of California; Miss Anna H. Richardson, of Georgia.

The Jubilee Singers repeated by request, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord."

An address was made by Mrs. Kate Upson Clark, of Brooklyn, on "Character Building."

Missionary addresses were made by Miss Maud Summers, of North Carolina, and Miss M. L. Phillips, of Alabama.

Gates, LL.D., its profound regard for his eminent services to the Association, and the valued sympathy and co-operation in its work which he has so generously given in the past, and rejoices in the assurance of his continued interest.

On motion of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan, it was voted that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to consider the proportion of lay and clerical members in the Executive Committee.

Charles L. Mead, Esq., of New York; Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, and Rev. George R. Merrill, of Chicago, were appointed such committee.

It was voted that the place of next meeting and the preacher be referred to the Executive Committee.

Charles L. Mead, Esq., moved the adoption of the following resolution, which was by vote unanimously approved:

Resolved, That the Constitution be amended to make the membership of the executive committee consist of seven clergymen and eight laymen.

The amendment proposed by Rev. Albert E. Dunning in regard to rotation in office was also approved by vote.

The President appointed as nominating committee for next year, Rev. Charles M. Southgate, Massachusetts; Rev. Arthur Little, Massachusetts; Rev. Willard B. Thorp, of New York; Rev. Joseph A. Twichell, of Connecticut; Rev. Thomas B. McLeod, of New York.

A brief address was made by President Noble.

The records were read and approved, and the Secretary authorized to complete the records of the evening.

The Association adjourned until 7.30 P.M.

A social reception under direction of the ladies of the South and North Churches of Concord was given to the Association after the afternoon session.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The evening devotional exercises were conducted by Prof. Penniman, of Berea College, Kentucky, and Rev. George R. Reed, of the North Church, Concord, after which addresses were given by Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Massachusetts; President William J. Tucker, of Dartmouth College, and by President Noble.

During the evening a solo was rendered by Mrs. Brown, of the South Church choir, and plantation melodies were sung by the Jubilee Singers.

Resolutions of thanks to all who have made the meetings so successful were voted and responded to by the pastors of the South and North Churches of Concord.

The services closed with prayer and benediction by Secretary Strieby, after which the Association adjourned without day.

HENRY A. HAZEN, Secretary.
FRANK G. WOODWORTH,
Assistant Secretary.

Missionary addresses were made by Miss Maud Summers, of North Carolina, and Miss M. L. Phillips, of Alabama.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING.

The Association met in business session at 3.45 P.M., and was led in prayer by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan.

The report of the nominating committee was presented and accepted, and the following officers were elected by ballot for the ensuing year:

President, REV. F. A. NOBLE, Illinois.

Vice-Presidents.

REV. ALEXANDER MCKENZIE, Mass.
REV. HENRY HOPKINS, Mo.
REV. HENRY A. STIMSON, N. Y.
REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, Ohio.
CHAS. L. MEAD, ESQ., N. Y.

Corresponding Secretaries.

REV. A. F. BEARD, New York.
REV. F. P. WOODBURY, New York.
REV. C. J. RYDER, New York.

Recording Secretary.

REV. M. E. STRIEBY, New York.

Treasurer.

H. W. HUBBARD, ESQ., New York.

Auditors.

CHARLES N. SCHENCK, ESQ., N. Y. EDWIN H. BAKER, ESQ., Conn.

Executive Committee for Three Years.

REV. HOWARD S. BLISS, New Jersey. REV. ELIJAH HORR, Mass.
FRANK M. BROOKS, ESQ., N.Y. CLARENCE KENYON, ESQ., N.Y.
WILLIS D. THOMPSON, ESQ., N. H.

Rev. Dr. Strieby was elected, by a rising vote, Honorary Secretary for the coming year.

On motion of Rev. John L. Sewell, of Massachusetts, it was voted that the nominating committee for future annual meetings be instructed to report by printed ballot as early as practicable in the meeting, and that at least two names be reported for each vacancy in the Executive Committee.

Rev. Arthur Little, of Massachusetts, moved the following resolution, which was adopted:

That this Association expresses to the retiring President, Merrill E. Gates, LL.D., its profound regard for his eminent services to the Association, and the valued sympathy and co-operation in its work which he has so generously given in the past, and rejoices in the assurance of his continued interest.

On motion of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan, it was voted that a committee of three be appointed by the chair to consider the proportion of lay and clerical members in the Executive Committee.

FIFTY-SECOND ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

OF THE

American Missionary Association,

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30, 1898.

GENERAL SURVEY.

Since the last survey of the fields which we occupy no marked changes have occurred. The year has been one of extreme solicitude in view of the disturbed financial condition of the country, and the severe retrenchments in our treasury. The field of support has shared with the field of service our anxieties and our hopes.

SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

The statistical statements of our Southern educational work are as follows:

Chartered Institutions	6	Totals:	Schools	71
Normal and Graded Schools	40		Instructors	395
Common Schools	25		Pupils	11,662

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

It has ever been the policy of the Association in all schools to begin with elementary grades and to retain all grades as schools advanced in their courses of study. Therefore our normal schools and even our higher institutions provide that those who can secure only elementary instruction shall have the opportunity for this. This provision in our advanced schools furnishes practice-teaching to pupils who themselves are preparing to teach others. We have no statistics to follow those who go forth by the hundreds, thus reaching thousands year by year with elementary education. This is known to us, though the work has not come within our reports. The special elementary schools under our care are chiefly in isolated places, not cared for by public schools, and are usually associated with our rural churches.

GRADED AND NORMAL SCHOOLS.

The system of schools, like the Association itself, has been a providential growth. The schools have been located where the providence of God was plain, and when planted have taken deep root. They are now more than so many local institutions, they are parts of a related system, both in ideas and methods. Accommodating their details to the special environments and necessities, they all bear a common stamp and are actuated by a common purpose. The ultimate purpose is more than a philanthropic zeal to uplift a race and to furnish the preparation for better chances in this life, though it includes this. In the one supreme purpose to bring souls to Christ and into His life is found the oneness of our schools from lowest to highest. This oneness, both of purpose and of method with the common reason and experience in them, will assist us to survey our wide field—this year—as a whole rather than by reiterated and detailed descriptions, and may furnish as correct a view of work as the limitations of time will allow.

In looking over the various catalogues of our schools one cannot fail to remark the increasing number of our teachers who have won their degrees in colleges and universities. This is due, in part, to the influence of the "Student Volunteer Movement," which has directed the attention of college students to missionary fields, and which has led many of them to consecrate themselves to our work because of its missionary features. These bring into their work much spiritual power. It was Hugh Miller who wrote: "The disseminator of mere useful knowledge takes aim at the popular ignorance; but his inept and unscientific gunnery does not include in its calculations the parabolic curve of man's spiritual nature; and so aiming direct at the mark, he aims too low, and the charge falls short." Those who aim first of all at the humanitarian or materialistic aspects of life aim too low. It is to the emphasis placed upon the fact that we are seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness that we can avail ourselves of the increasing number of thoroughly educated and consecrated missionary teachers. We have not professed to extend pecuniary inducements to secure these, and it is due to Christian consecration that there is no lack of those who are ready to accept missionary work with missionary support.

We acknowledge with gratitude to God the reports from our schools of many conversions among our pupils. No part of our work is richer in the privilege of the gospel than this which brings souls to Christ in youth, and which continues daily influence through the year to strengthen and confirm the Christian life.

The exceptional influence of our schools has been revealed to us this year in the exhibition of devotion to our country. The flag of our country has waved over our schoolhouses for many a year, when oftentimes it could be seen nowhere else in the same region, though happily this is no longer true. Our pupils have been taught that they are Americans, and belong to a country. When, therefore, the appeal of patriotism went over the land it was no surprise to find that in some of our schools the students who had dropped books to take rifles were sufficient in number to cause serious modifications of the commencement programmes. We have not heard that any one of them has reflected dishonor upon the institution where he learned to love his country as truly and to serve her as faithfully as did any of the white heroes.

It is gratifying to be able to report on the part of all a hearty co-operation in meeting the greatly reduced appropriations of our treasury with a willing economy, and oftentimes with necessarily increased duties. Where we could not do as we would have done, were it not for the hard times, hard for givers, hard for the Association and hard for the schools alike, the hardness has been less trying by reason of cheerful acquiescence in necessitous conditions. We have had reason to "glory in tribulations also," that when some schools were notified of our inability to sustain them last year as formerly, the teachers did not leave their work, but voluntarily, with the aid of the colored people among whom they worked, Northern friends, and their own personal efforts, made good the severe reductions. Sometimes, like the "Lincoln School" at Marion, Ala., the "Storrs School" at Atlanta, Ga., and the "Black Mountain Academy" at Evarts, Ky., the people, under the courageous leading of the teachers, assumed almost the entire responsibility of self-support. The Mountain School at La Follette (Big Creek Gap, Tenn.) and the "Lincoln School" at All Healing, King's Mountain, N. C., also deserve especial thanks.

In several localities our schools have suffered somewhat in attendance through the prevalence of smallpox. None of our teachers, however, left his or her post of duty, even when permission was given, and nowhere were our schools closed. Some of our larger schools lost time, pupils and tuition in consequence of the yellow fever in the autumn months. Because of these two maladies the colored people have had a year of exceptional trial, but the way in which they have denied themselves to retain their children in the schools is in evidence that they were never more earnest for education than they now are, while they have a much better comprehension of the education they need.

Our schools in cities have been filled with pupils, the public schools being generally too few and insufficient to accommodate the pupils who apply for admission. Population increasingly seeks the cities, where the colored people think to get more steady work and more satisfactory pay. Coming in greater number than can be provided for, the public schools often fail to accommodate above one-half of the pupils of school age. Besides this, in many cases parents have sufficient reasons to seek the advantages of schools which are positively Christian; where the Bible is a text-book, and where the teachers, from Northern homes, churches and institutions, bring their heredity and their power with them. We are confirmed in our judgment that our schools in cities, with their evangelizing spirit, have as great a work to do now as ever.

Several important schools are now under the direction and care of the graduates of our own institutions, not to mention the common schools taught by colored teachers. It gives us pleasure to mention with approval their work in their positions of trust and influence.

Warner Institute, at Jonesboro, Tenn., has been closed during the year because of our necessary retrenchments. It has been a loss deeply felt in that locality. Arrangements have been made, however, to restore this school the coming year on a reduced basis, the town of Jonesboro assisting in this with the public fund.

The school building at Helena, Ark., has also been vacant during the year.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

The Mountain Schools, which are 12 in number, and which enroll 1,605 students with 51 teachers, report a prosperous year of earnest work. Grand View Normal, Grand View, Tenn., has taken a new life of strength. A new building to replace one destroyed by fire is nearly completed. Williamsburg Academy and the Academy at Pleasant Hill, Tenn., are doing much to change the thought and order of life in the region which they influence. Williamsburg Academy reports the gift of Hon. and Mrs. R. D. Hill, of Williamsburg, Ky., for a new dormitory in memory of their son. This Christian education, under the direction of experienced Northern teachers with their influences, is bringing incalculable gladness to the mountains.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS.

These are Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.; Straight University, New Orleans, La., and Tillotson College, Austin, Texas. Avery Institute, Charleston, S. C., is a chartered institution, also, of high grade.

These institutions have distinctive college studies, in which a certain number of students who have approved themselves in preparatory grades, and who have the ability and courage to take up higher studies, continue until they can pass the examinations required for their degrees. Since, however, most of these must work their way through the long course, subject to many interruptions, as they go out to earn enough for a succeeding year, the call for ability and courage on their part is imperative. There are relatively few who can meet the hard conditions and survive them. This may be a sufficient answer to those who at times discourse without knowledge upon the supposition that we are seeking to force aorist verbs and historical infinitives down the throats of all colored students who attend our higher institutions, and as if this were the height of educational folly, as indeed it would be.

But when we find how difficult it is to secure trained and thoughtful men of thorough education, with adequate preparation for efficient service as pastors of our churches, men who have been steadied in their discipline sufficiently to continuously hold up high ideas to a people who need them, until their work is justified, we are warned anew not to accept any plea for superficiality in education of this people. We cannot agree with those who feel that mere elementary instruction is sufficient. If among the relative few who seek this higher education some fail, the failure is not a question of race nor of color. Not all the graduates of New England colleges become conspicuous, but the colleges live on. Our higher institutions in the South, which are giving a race their chance, deserve the sympathy of those who believe that some things are higher than those which are lower. These institutions now under denominational direction should have our first care, and should not fail of the most generous help from those who know the history of Christian education in New England and the West. Our churches would be recreant to Congregational history to fail in sympathy toward these institutions which were ordained in the interest of Christianity. Intelligent consideration for the religious welfare of this people must provide for such institutions. Out of them are to come Christian churches with their fruitage in Christian homes and Christian civilization.

The time should not be distant when a comprehensive benevolence shall assure the life of these essential institutions by such endowments as shall perpetuate their sympathy and co-ordination with the denominations which have nourished them. We ask attention anew to the importance of endowment as the highest missionary wisdom in the most hopeful and most needy missionary field in our country.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

The Association magnifies the importance of industrial instruction. It is most necessary. This kind of useful knowledge is needed. It has been our purpose to regard its importance and place. During the year, for boys, wood-working, iron-working, tool-making, shoemaking, printing, painting, architecture and agriculture have been systematically taught. The samples of work sent to the Centennial Exhibition at Nashville received great praise; those which are exhibited at Concord will attest to the thoroughness and quality of teaching, and to the degree of attainment on the part of the pupils. Varied industries for girls, also, are uncommonly well taught in all our schools. Some pupils become very skillful in cutting and making garments, in cooking and in nursing the sick.

Special notice should be made of the Joseph K. Brick Agricultural, Industrial and Normal School, Enfield, N. C., founded by Mrs. Brick as a memorial of her husband. It has been presented by her this year with a large and tasteful dormitory for young men. It is built of permanent materials. Mrs. Brick has added to her gifts likewise this year a two-storied building for manual instruction in carpentry and forging, and a spacious new barn for the Agricultural Department. These three additions for this new plant are gratefully acknowledged.

Certain material improvements have been made at Dorchester Academy, McIntosh, Ga., through special benevolence, and at Pleasant Hill Academy among the Highlanders of the Cumberland Plateau.

A school edifice is now in the process of construction at Grand View, Tenn., to be paid for with the proceeds of the insurance of a former building destroyed by fire. The girls' dormitory at Tougaloo University, Miss., which was burned down last November, is being replaced by an enlarged and substantial brick structure.

SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

During the year our Church work, both in the Southern lowlands and mountains, has been carried on with devotion and self-denial. Nearly a thousand members have been added on confession of faith. Pastors have cheerfully increased their work by taking on additional fields of service. Churches have been combined into circuits, a single minister covering appointments with three, four, five, and sometimes even six different churches. No new mountain church has been taken upon our roll this year, and only eight other churches in the South.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of Churches	202
Ministers and Missionaries	138
Number of Church Members	11,061
Added during the year	1,222
Added by profession of faith	991
Scholars in Church and Mission Sunday-schools	15,059

There have been many impressive and fruitful revival services. Everywhere these churches have borne witness to the essential unity of morality and religion in a true Christianity.

About ten years ago Prof. Graham Taylor, in the report to our Committee on Church Work, said: "These little church groups are at once the prime sources and the constituent elements of the new Christian civilization which already heralds the coming of the kingdom to those neglected, outcast peoples, to secure whose human rights, Christian privileges and Church fellowship is the first, loudest, longest call upon the Congregational churches of America. In the accomplishment of this great achievement, loyalty to the common faith and to our own polity, as well as to the teachings of experience, demanded only the new application of the old prime factors of God's own choice, the local church with its evangelism and Christian nurture."

The repeated retrenchments in church work, forced upon the Association by its lessened resources, have necessitated the decrease or withdrawal of aid from many of our small and weak churches in the South. To some extent the loss is seeming rather than real. The mission work done in behalf of the people is not dead nor lost, although the local organization has ceased to be.

The seeds planted by our school-work of over thirty years have been fructifying in many communities. Families are growing up discontented with the oldtime churches so intensely sectarian, so intolerant of intelligence and sobriety, and so tolerant of the vices. The demand for personal honesty and purity, as well as for education in the ministry, is breaking into old and corrupt though powerful ecclesiasticisms. Protests organize into protestantism, and withdrawals from membership group themselves into separatist churches. When a prominent colored man of the South can say, "more than two-thirds of the Negro ministers are mentally and morally unfit for their positions," it is not strange that fathers and mothers who are trying to build decent homes withdraw their children and themselves from churches dominated by corrupt pastors. In a given neighborhood, these protestants are usually but few as compared with the multitude. They are almost always poor. Many of them may have but little book knowledge, but they stand at the front of what may become a mighty movement. But here and there they are striving to organize what they call free churches, and are declaring independence of the old iron ecclesiasticisms. When they learn that our fellowship stands for the same principles, they ask recognition and such aid as we can give.

Three years ago the Executive Committee reaffirmed the sense of the importance of church work among the Negroes, urging that it be pushed in every direction to the full extent of the financial ability of the Association. In fulfillment of this vote over forty new churches have come into our fellowship, eight of them during the present year.

In some cases these missions can hardly be termed churches. In membership small, in property poor, still they consist of those who have joined hands on the cardinal principles of a free church, equal personal rights and moral character. Some of these groups have been received, as seed is received in its promise of fruition. Many applications from other motives are rejected. Some which seem worthy are held in abeyance. In the Carolinas and Georgia, although separately small and insignificant, these little churches of the back country which have come to us already number in the aggregate more than a thousand members.

SANTEE NORMAL TRAINING SCHOOL, NEB.

The fundamental purpose of the Santee Normal Training School is the preparation of Indian young men and women for missionary and educational leadership among their own people. It is the chief center of the work of our Association among the Indians. Active Christian and working churches are the result of Christian education. Schools which do not and cannot prepare missionary teachers, preachers and other Christian leaders do not meet the deepest needs.

Our Normal Training School at Santee represents all portions of our Indian mission field. Its pupils are carefully chosen from those who would come to us from other schools, or who begin in our smaller mission schools, or who may be specially selected in our out-station fields. Our out-station missionary work is dependent upon the leaders whom we train at Santee.

Homelikeness is a distinguishing feature of our Santee school. The dormitories are consequently small and numerous, each in charge of a Christian woman who appreciates her responsibilities and culture-opportunities in the mothering of her flock. Academic instruction is carefully developed according to the peculiarities of Indian pupils and their best fitting for missionary service.

To stimulate the further development of our native teachers and preachers in the out-station mission fields, a Correspondence Institute is conducted at Santee.

FORT BERTHOLD MISSION, N. DAK.

The year's work began with another great retrenchment. Radical measures had to be taken. To supply the lack of help in the out-stations, which really means the evangelistic work for the whole people, the superintendent and wife gave up their home—the home of twenty-one years at Fort Berthold—and moved to the center of Indian population at Elbowoods, N. D. This was originally an out-station, but is now the site of the Government agency. From this point all parts of the agency can be better reached, and visitors from all directions oftener seen. This change left the boarding-school in the hands of the teacher there, with the help of a weekly visit from the superintendent.

An industrial teacher with a family was secured. This made a home for the lady teachers. The school had to be cut down, and those waiting to come in had to be refused. Some of the older pupils of the previous year were not taken back again after the summer vacation. The young plant was cut back to fit the pot.

With the help of volunteer church-workers, meetings have been held at seven places on the reservation. Six adults have been added by confession and baptism to the churches, for steps have been taken to form a second church. Fourteen children of Christian parents have been baptized. Nearly two hundred have been connected with the Sabbath-schools.

The Mandan people at the lower settlement have been holding their own meetings and raising money for their own work. They had a great Christmas celebration of their own planning, the first for that tribe. The Ree people have begun a log chapel for themselves. This movement they initiated themselves and they have put their own money and labor into it. They have also donated above forty dollars to the American Missionary Association, and given a total of about $107 to the missionary and benevolent work of the Congregational churches during the year.

OAHE AND CHEYENNE RIVER, N. DAK.

The necessitated withdrawal of aid from the Oahe school last year came as a great blow upon those who felt it to be an essential outgrowth of the work in the Cheyenne River Fields. They did not see how they could accept the closing of the school. So, although they had no visible means of support, they told the Indians who anxiously asked them for the school to send their children and promised to take care of them and teach them, trusting in the Lord for the support of the work. Friends at the Mohonk Conference and elsewhere came to the rescue with pledges of enough to carry the school through the year.

The workers feel that the year has been a successful one. The children have, for the most part, been very tractable and teachable. The school closed early in June with appropriate exercises. The work among the various Cheyenne River stations has gone hopefully forward through the year.

STANDING ROCK AGENCY, N. DAK.

In the Standing Rock Agency the conditions of the work have greatly improved under the new agent.

The Grand River people are rejoicing in their new chapel, having out of their poverty been giving for several years till they have raised $400. There is need for two new chapels, and two more native workers.

The Government schools are doing all the school work now, every healthy child between the ages of six and sixteen being gathered into them.

The people contributed nearly one dollar per church member to their native missionary society. They are helping themselves in helping others, and in this they are growing each year. This is the great promise in the work.

ROSEBUD AGENCY, S. DAK.

At the Rosebud Agency, with its auxiliary missions, the year opened inauspiciously. The reduction in support meant a great deal in this new and growing field. The work has not been without cheering results. It shows the largest gain in church membership of any year. The new members are almost all young men and women, some of whom have grown up from childhood under missionary care and instruction. The church work is scattered over a wide territory, meetings being held in the houses of the members. The native workers have been constantly itinerants. The superintendent writes, "We need shelter. We need two new churches. We need them badly. We can't survive long without them."

MONTANA.

The work in Montana is still carried on by our devoted missionaries in the face of some discouragements, but with the incitement of a steady advance by the Crows in spite of the many hindrances put in their way. A flourishing Christian Endeavor Society has been organized.

ALASKA.

Perhaps the most noteworthy event of the year in our Alaskan Mission has been the heroic service of Mr. Lopp in driving the reindeer herd 700 miles for the rescue of the ice-imprisoned seamen. He had to leave his wife alone and meet the perils of the wilderness in the face of the prediction by the old Eskimos that he could never reach his destination. "It was a great trial," he writes, "of our faith, but we have to trust for so many things up here. While out on the trip we knew we would be remembered at the weekly prayer-meeting of our Eskimo Christians here, and I think they feel now that their prayers were not unheard." He speaks of the joy of seeing the young people faithful and growing into Christian manhood and womanhood. Decided opposition is encountered from the conjurers, but is overcome through the gratitude awakened by the charitable work of the missionaries. In the last report he tells of a destructive epidemic from which many have died. "Entire families were taken down. People became afraid to bury the dead, so we had to bury them. Some of the very sick moved their tents near our house, for their own people were afraid to live with them or administer to their wants. We have had orphan babes to look after." These ministrations have softened the hearts of the people. The benefit of the mission school work is very marked. Those who have come ashore from the ships find the natives cleaner, more intelligent-looking, and superior in every way to those seen along the Siberian Coast. In every aspect the Alaskan work is encouraging.

CHINESE MISSIONS, CAL.

CHINESE STATISTICS.

Schools, including Japanese	20
Teachers, including 9 Chinese	32
Professing faith during the year	70

Last year's statement was almost exclusively occupied with the really remarkable missionary work of our Chinese brethren in their native land. The work goes on with unabated interest and power, notwithstanding the special drafts made upon these brethren during the months now under review for the purchase and refitting of the new mission house.

The event which will make the past year specially memorable in the history of our Chinese work is the dedication and occupancy of the new and spacious Central Mission House, San Francisco. It occupies the best location for its purpose in the whole city. It contains a neat chapel capable of seating easily 250 people, which is in use Sundays as well as in the week, and every service held there tells for good. More than a dozen rooms are occupied or to be occupied by Chinese families, not only Christian families, but any others who desire to escape from the darkness and dirt of the dens they now occupy, and are willing to enter quarters where cleanliness is the law and where Christian influences are warm and strong. We hope thus to save the mothers and purify the foundations of Chinese life. The building is thus a church, a school and a Christian "Settlement." The schools have been larger this year than at any time before or since the Exclusion Law went into operation. They have also been for the most part deeply spiritual, and the harvests have been large.

The work for mothers and children goes on with increasing interest. It seems impossible that any souls anywhere can have more to overcome in seeking Christ than these Chinese mothers have. But our visitors are getting a hold upon them, and before the prayer of faith and the labor of love which these visitors put forth, mountains will give way. When these women begin, in the tongue so strange and hard to them, to say to our visitors, with eyes and motions that assure sincerity, "You my mother," the time is not far distant when they will claim the privilege of loving and trusting that mother's friend and Saviour.

DEPARTMENT OF SUPPORT.

We turn now from the Department of Missions in which are the expenditures, to the Department of Support, from which comes the income for this great work. There have been sacrifices here also. Many gifts come into our treasury which represent great self-denial, and with these gifts are the prayers and deepest sympathy of those whose personal sacrifices have made them possible. We desire to acknowledge these sacrifices which have been especially evident in these last years of stress and business disaster.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

The contributions from Women's Missionary Societies during the year have been $26,530.65. This is less than for two previous years when Jubilee Shares were contributed, but it is an advance of about $800 upon the average of contributions during the debt period. It is encouraging to find this increase in regular contributions. Thirty-three of the Women's State Unions have helped to this result.

Literature furnished by the American Missionary Association has been freely distributed, letters from the mission field have been widely circulated, speakers have been welcomed and every opportunity given for increasing a knowledge of the work. The secretary of the Woman's Bureau has given as much time as possible to the public work, especially in attending State and County meetings.

A good foundation has been laid of intelligent interest on the part of many auxiliaries; the debt has been paid, but at great sacrifice to the mission work. We now look for the Women's Societies to do their utmost to restore the work to its former strength by rapid advance in its support, since in its character and its methods it appeals so strongly to woman's sympathy and depends so largely upon her help in the mission field.

THE DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND FOR COLORED PEOPLE.

At the annual meeting of the Association, held in Providence, R. I., ten years ago, the announcement was made that during the week the Association had received the largest gift ever made in this country by a living giver to any benevolent Society.

This gift and a further sum from the estate of Daniel Hand has been yielding an income to be applied to the education of colored people in the South on the condition and limitations of the trust. From year to year the income from this fund has aided thousands of worthy students, planted schools and maintained otherwise impossible work in dark and needy places.

The income for the year has been $68,684.19, which, with the balance of $12,231.37 at the beginning of the year, makes a total of $80,915.56.

The expenditures have been $66,342, leaving a balance in hand and already appropriated, of $14,573.07.

CONCLUSION.

The receipts for the fiscal year ending September 30th, were: from donations, $150,660.51; estates, $119,530.78; income, $14,890.64; tuition, $37,405.41; and Slater Fund paid to institutions, $5,000, making a total of $327,487.34. The expenditures have been $271,837.15, leaving a credit balance on the year of $55,650.19.

The debt, September 30th, 1897, was $54,945.03. This debt is paid and there is a balance in hand of $705.16 for the new year. The receipts are $1,952.70 less, and the payments are $45,975.41 less than last year. The reduction on the debt last year was $11,627.48.

At the Annual Meeting, a year ago, the Executive Committee reported that the schedule of appropriations for the new year had been reduced $43,000, because of the debt, and the hope was expressed that during the coming year the debt of $54,945.03 would be extinguished. The hope of the Committee has been realized and the debt is paid with a small balance in hand at the close of the year.

The Association had no debt six years ago. The past six years of financial depression throughout our country have thrown a very difficult and embarrassing problem upon your Committee and officers. To retrench as suddenly and severely as the receipts—especially from legacies—decreased, would have been most disastrous to the work at every point. The debt the first year of the panic, 1893, was $45,028.11, and the next year increased to $66,360.97, and the next year to $96,147,81, although the expenditure had been very much less than in previous years. The next year, 1895-96, the debt was reduced to $66,572.51, and the following year to $54,945.03, and this year, just closed, the last dollar of debt has been paid.

There is great reason for thankfulness that the burden of debt has now been removed. This has been accomplished by severe retrenchment in all departments of the work, and by some legacies which came in good time.

In analyzing somewhat farther these statistics for this fiscal year, we discover that although there has been a falling off in the receipts from living givers, there has been a gain in legacies. The income from all sources has been about equal to that of the preceding year. Doubtless the Spanish War did much to turn aside the interest and collection for mission work in America. With fathers, sons and brothers going from many homes into the armies, the thought and affection of these homes naturally turned to the camps or battlefields where these armies were. It has been difficult, therefore, to hold the attention of philanthropic people to the work of missions in our own land.

That which has drawn off the attention of the Christian public from missionary work has also deflected contributions. Business has been unsettled and incomes have been more precarious. It is not strange that there should have been a falling off in contributions from the friends of this Association during the year.

Painful appeals have come from different fields of missionary work. Still it was determined that there should be no increase of debt, even though the sacrifice was so painful and serious. With all the reductions, we could not have ended the year without a debt, except for the unusual legacies which came to make up the decreased contributions. In the near future, however, it will be almost suicidal if missions and schools dropped are not provided for, and the work pressing upon us is not entered upon. May we not hope that in the ensuing years the magnitude and importance of this vast field of Christian missions will so appeal to the generous Christian friends who understand its great importance that it will be possible to meet the urgent necessities of this missionary field.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

PROF. GEORGE B. STEVENS, CHAIRMAN.

It is extremely gratifying to the friends and supporters of the Association that its officers are able to report a year of encouraging success, notwithstanding the disturbed financial condition of the country. It is difficult for us to realize the full meaning of the fact that six institutions of college grade, forty normal and graded schools and twenty-five common schools, with an attendance of nearly 12,000 pupils, are maintained by this Society. Here we have in energetic operation a system of education which, we believe, is simply unequaled among the forces which are at work for the civilizing of the colored race. We note with pleasure that many of the teachers in these schools are themselves colored graduates of the institutions of the Association, and that an increasing number of them have carried their education so far as to have received academic degrees.

The system of schools maintained by the Association includes a wise combination of elementary, industrial and collegiate education. Experience has taught what a sound philosophy also teaches—that the most effective training of the eye and the hand cannot be secured apart from the development of the mind. Without intelligence and self-respect the results of mere manual training would necessarily be very meagre. The Association does not forget the Christian ideal in its educational work. The aim is to prepare the way for an intelligent apprehension and a consistent application of the truths of Christianity by developing and enlightening the mind and the conscience. This object of the Association's work is thus clearly stated by one of its Secretaries:

"If we can establish right principles for right living, and have people educated to an intelligent idea of the greatness of life and its relations, and can have intellect loyal to truth, we shall be sure to have the things which follow in the train of such intellectual and spiritual life."

Barbarism still remains our "first danger." Ignorance is our greatest foe, for where a people remain densely ignorant the very possibility of true religion and civilization is excluded. This Association is helping to civilize a race, and is doing this by training in children and youth a sense of life's higher meaning and value—a conviction of man's worth and responsibility as a child of God. In this grand purpose are included all the motives and methods alike of education and of religion.

Your committee, in the light of the educational work of the Association, would like to re-echo the words of Dr. Storrs, who wrote: "The work of the American Missionary Association is, in my judgment, second in importance to that of no other organization for religious and educational purposes at home or abroad."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

REV. WILLIAM E. BARTON, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Mountain Work desires to place on record its high appreciation of the importance of this branch of the four-fold work of the American Missionary Association. A people akin to us in race and bound to us by many and permanent ties, these mountain people present one of the most hopeful and necessitous appeals for educational and religious and industrial training. We commend the wisdom of the Association in planting together these institutions, which have their future bearings upon the development of the intellectual, industrial and religious future of an important section of our country.

We commend the school work of the Association both for its bearing upon the church work, and for its relation to the common schools of the region. We note with satisfaction that in several places the mission school and the common school are merged into one, and we believe that in many places the best results can be attained by thus strengthening the institutions already existing in the community and that are to remain in places where distinctive missionary work will be of a temporary nature. We believe in providing not only common school education, but also in the training of the teachers and preachers and leaders of the people. We recommend that Christian givers, in seeking to aid this interesting and hopeful work, have in mind the importance of unity of effort. We deem it wiser that institutions planted by this Association and of acknowledged character be supported rather than that the work be divided by the establishing of new institutions under other control.

We approve the establishment of departments of manual training in connection with the schools of the Association, believing that a people thus largely dependent upon the product of their own labors will be better fitted for life by intelligent instruction in the cultivation of the soil and the use of tools.

We approve the church work and believe it to be fundamental. The mountaineers are a people naturally religious, yet in need of a more rational faith than is often preached to them by the earnest, but often illiterate, ministers of the region. A people so hospitable and democratic should find our polity and doctrine an easy one to adopt, and one upon which the representatives of different denominations now migrating to that region may readily unite.

We believe in this work as a contribution to American civilization, to the real spirit of Christianity and to a broad and enlightened patriotism. We cannot forget the loyalty and devotion of these humble but earnest people, and we believe that this work among them is one of the few forms of missionary work which can be undertaken from motives of direct gratitude for services rendered to our country in more than one crisis in its history.

REPORT ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

REV. C. H. RICHARDS, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on the Southern Church Work of the Association rejoices in the tokens of life and progress in this department. Eight new churches were organized during the year and nearly 1,000 members were added on confession of faith. Few churches in our country can show, as do these Southern churches, over 81 per cent. of additions by conversion.

The year has had its drawbacks in the work among the churches, as in other parts of the field. The war has interrupted the work somewhat, taking pastors and members for service in the army. The pinch of retrenchment has finished the flickering life of some of the feeblest churches. The pruning-knife has been used during the year to cut away the dead branches of the vine; but this is as wholesome work in the Lord's vineyard as in any other, and the removal from the list of several weak and inoperative churches is only an apparent loss and is really a gain.

The encouraging features of the work are many. The fidelity, earnestness and persistence of the faithful workers have been richly rewarded. Pastors have exchanged evangelistic work with each other, and have called to their aid the general missionaries in the field with excellent results. The grouping of churches near each other for co-operation has proved advantageous. Not the least significant and encouraging sign of progress has been the steadily increasing demand for new churches of our faith and methods in communities where there has been a revolt against old forms of religion in which ignorance and immorality are no bar either to church membership or the pulpit. There is a rising desire among the colored people of the South for pure and happy homes, and a determination to protect their young people more thoroughly from vice and degradation, and this often demands separation from the old environment. In many quarters the new Puritan revolt against corruptions in the church has been as marked as was that of our Separatist forefathers, and many who seek better things are calling upon us to help them organize free and pure churches.

The steady advance of our churches in the South is gratifying. When Lincoln was elected President this Association had not a single church in that sectiou. To-day there are 202 churches, with over 11,000 members; one-fourth of them are among the white mountaineers and three-fourths are among the colored people. The colored churches are chiefly in North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama. In twenty years they have increased more than three-fold in the number of churches and nearly three-fold in membership. Within the last five years they have added 48 churches and 2,073 members. Taken as a whole, they invite comparison with some of our Northern States whose churches of white members are about the same in number. The comparison is quite in favor of the Association churches as regards growth. Pennsylvania, Missouri and Nebraska have had hard work in the last thirty years to keep pace with these dusky competitors, and in some respects they have lagged behind in the race. The results fully vindicate the wisdom of this Association in all that it has done in this line.

The time has fully come, in the judgment of this committee, to develop and push this church work with still greater vigor and larger outlay. It has been the highest wisdom for the Association hitherto to give its chief attention and effort to educational work, which has absorbed about 85 per cent. of its expenditure in this field, and its splendid plant of schools and colleges all through the South now prepares it to continue this magnificent work. It ought not to be abridged a particle. There should not be the slightest abatement of interest and effort in education, nor is there likely to be. But we ought to be planning to devote more money and strength to the endeavor to fill the South with the purity and power of the Gospel through these free churches, planted, fostered and guided by this Association. The caution and conservatism which has always characterized this body will prevent any heedless rush to multiply churches for the sake of increased numbers. But to keep the light burning where it has been already kindled, to meet the legitimate and urgent demands for new churches and to properly evangelize the dark and desolate regions not yet touched by the influences of our intelligent and ethical Christianity ought to have double the expenditure and effort now bestowed upon it.

We are in full accord with the Executive Committee in urging the importance of a forward movement here. By repeated votes the committee has affirmed its desire and purpose to enlarge this work. Six years ago it began a movement to increase its church work among the mountaineers and the colored people of the South and with excellent results. Three years ago, as this year's report reminds us, it reaffirmed its appreciation of the great "importance of church work among the negroes, and urged that it be pushed in every direction to the full extent of the financial ability of the Association." We applaud the sagacity and foresight of the committee and rejoice to believe that the time has come when this wise purpose can be carried out.

The Committees on Church Work at these annual meetings have also repeatedly urged the enlargement of this branch of the work. This seems to be a voice from the churches which sustain this Association. There is little doubt that if new emphasis were laid upon this phase of the work the churches would be fired to new interest and inspired to more generous offerings, as they would see the living Gospel carried to the very homes of the people and the ingathering into these "Reformed Churches of the South" of truly converted men and women, who are resolved that their religion shall mean a faithful following of Christ in their daily life.

The time seems opportune for an advance. With the happy removal of the debt, with signs of returning business prosperity after our great national victories, we urgently recommend that as fast as the income of the society will permit, the church work of the Association in the South be increased.

REPORT ON INDIAN WORK.

REV. J. G. MERRILL, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

Rev. J. G. Merrill, D.D., of Maine, editor of the Christian Mirror, Chairman of the Committee on Indian work, reported as follows:

First. We rejoice with the constituency of the society in view of the effective work of the Association during the past year in behalf of the Indians, as found in the report submitted to us.

Second. We feel that the time has come for this Association to appeal to its constituency, and through them to the people of the United States and the government at Washington, looking toward radical changes in our federal treatment of these falsely termed "wards of the nation," to the end that they become as soon as possible true citizens of the United States. We believe that no solution of the Indian problem can be reached until the present tribal system be unrecognized, government reservations be abolished, and the present appropriations for the material support of the Indian be discontinued. We believe that this Association and its individual constituency should vigorously and persistently exert an influence toward the accomplishment of these reforms upon their representatives at Washington and leaders of public opinion in their respective communities, and meanwhile our efforts should be vastly increased that Christian education, both industrial and literary, and the saving influence of Jesus Christ and the nurture of the Church may be given those who are now hindered in their development as men, as citizens, as Christians, by a system of federal patronage that, however well intended, works evil to the Indian.

Third. Recognizing that our government bears a friendly attitude towards these reforms, we would recommend also that a committee be appointed to visit the President of the United States, Secretary of the Interior, and others who may have power in the Administration, to urge immediate action that the policy now theoretically held by the government shall be put into execution.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CHINESE WORK.

REV. WILLARD B. THORP, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Chinese Work would report that the past year has been marked by an important addition to the permanent equipment of the work. A building in an advantageous location in San Francisco has been purchased, and has been remodeled to serve as a Central Mission House. The total cost of the building was $19,500, upon which $8,250 has already been paid, and the remainder is covered by a mortgage. When the payment has been completed, the income from rentals to Chinese families can be applied upon current expenses.

We desire to express our hearty approval of this building enterprise, combining as it does the features of a church, a school and a Christian social settlement. We shall watch with great interest its effect upon the development of the work.

We call attention to the fact that the amount of money devoted from the general fund of the Association to this Chinese work for the past year has been the very small sum of $5,000. It is only by the indefatigable personal efforts of the Superintendent, Rev. W. C. Pond, D.D., that the necessary funds are being secured to maintain the work even in its present greatly contracted form.

We desire to express our earnest hope that the finances of the Association will soon permit an increase of the appropriation, at least to the point of $7,500, where it was before the financial crisis.

We believe that our missions among the Californian Chinese are working upon the margin of a great opportunity. The proportions of the work are small, but its claims upon our interest are peculiarly great. The work is in charge of men of wisdom and experience, and its methods meet our hearty approval.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

RODNEY DENNIS, ESQ., CHAIRMAN.

Your committee has to report that it has performed the duty which you have devolved upon it, i. e., to examine and make report upon the condition and management of the financial department of the Association. Former reports have uniformly commended the administration of this most important arm of the corporation. The organization and conduct of the treasurer's office, the method of keeping its accounts, showing explicit and full details of daily transactions, evincing system, care and fidelity, was set forth in detail in the report of last year, which is alike true of to-day. It reads as follows:

"No material change has seemed or seems to be necessary from the uniform, practical and business methods now pursued. Books are kept by double entry; records are simply and intelligently made, with as great detail and fullness as their nature requires. The cash book records, the daily receipts and disbursements and daily cash transactions are journalized and posted in the ledger. Deposits are made in banks selected by the Executive Committee, and no moneys are withdrawn therefrom except upon checks that bear the signature of two of the officers of the Association, and in payment of appropriations made by the Executive Committee. Auditors, who are annually elected by the Association, make quarterly examinations, finding proper vouchers for all receipts and expenditures, and their certificate attesting the same appears upon the treasurer's books.

"The securities of the Association are kept in a safe deposit vault, accessible only to the treasurer and one other officer of the Association, each having possession of an adequate key. A real estate record is kept showing each parcel of real property held by the Association, with a full history of the same, the expenses attending each, with the income therefrom. A record of trust funds and of each legacy is kept, showing the character and revenue derived, with the accompanying history and conditions."

The confidence and commendation then expressed are fully justified by our recent examination. Two auditors, one of whom is a new man, annually appointed, make careful examination and require the production of certificates of stock, of titles to property owned by the Association, together with vouchers for all expenditures, and they make report of same over their signatures. The certificate they furnish reads as follows:

"This is to certify that we have examined the accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1898, with the vouchers, and find the same correct, as stated in the above accounts.

"We also certify that we have examined the property accounts, and the certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association, representing the investments of the several funds, and find them to correspond with the balance sheet of September 30th, 1898, and with the detailed statement of the books of the Treasurer.

D. C. TIEBOUT,
CHARLES N. SCHENCK, } Auditors."

NEW YORK, October 18th, 1898.

GENERAL STATEMENT.

RECEIPTS.

There have been received during the year ending September 30th:—from donations, $150,660.51, against $184,250.79 the previous year, showing a decrease of $33,590.28 in receipts from this source. From estates, $119,530.78, against $82,169.39 the previous year, an increase of $37,361.39. From income, $14,890.64, against $14,877.18 the previous year, an increase of $13.46. From tuition, $37,405.41, against $40,432.68 the previous year, a decrease of $3,027.27. From Slater Fund, $5,000, against $7,500 the previous year, a decrease of $2,500. From sales of property, none this year; $210.00 last year. The total receipts from above sources last year were $329,440.04; this year, $327,487.34—a decrease of $1,952.70.

EXPENDITURES.

For the Southern field last year there were expended $211,224.69; this year, $180,841.19, a decrease of $30,383.50. For the Indians last year, $36,566.02; this year, $31,993.66, a decrease of $4,572.36. For the Chinese, $10,951.32 last year, against $11,000.61 this year, an increase of $49.29. For the foreign field, income $4,481.11 last year, against $4,326.47 this year, a decrease of $154.64. A total decrease of expenditures in these several fields of $35,061.21. Expended for publications last year, $12,207.89; this year, $7,737.55, a decrease of $4,470.34. Expenses at the several collecting agencies last year, $17,881.81; this year, $12,648.87, a decrease of $5,232.94. Expenses of administration last year, $19,245.32; this year, $18,540.98, a decrease $704 35. The cost of the Annual Meeting last year was $905.43; this year, $1,262.33, an increase of $356.90. Expense upon wills and estates, $150.15 last year, and $636.87 this year, an increase of $486.72. Paid interest last year, $4,103.11; this year, $2,578.93, a decrease of $1,524.18. Amounts refunded last year, $95.71; this year, $269,69, an increase of $173.98. The total payments last year were $317,812,56; this year, $271,837.15, a decrease of $45.975.41. There were paid on the debt last year, $11,627.48.

DONATIONS.

The decrease in donations may easily be accounted for in the disturbed condition of the country and the consequent claims upon the benevolent public, arising from the necessities incident to the camp and field. The receipts from donations fall about $30,000 below the average of the last four years.

LEGACIES.

The receipts from legacies and estates this year are $119,530.78, an increase of $37,361.39 over last year, and about $33,000 more than the average for the last four years.

THE DANIEL HAND FUND.

This fund is kept separate and apart from other funds, upon books specifically arranged to show the income from its investments and the disposal of the same. The unexpended balance last year on the year was $8,049.14. Income received this year, $68,684.19, a decrease from last year of $2,971.85. The expenditures last year were $63,606.90, this year $66,342.49, an increase of $2,735.59. The unexpended balance on the year is $2,341.70, which, with the balance carried forward is $14,573.07 appropriated for work next year.

CONCLUSION.

In closing this report, your committee beg to emphasize its approval and commendation of the work of the Executive Committee for the year just ended. At the beginning it faced a debt which arose from the effects of the panic of 1893, during which benevolent people were disabled and the contributions of the churches were largely diminished; market values were then reduced together with income from investments. The debt, which amounted to $96,147.81 in 1895, was reduced the following year, 1896, to $66,572.21, and last year, 1897, to $54,945.03. This indebtedness, through the wisdom and courage of the Executive Committee, has been entirely cancelled and a small amount placed on the right side of the ledger.

It was doubtless a trial to the managers of the Association, also a source of regret to all its friends, to feel obliged to withhold endeavors and husband resources while promising fields were already open or "white for the harvest;" but like prudent and careful stewards, they have, by a reduction of expenses and a discriminating retrenchment, aided by favorable returns from legacies and estates, reached a sound basis; and the hope is cherished that from this time forth, further retrenchment will be uncalled for, but that, on the other hand, the increased contributions from the churches and the generous gifts of friends will enable the Association to do a larger and more productive work in this home field, where, providentially, are gathered all the elements of the problem of the world's rescue from ignorance, degradation and destruction.

Obituary.

DEACON SAMUEL HOLMES.

The death of Deacon Samuel Holmes takes from active career in life one who has been prominent and useful in many forms of Christian work in the local church and in broader efforts for the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom. He was for many years a member and officer in the Broadway Tabernacle, New York City, and on his removal thirty years ago to Montclair, N. J., he was one of the charter members of the growing Congregational Church organized there. He was the first man elected as its deacon, and to the day of his death was its senior deacon. At the time of his death, December 9, 1897, he was a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association and the oldest in age and in date of appointment, having held that position for the third of a century. He was a corporate member of the American Board, and a vice-president of the Congregational Education Society. He was an officer in the National Congregational Council held in Boston in 1865, and was one of the committee which convened the National Congregational Council in Oberlin in 1871. He was also a delegate to the International Congregational Council held in London in 1891. His memory will be warmly cherished in the many circles of Christian service in which he was actively engaged.

MISS MARY E. McLANE.

Miss McLane died at Mobile, Ala., on the 2d of February, 1898. Appointed in the year 1887 to St. Augustine, Fla., Miss McLane had taught in Fisk University, Tennessee; had been principal of a school at Anniston, Ala., for four years; was then transferred at her own request to Athens, Ala., where she was principal, and after three years' service there was appointed as matron in the Teachers' Home of Emerson Institute, at Mobile, Ala. In a missionary service of more than ten years, Miss McLane obtained a good report as a most faithful and earnest teacher, thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit, and always actuated by a missionary purpose.

MISS ANNA COFFIN.

The death of Miss Anna Coffin occurred at her home in Haverhill, Mass. At the age of eighteen she was graduated from the Salem Normal School. Having a desire to serve the needy colored people, she accepted a commission from the American Missionary Association to teach in Burrell School, at Selma, Ala. She threw herself into the work with all the ardor and enthusiasm so natural to her, and for the two years of her stay proved a devoted teacher and faithful servant of Christ. Later, for four years, she was connected with Tougaloo University, at Tougaloo, Miss., where her unselfish, consecrated life was powerful for good.

REV. C. L. WOODWORTH, D.D.

Rev. C. L. Woodworth, D.D., died in Amherst, Mass., May 23, 1898, on the day after the seventy-eighth anniversary of his birth. He was born in Somers, Conn., was graduated at Amherst College in 1845, at East Windsor Theological Institute in 1848, and was ordained to the ministry in the Second Church in Amherst and became its pastor, November 7, 1849. He remained there until September 2, 1863, when he resigned to become chaplain to the Twenty-seventh Massachusetts Regiment. In this service he remained nearly a year, and in 1865 was appointed general agent of the American Missionary Association for Massachusetts, and in 1866 its district secretary for New England, with office in Boston, which position he occupied until 1888. In June, 1893, he returned to his pastorate in Amherst, where he labored with much earnestness until his death.

SAMUEL S. MARPLES.

Once more the American Missionary Association is called to mourn the loss of one of its most useful and highly esteemed officers. Mr. S. S. Marples, who died at his home in Brooklyn, June 23, 1898, in the sixty-fourth year of his age, was a most judicious business man, a devoted Christian, and useful in many walks of life. He was one of the most prominent members of the Produce Exchange, New York City, at various times a member of the Board of Managers, and holding important positions on its committees.

Mr. Marples' sympathies and interests were wide and useful in benevolent and church work. For many years he was a member of the South Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and was superintendent of the Sunday-school for several terms. He was closely identified with the Manhattan Brooklyn conference of churches. He was prominently connected with the New York Congregational Club, and was its president for several successive years.

Mr. Marples became identified with the American Missionary Association by his election, in 1880, as a member of the Executive Committee. For sixteen years he has served on its Finance Committee, for many years as its secretary, and for the last part of the period as its chairman. The value of these services was constantly recognized by his associates on the committee, and will be appreciated more fully as the years go by. For the past year Mr. Marples' health was very frail; only for a part of the time was he able to attend to his business, but never, as we are assured, did he lose his lively interest in the affairs of the American Missionary Association, to which his attention has been given so constantly and faithfully throughout the past eighteen years.

MISS ISABELLA W. HUME.

Miss Hume, who was from 1893 to 1896 connected with our mission work in New Orleans, died early in June. This devoted missionary was the daughter of missionaries in India, and was born in that country. Receiving her education in America, her life was devoted to mission and Christian work here. Previous to her connection with our work in Louisiana, Miss Hume was laboring in the mountain regions of Vermont, and the last work of her life was as pastor of the Congregational Church in Gill, Mass. Relinquishing that on account of impaired health, the last few months before her death were spent in severe suffering. Greatly honored and esteemed in all her work, the intelligence of her death brought a sense of loss and feeling of sadness to the many whom she had labored to help to save. A singularly faithful worker and devoted servant of Christ, surely she will have many stars in her crown.

WAYLAND H. KEYES.

A young man just graduated from Oberlin, Ohio, with honors, gave himself to the work as principal of the Mission Home School at Fort Berthold, N. D. He gave up home, opportunities and ease to do God's work. He took a cold coming out, which settled on his lungs. It was not thought serious, but a sudden turn came and he died seemingly of heart failure. He could not understand why he should be taken after his long preparation before his work had fairly begun, but he believed the Lord's way was right. He had become an esteemed worker in the Y. P. S. C. E. of Dr. Brand's church in Oberlin and a helper in the temperance work. He had proved his devotion to his Master. He had set a noble example to the students of Oberlin. His grave at Fort Berthold, N. D., beside other workers who have fallen there, will speak to the Indian people of one who followed Christ and gave his life for them.

OF

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

For the first time in six years the American Missionary Association celebrates its anniversary with the joy of freedom from debt. All are truly trankful, although saddened that the missionary work had to be so pinched in accomplishing this result. Both workers in the home churches and missionaries in the field have aided in freeing the Association, on the one hand by putting money into the treasury, and on the other by drawing it out very sparingly; and thus we have sympathy one with the other. A good colored deacon having had a severe attack of lameness, upon recovery came to the prayer-meeting to give thanks to God that again he could walk, "for," he said, "I know it was the Lord, though we did the rubbing." The American Missionary Association used vigorous means to secure a healthful financial condition, but we know it is of the Lord, that we may bring you so good report.

Two months ago there was a serious deficiency in the returns from women's societies, they being $4,000 short of the amount received at the same date the previous year. But a statement of these circumstances to the State Unions brought speedy and sympathetic response, assuring us that the money would be forthcoming if the effort on the part of some of those co-operating with us could accomplish it. The deficiency was overcome in large measure.

The total receipts from women's societies for the year ending September 30, 1898, are $26,530.65. This is less than in the two previous years when Jubilee shares were contributed, but an advance of about $800 over the average of contributions from the same sources during the debt period of six years. The first year of the debt, twenty-eight State organizations contributed to the Association. This year thirty-three are on the contributing list. The tabulated statement appended shows the amount received from each State organization.

If this amount of twenty-six thousand dollars should seem small compared with what is raised by women in other denominations, or even in our own for other missionary purposes, let us remember that this does not represent the women's missionary societies of all the Congregational churches in the country. Many societies, to our regret, have not contributed to this important work. There is reason for encouragement, however, that during these years of business depression the offerings from the contributing societies have been so well sustained. The sum raised is the result under God's blessing of continuous effort on the part of those devoted to this branch of the Lord's work. Would that all such might be received worthily and assisted in their good endeavor by all the membership of the churches. Our missionary gains are to be increased by winning new givers.

Through the women's societies the distribution of literature has been greatly facilitated and opportunity has also been given for speakers, either missionaries or secretaries, who could give information of the field, being welcomed.

The missionaries have tried to do their part by writing the field letters most faithfully, often in much weariness when overburdened with work. These have been widely circulated, and the circulation has been to such an extent in response to direct request, as to give evidence that they have been appreciated and read.

Many programs on the work have been prepared by the State Unions and local societies from information furnished through the literature and letters. It is noticeable, too, that the programs now often include current events as bearing on the topic under consideration. "Missions" are beginning to be understood as in touch with daily events that influence our personal lives and interests. It is gratifying that the spirit of study has widened from the literary club to the mission circle. Many societies have gained a knowledge of the work that has resulted in intelligent giving. And if unwearied in well-doing we purpose in our hearts to win to the support of the American Missionary Association the women of every church in the land, success will surely be ours. Let us make the coming year one of marked gain in this respect.

The Missionary Field.—The field of the American Missionary Association, while not divided into "man's work" and "woman's work," is yet an exceptionally favorable field for work to which women are particularly adapted. The lowliness of the people among whom we labor, the manner of reaching and helping them, call for many women workers in the schools. Child-life requires woman's tactful, patient training; and races that have been left behind or forced behind in the progress of civilization are in many respects like children. Of the total number of missionary teachers, about three-fifths are women, at work among the Colored people, the Mountaineers, the Indians and Chinese; besides these there are many who as the wives of pastors, most of them native helpers, do a vast amount of missionary work. Additional to the usual schoolroom instruction there are lines of woman's work in industries and the "mothering" of the young people in the school homes. Of the 13,445 pupils in the schools the past year, thousands of girls, Colored, White and Indian, have been given most careful instruction in domestic training—sewing, cutting, fitting of garments and all kinds of household work. This means that particular attention and direction have been given to each girl, beginning with the a-b-c of domestic duty.

The "mothering" of large households of young people, both boys and girls, is one of the most important and influential lines of missionary work, and the boys need and appreciate it no less than the girls. Among the noble women who have been nursing our sick soldiers was one who, when assigned to the care of the Colored soldiers, gave them especial consideration. A poor fellow in his delirium called her mother, and was rebuked by the man in the next cot for speaking thus to a white lady. But the nurse replied, quietly, "I am his mother until he gets well," and forthwith all began to call her mother. They will never forget her. Our boys and girls in the mission fields, whether White, Colored or Indian, value their missionary mothers.

In connection with the schools and churches of the Association, seventy-five Christian Endeavor Societies have been in operation the past year with over four thousand members. These have been planned and directed largely through the influence of the women missionaries.

Forty-six Women's Societies have been conducted at as many different stations, with a membership of fourteen hundred.

In addition to this, our women missionaries have helped to teach the 17,830 Sunday-school scholars gathered into the A. M. A. church and mission schools; and have engaged actively in temperance work, the school and church prayer-meetings, besides the innumerable acts of ministry in the homes of the people.

Thus this work commends itself to the hearty and generous support of every woman, through its magnitude, its peculiarly interesting character, and its adaptation to and need of women workers. Can we not make the coming year a year of large, generous giving to the Lord, for this important work?

Grand as this work of the American Missionary Association is, and long as it has been established, it is yet only a beginning compared with the need. There is no lack of well-prepared workers; the student volunteer movement has provided for that. The work is waiting to be done, work made so plain in the providence of God that every seeing eye can see, and whose appeal no hearing ear can fail to hear. Two and one-half million Negro women and children cannot read or write. A million Negro children are yet without schools.

Whole counties in the Southern Mountains are lying in darkness. Thousands of Indians and Chinese have never even heard of Jesus Christ. And all this within our own dear country. What is lacking?

"We lose what on ourselves we spend;
We have as treasures without end,
Whatever, Lord, to thee we lend,
Who givest all—who givest all."

This is to certify that we have examined the accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1898, with the vouchers, and find the same correct, as stated in the above accounts.

We also certify that we have examined the property accounts and the certificates of stocks, bonds and other securities held by the Association, representing the investments of the several funds, and find them to correspond with the balance sheet of September 30, 1898, and with the detailed statement of the books of the Treasurer.

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the Gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field in 1854 its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees, and in North America among the Indians.

The home department embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South, and the largest number of home missionary workers employed by the Association was 112 in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave States and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave States gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

AMONG THE NEGROES.

The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of those who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N.C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S.C., and to St. Louis, Mo.; and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

CLOSE OF THE WAR—FREEDMEN'S BUREAU—BOSTON COUNCIL.

The year 1865 was marked by the close of the war, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agencies in other portions of the Northern States. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $147,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,769 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870!

PERMANENT EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains as higher institutions, Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana, and Tillotson College, Texas, together with forty normal and graded schools and twenty-five common schools scattered over the South and among the mountains, seven schools among the Indians, (including one in Alaska) and twenty among the Chinese on the Pacific coast.

Theological departments also have been established in Howard University, Fisk University, Talladega College and Straight University. Industrial instruction first began in Southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools, and has been constantly extended. Talladega College and Tougaloo University have large farms. In all the larger institutions and normal schools, mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well qualified teachers and ministers.

CHURCH PLANTING.

Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions, the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 220, located in nearly all the States of the South, among the negroes, the mountaineers and the Indians, with most fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Conferences or associations have been formed, and of these there are now eight, designated as the Conferences of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Tennessee.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee, and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations or schools have been established along or near the lines of railroads traversing the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and sweeping nearly across both States; in Kentucky at Williamsburg, Pleasant View, Rockhold and Corbin; in Tennessee at Helenwood, Jellico, Pomona, Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Bon Air, Mill Creek and Big Creek Gap; in North Carolina at Saluda, Whittier and Blowing Rock; in Alabama at Nat (Bending Oaks) and Joppa. The Sunday-school work in these districts renders most efficient service in laying the foundation for churches and day-schools, and in promoting the cause of temperance.

THE INDIANS.

Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions at S'kokomish, Wash., Leech Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S.D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number eighteen, with a membership of 1,016. Schools number seven, with 409 pupils. The out-stations number thirty-one.

Our Alaska Mission at Cape Prince of Wales, formed in 1890, temporarily closed, has been re-opened. It is entirely supported by special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. It is the only mission under Congregational auspices in the territory of Alaska. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of the missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

CHINESE IN AMERICA.

The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of teachers is thirty-two, and schools twenty, located at Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Petaluma, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Ventura, Vernondale, Watsonville, two in San Francisco and one in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton, with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of women's aid to the American Missionary Association. Forty-two Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

"The Jerusalem that is Above."

SERMON

BY

REV. G. A. GORDON, D.D.

GALATIANS iv:26.—"But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all."

Paul sees before him two Jerusalems, one that is above and one that is under, one that is free and one that is in bondage, one that is bound to pass utterly away and one that has the certain assurance of permanence. Best of all, he sees that the Jerusalem that is above, that is free, that is everlasting, is the mother of us all. Nothing could better voice the sentiments of all true Americans to-day than these words of the great-hearted Jew who became a Christian. There are before us to-day two nations: one that is from above and one that is from beneath; one that is free and one that is in the servitude of wickedness; one that we believe is under sentence of doom and one that has the promise of permanence and final ascendancy. But best of all, the nation that is from above, that is free and prophetically victorious, is the mother of us all. We come then to the great message of the text, feeling that it is pertinent to the needs of this hour.

1. The first thing in the apostle's words is the vision of an ideal Jerusalem. He was fond of history; no one in that age had anything like so profound a sense of it. He loved to go back to the migration of the first Hebrew; to repeat the history of Israel under Moses, to dwell upon the great work that God had done for his people in the past, to mark off the history of his nation as in a profound and peculiar sense the history of the revelation of God to man. He knew the annals of Jerusalem by heart. No Jew of his time had read with a deeper thrill of joy of David's capture of the city, of his transformation of it to magnificent uses; no one had surveyed with more patriotic satisfaction whatever had been glorious in the reigns of subsequent kings, whatever had been mighty in the utterances of the great successions of prophets. The heroic associations and immortal memories that gathered about the actual Jerusalem had more power over his heart than they possessed for any other.

Still, he felt that the history had been poor. There was an aboriginal promise behind it all, within sight of which, in the actual development of the nation, it had never come. There were impulses in the national heart deeper and diviner than any historic expression that they had yet received; there was a vision in the mind of the great prophetic leaders of Israel that had never attained anything like embodiment in the life of the people. Therefore, in the interest of what was deepest in history he turned away from it; in behalf of what was noblest in the actual he turned toward the ideal. So far the entire record of his nation had been a failure—a failure to utter in its life the revelation of truth and brotherhood made to it.

This seems to me the inevitable position for the Christian patriot in America to-day. He is more impressed than other men by the actual achievements upon these shores; by the landing of the Pilgrims, by the advance of colonial life; by the Declaration of Independence, the battle for an inalienable right to a victorious issue and the organization of the government; by the swift and wonderful development of the country's resources, the successful struggle to maintain the unity and integrity of the nation, and the settlement of the gigantic moral question of slavery; by the concurrent growth of schools, colleges and universities; by the deepening and spreading power of Christianity as expressed in a thousand different agencies; and by the great intellects, the great characters, the great servants that have been our guides. The Christian patriot can see a light in the silver stars of the old flag and a depth in its crimson bars visible to no other eyes. He better than all others can estimate the inspiration that has worked in the consciousness of our people, the moral energy needed to bring us where we are, the suffering involved, and the magnificent careers that, through this tremendous power, have been given to this country and the world. There is not a single noble tradition in Old Virginia or in Old Massachusetts that he does not cherish, no great name from Washington to Lincoln that he does not venerate, no battle for righteousness in the whole history that does not set his heart on fire. The Christian patriot sees more to honor and admire in our history than any other man; the whole past is to him deeper, richer, more august, more divinely tender than to any other.

Nevertheless, he is profoundly dissatisfied with what it has been, with what it is to-day. The dream of the Pilgrim burns like an immortal daybreak in the beginning of our history, and the full day has not yet come. The vision embodied in the Declaration of Independence is still an ideal unrealized. The profound and noble ideas that lie at the basis of our political institutions have so far received no such expression as they must have. The deepest and divinest forces in the consciousness of our people have had, as yet, no history worthy of them. And, therefore, we turn away from what has been to what shall be; from the actual to the ideal country; from the America that is below to the America that is above.

2.—The second thing that impresses us in the words of the text is that Paul looks upon the ideal Jerusalem as the real Jerusalem. The city that had been false to the idea upon which it was founded—the idea of the supremacy of the righteous Lord, that had obstructed the purpose of its best rulers, that had stoned the prophets and killed the men of genius and sublime character who had been sent into it, that Jerusalem, although built upon a rock, composed of stable dwellings and an imposing temple, isolated from attack by ravines to right and left, and surrounded by a great wall, that Jerusalem was but a dream, a nightmare, a horrid ghost that must vanish. The Jerusalem that had no existence except in the morning thoughts of the first of the Hebrews, in the pious longings of the devouter leaders, and in the burning conceptions of the prophets; that city which had a full home nowhere but in the mind of Christ, which had no local habitation; no temple and no bulwarks for the national eye, that city Paul affirmed to be the real city. You can think of the contempt with which an unconverted Pharisee or Sadducee of that time would look upon the Christian fanatic matching his imagination against a great historic institution. It would have seemed to him the sheerest drivel, worthy of nothing but to be drowned with floods of ridicule. But what says the subsequent history? The Jerusalem of the old Jew is gone; the Jerusalem of the Apostle has been the great inspiration of the ages, and it is the great reality of to-day. What was called the reality has vanished forever; what was called the imagination abides.

The ideal America is the real America. If you want to know the everlasting America, look into the minds of its great patriots, into the thoughts of its deepest prophets. Out of the ideal country has come our entire moral strength. Out of the ideal came the origin of the country, and for all our inspirations in all our times of need our mightiest leaders have gone to the same source. When a new home is founded it is built and ordered in obedience to the vision of love. Children in every true family have behind them the divine dream of parenthood. They are trained, carried forward from infancy and on into the years of self-help by the energy of a transfigured thought. When they come to manhood and womanhood their hearts begin to burn, and they discover that the Lord is shaping the ideal in them. Out of the conception of the more perfect all art, all literature, all social order, all political life that is not retrograde, is forever born. Nothing is so real as the ideal; it builds itself ten thousand times into the actual course of events. And still it is burdened with an infinite reserve. Think of the summers and autumns that have come and gone since civilized man put foot upon these shores. How the whole face of nature has flowered, how the entire earth has come to the abundant harvest for man and for beast. How much this great region has done in the way of pageant and in the way of fruitfulness. What a history of beauty and of useful growth it has had. Why is it not spent? Why is it good for a thousand summers and autumns more? Because there is life in it, because that life is fed from the great sun. Not the wonderful expressions in flower and fruit are the reality, but the hidden, unexhausted and inexhaustible life out of which these pageants and harvests have come. And so the deepest reality lies not in our homes, our societies, our literature, our arts, our government, our history; it lies in the creative source of all these, in the living ideals that are within the human soul, and which are fed from the heart of God. You see a handful of men and women devoted to the development of the colored race in our land. They carry in their prayers and thoughts the reality which shall yet replace the wretched actual that to-day seems so strong. You see a small number of devoted souls determined that slavery shall die; their determination, not the actual bondage of the slave, is the reality. You look in upon a prayer-meeting at Williams College; there and not in the degradation of heathen man is the everlasting reality. You watch a monk revolt from his works of penance, retreat upon God in Christ for the deliverance of his soul, and return in the thunder of power to proclaim that man shall live not upon rite or priest or institution, but upon immediate communion with the Eternal; and you find in that monk's soul, in his imagination, the reality that has transformed the old world into the new. You go back to a tent-maker from Tarsus, and you see him turning away from the history of his people, turning to the unseen where his Master lived, and gathering from that realm the forces that enabled him to change the face of the world, and to leave upon the Roman empire marks deeper than were made by the whole succession of the Cæsars. There in the soul of that tent-maker is the divine reality. You behold a speaker upon a hillside, a sufferer upon the cross, a presence of light from beyond death, and there in the mind of Christ you recognize the whole sublime and final reality for mankind. Heaven and earth shall pass away, government after government, but the words of Christ, his living, creative thought for man shall abide, and out of it shall come a new heaven and a new earth.

In the presence of these facts we are justified in holding that the ideal nation is a real nation. We side with the dreams of the Pilgrims, with the visions of the founders of the nation, with the ideals of its greatest leaders, with the love of those who died for it, with the sorrow and hope of all those who have served it well, with the purpose of God in Christ in its behalf, and we claim that the America that is still unrealized is our true and everlasting country.

3.—The third fact in the text to which I would wish to call attention are the two great characteristics of the Jerusalem which is above. It is free, and it includes all. It is the city of freedom and catholicity. In both respects it was in absolute contrast to the actual Jerusalem. That city was in bondage; it was the slave of innumerable prejudices and traditions, the victim above all of its own blind and evil heart. It was also the most fiercely exclusive of cities. Bigoted, intolerant, exclusive and mad; these were the characteristics which it presented in the presence of Paul's Christian dream of a fellowship of perfect freedom and complete catholicity.

How can we live if we do not see the same vision for this country? We see the strife, the division, the organization of capital and labor into opposite camps, and surely we must pray for freedom from this sore and widespread bondage. We see the prevalence of ignorance of all sorts—ignorance in personal conduct, ignorance of the true life of the home, ignorance of thrift, ignorance of the great moral necessities, personal, domestic, national, human, without obedience to which society cannot hold together; and again we must grieve over this oppression. We behold the existence of the multitude of our fellow-citizens confined mostly to a struggle for physical existence with the most distressing and wide-extending disregard of the whole upper side of life. We are a Pentecostal nation in the number and heterogeneous character of the people in our midst; we are a Pentecostal nation in the greatness of our sins and in the depth of our moral need, in our disregard of the ideal, in our contempt for Christ and our consequent unrest and trouble. Shall we not become a Pentecostal nation in regret and grief for our sins, in the glorious insight into the meaning of Christ for our time and need, in the new experience of salvation in His name? We cannot rest, as Christian citizens, until the profounder emancipation shall come, until the freedom which is our national boast shall mean freedom from internal division, from a soul-destroying materialism, from contempt of the ideal of Christian brotherhood. O, how the great word freedom is abused! Freedom is not the first, but the final attainment of men and nations. It can come only through the will that stands in happy surrender to the Christian intelligence. "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Look into some room in our institutions for the insane, and see some poor man sure that he is a millionaire, that he is a great poet, that he is the greatest force in the life of the country, and at once you grieve over the delusion. But that delusion is not any deeper, nor is it half so debasing as the notion that the man is free who knows hardly anything of the moral order of his existence, and who ignores in conduct the little that he does know. That is the most fundamental and fatal of all delusions. The man who is the victim of drink or lust, or any vile habit, we cannot pronounce free; nor the nation that disregards the moral ideal, that cares nothing for Christ, that soaks itself in the swamps of a godless materialism. For that man or that nation to boast of freedom is a delusion as deep as the sad presentations of the insane. If the Son shall make you free, then shall ye be free indeed. The realization of freedom is through the realization of sonship. The America which is above is alone free.

Thank God it is also the mother of us all. General Grant used to say to the Confederates during the war that it was for their interest to be beaten. The few political speeches that he ever made were to the same effect. He told his old friend and brave lieutenant, General Hancock, and the great body of his fellow-citizens who supported him in the presidential campaign of 1880, that their true success was to be defeated. The speech was brief, but it was full of the great soldier's wisdom and magnanimity. He looked upon battles and he fought them with all his might; but he looked beyond them to the common good in which they issued. The financial struggle of the autumn of 1896 and the victory for honest money was a victory for all the people. The cause that won, the honor that was preserved, and the confidence that was renewed in us as a nation throughout the world belong to all the people. Through the form of victory in one case, through the form of defeat in another, the common good of all was secured. And if any high and enduring good has been done by the great arm of the nation during the last six months it is an achievement for all our citizens, an achievement likewise, we are ready to believe, for the defeated people. The defeat of bad causes is the supreme hope of those who support them; the triumph of righteousness is never a partisan or sectional victory—it is a victory for humanity.

This leads us to look into the deepest struggle now going on among us. There is the conflict between the Christian interpretation of the nation and the atheistic; between a spiritual view of our great fellowship in industry, in art, in science, in citizenship, in humanity and a materialistic; between the believer in the ideal and the scoffer at it, between those who include the supreme good of their country in the coming of the kingdom of God and those whose conception of welfare is a vulgar and vicious selfishness. This is the campaign that lies back of all others, this is the tremendous duel in which all the disciples of Christ are involved, this is the battle that divides the country into two great hostile camps. There are seekers after God and the essential good of the people; and there are the self-seekers in the vulgar sense, and often in the vicious, and not infrequently in the criminal. The sides are taken and the fight is on. The advance of the cause of righteousness is the thing upon which good men have always set their hearts. All other victories have their value here. If they are real, if they are not imaginary, they are windows through which we can look and behold the fresh defeat given to the cause of inhumanity. If we can say with reference to our recent struggle that the America that is above is the mother of us all, surely we can claim in a profounder sense that the Jerusalem that we seek to establish over all holds for all men and all classes the one infinite good. Think of the depth and tenderness of Paul's figure. Motherhood is the name for the moral order in which we exist, for the spiritual fellowship to which we may rise, for the indwelling plan of God in our humanity and the energy of the Holy Spirit continually breaking in upon our being through that open way. Yes, we owe our existence as men, our capacity to co-operate one with another, our power to form brotherhoods in trade, in art, in all human enterprises and interests; we owe all the sweeter associations, all the deeper memories and the whole richness and tenderness of life—to the motherhood of God's kingdom in Christ. The whole upper side of our homes, of our brotherhoods, of our citizenship, of our humanity, is the mighty birth of the Jerusalem which is above. And the loneliness of wicked men, their secret cry for another existence, their longing for the days that are gone when existence was pure, the sorrow of those who have lost faith and character and hope, and who yet pine for an infinite good—all these are but the surges of the filial heart, the tidal return of instinct and feeling to the unutterable tenderness and love of the Divine Mother of us all.

For the expression of the contrast between the two Jerusalems which he saw, Paul used a tremendous comparison. The first Hebrew had two sons, one by the bond-woman and one by the free. The actual Jerusalem with all her ignorance and shame is that dishonored slave, bearing children into bondage. The ideal Jerusalem is the free woman, bearing a son who is the Divine promise of the ages. That is Paul's burning parallel from history. Nothing less terrible could at all serve the pressing and convulsive passion of his soul. Surely we see its application to our own national condition. There is an America that resembles that poor slave—an America that bears children into the worst oppressions, an America that would fill the land with ignorance, distrust, infinite greed, and utter anarchy; an America that would end a headlong and horrible career in self-destruction.

That is the America against which we must fight, not only on election day, but upon all days, not only with our ballots but with our total Christianity. For there is another America that resembles the free woman—an America that gives the son of promise to mankind, an America that united in herself, exulting in her august mission, inspired in the presence of her vast opportunity, and devoted to the highest good of all within her borders, creates a new epoch in human history and kindles a new hope for the world.

This is the meaning of the American Missionary Association. We claim for it a national significance. Its treasury, its great-hearted friends, its wise officers and directors, its companies of consecrated and heroic missionaries fighting wickedness and misery, ignorance and incapacity in the hardest fields in the country, are forces without which the nation could not live. The whole power of the society stands out against the nation that is from beneath—that is in bondage and that bears children into bondage; it stands forth in behalf of the nation that is from above, that is free and that is the glorious mother of us all. The appeal of the society is not to the church as a sect, but to the church as a representative of all wise statesmanship and all noble patriotism. The society beholds before it two Americas—it sees the actual America and its sins and miseries and needs, and the ideal America in all its purity and majesty and power. It believes that the actual America is an illusion, the falsehood, the invention of our weakness and our sin; and that the ideal America is the abiding reality, the everlasting truth—God's creation wrought in light and instinct with divine, undying life. And that the one America may pass, and that the other America may more and more take its vacant place; that the nation of ignorance and incapacity, selfishness and crime, wickedness and godlessness may go, and the nation founded in faith and in love may come is the one great end of this society's existence—the object of its prayers and toils and sufferings and the ultimate ground upon which it makes its appeal for support to all good men and all true citizens.

of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in the charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.

FIFTY-THIRD ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-Third Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the First Congregational Church, Binghamton, N. Y., October 17, 1899, at three o'clock in the afternoon, and in the absence of the President and Vice-Presidents was called to order by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, a member of the Executive Committee.

The Scripture lesson (Isaiah xxxv) was read by the Rev. Edward Taylor, and after the hymn "Rock of Ages" was sung, prayer was offered by the Rev. Alexander D. Stowell.

Addresses of welcome to the city and to the state were made by His Honor the Mayor of the City of Binghamton, Jerome DeWitt, and by Hon. Israel T. Deyo.

During the latter's address Vice-President Rev. Henry A. Stimson, of New York, took the chair, and at its close made an appropriate response.

Rev. Eugene C. Webster, of Massachusetts, was elected Assistant Recording Secretary.

On motion of Secretary Hazen, it was voted that the programme as printed be adopted, except as otherwise ordered.

The Treasurer's Report.

The treasurer's report was presented by Mr. H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer, of New York, which, with the certificate of the auditors, was received and placed on file.

General Survey.

The report of the Executive Committee, General Survey, was read by the Rev. Lewellyn Pratt, of Connecticut.

Nominating Committee.

The nominating committee appointed last year, Rev. Charles M. Southgate, of Massachusetts, chairman, on account of the absence of a majority of its members, was reconstituted as follows:

Nominating Committee.—Rev. Charles M. Southgate, of Massachusetts; Rev. George E. Hall, of New Hampshire; Rev. John R. Nichols, of Ohio; Mr. Charles N. Thorp, of New York; and Prof. Alfred T. Perry, of Connecticut.

Deacons.

Deacons were appointed to serve at the administration of the Lord's Supper at the evening service: Deacons Joseph P. Noyes, A. B. Carman, Harry Flint, James Allen, H. W. Hubbard and Charles A. Hull, all of New York.

The Concert of Prayer.

It was moved by the Rev. A. F. Beard, of New York, and carried, that on account of the lateness of the hour all further business be suspended.

The devotional service, the concert of prayer, was conducted by the Rev. A. F. Beard, and participated in by the Rev. Edward N. Packard, of New York; Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee; Rev. Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois; Rev. Jee Gam, of California; Rev. George V. Clark, of South Carolina; Prof. J. L. Wiley, of Florida; Rev. Stephen M. Newman, of Washington, D. C.; Rev. Sherrod Soule, of Connecticut; and Rev. William Hayes Ward, of New Jersey.

The hymn "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord" was sung.

The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois, and the Association adjourned to 7:30 o'clock.

TUESDAY EVENING.

At half-past seven o'clock the Association assembled, while the organist was rendering Handel's "Largo."

Vice-President Stimson presided, and called upon the Rev. George E. Hall, of New Hampshire, to conduct the devotional exercises. The hymn "Ye servants of God, your Master proclaim" was sung, and Dr. Hall read a portion of the third chapter of Paul's Epistle to the Colossians.

The quartet of the First Church of Binghamton rendered the anthem "Behold the Lamb of God."

The Sermon.

The Association sermon was preached by the Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, of Missouri, from the text, Col. 3:11.

The hymn "All hail the power of Jesus' Name" was sung.

The Communion Service.

The communion service was conducted by Rev. Charles M. Bartholomew, of New York, and Rev. Thomas Clayton, of New York.

After the benediction by Mr. Clayton, adjournment was had till 8:30 o'clock Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING,

A praise and prayer service was conducted at 8:30 o'clock by Rev. Edward N. Packard, of New York.

The session of the Association was called to order at 9 o'clock, Vice-President Stimson in the chair.

The hymn "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty" was sung, and prayer was offered by Rev. Ward P. Sutherland, of New York.

Secretary Hazen read the portion of the Constitution defining membership in the Association, and credentials were gathered, Rev. George W. Moore and Prof. Alfred T. Perry acting as tellers.

Committees.

The nominating committee, Rev. Charles M. Southgate, chairman, made the following report, which was adopted:

Business Committee.—Rev. N. W. Waters, of New York; Rev. Sherrod Soule, of Connecticut; Mr. Henry M. Beecher, of New York; Rev. Willard Scott, of Massachusetts; and Rev. George A. Brock, of New York.

Committee on Work in Mountain Missions.—Rev. Archibald Hadden, of Michigan; Rev. Joel F. Whitney, of New York; Rev. Edward N. Packard, of New York; Mrs. Alice G. West, of Massachusetts; Mr. Irving B. Prentiss, of New York.

Committee on Indian Work.—Rev. John R. Nichols, of Ohio; Mrs. William Kincaid, of New York; Rev. Fred L. Luce, of New York; Mr. W. H. Catlin, of Connecticut; Rev. Charles M. Bartholomew, of New York.

The minutes of Tuesday were read and approved.

Amendment to Constitution, Article IX.

Secretary Hazen gave notice of a proposed amendment to Article IX of the Constitution, to be acted upon at the annual meeting in 1900, and it was approved by the vote of a majority. The proposition was to strike out the words "the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous annual meeting," and to insert the clause, "notice of the amendment having been given at a preceding annual meeting," so that Article IX will read as follows:

ARTICLE IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting at an annual meeting, notice of the amendment having been given at a preceding annual meeting.

Report of Finance Committee.

The report of the Finance Committee was presented, accepted and placed on file.

Action of Last Meeting Reversed.

On motion of Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Massachusetts, it was voted to repeal the action of the annual meeting of 1898, whereby it was ordered that the nominating committee for future annual meetings be instructed to report by printed ballot as early as practicable in the meeting, and that at least two names be reported for each vacancy in the Executive Committee.

Amendment to Article V.

Rev. Charles M. Southgate, of Massachusetts, moved to take up the amendment to Article V, second paragraph, as proposed at the 1898 annual meeting, and it was so voted; whereupon, after some discussion, he moved that the proposed amendment to Article V be laid upon the table, to be called up at the annual meeting to be held in 1900, and be considered as a notice to amend the Constitution, should such notice be then required by the amendment to Article IX, voted upon this day. It was so ordered.

Memorial to Dr. Strieby and Mr. Mead.

Mr. Charles A. Hull, of New York, moved, and it was voted, that a committee of three be appointed to prepare an appropriate minute with reference to the death of Rev. M. E. Strieby and Mr. Charles L. Mead, of New York.

Mr. Charles A. Hull, Rev. Charles M. Southgate and Rev. Sydney Strong were appointed the committee.

Greetings from the Chicago Congregational Club.

Rev. Sydney Strong, of Illinois, presented the following greetings to the American Missionary Association from the Chicago Congregational Club:

"American Missionary Association:

"The Congregational Club of Chicago sends greetings to the American Missionary Association about to assemble in annual meeting at Binghamton, New York, with hearty congratulations on its splendid financial showing, and with earnest prayers that wisdom and courage may be given its members to meet the grave responsibilities now thrown upon the Association by the fresh perils which confront the Negro in the South, and clear discernment of its duties to the people of our new possessions in the islands of the sea. J. F. Loba, President of the Club."

Mountain Missions.

Rev. Archibald Hadden, of Michigan, presented a report on the work of the Mountain Missions, which he followed by an address.

Rev. M. N. Sumner made a missionary address.

The Jubilee Singers rendered two selections: "Rise, Shine for Thy Light is Coming," and "I Know I Have Another Building."

Indian Missions.

Rev. John R. Nichols, of Ohio, presented a report on Indian Missions, which he followed by an address.

Miss Mary C. Collins, of North Dakota; Rev. Albert E. Dunning, of Massachusetts; Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts; Rev. Edward N. Packard, of New York; Mr. Cullen B. Foote, of Connecticut, and Vice-President Stimson, of New York, participated in a discussion of the Indian question.

Telegrams.

The following telegram was read to the Association:

"Hemlock, N. Y., Oct. 18th, 1899.

"American Missionary Association:

"Accept greetings in Titus iii: 15.

S. B. Sherrill,
Moderator Ontario District of Western New York."

The following reply was sent:

"Ontario District Association:

"The American Missionary Association responds cordially and gratefully to the greetings of the Ontario Association. Henry A. Hazen, Recording Secretary."

Committees Appointed.

The committee on nominations made the following nominations, and they were confirmed, Committee on Southern Education.—Rev. Gerald H. Beard, of Connecticut; Rev. Samuel Johnson, of New York; Rev. Edwin J. Klock, of New York; Mrs. Henry A. Hazen, of Massachusetts; Mr. Daniel M. Jones, of Pennsylvania.

Committee on Chinese Work.—Rev. William E. Griffis, New York; Rev. Ethan Curtis, of New York; Rev. Thomas Clayton, of New York; Miss Lizette Winslow, of Massachusetts, and Rev. William A. Trow, of New York.

Finance Committee, to report next year.—Rowland G. Hazard, of Rhode Island; A. Lyman Williston, of Massachusetts; Joseph P. Noyes, of New York; George Wilcox, of New York; Thomas Duncan, of New York.

To lead prayer meeting Thursday morning.—Rev. Lewin F. Buell, of New York.

The Finance Committee appointed at the last annual meeting made its report. In the absence of Irving C. Gaylord, chairman, the report was read by Rev. Mr. Soule, of Connecticut.

The Jubilee Singers sang "A Little Talk with Jesus."

After prayer and the benediction by Rev. Edwin J. Klock, of New York, the Association adjourned.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Promptly at 2 o'clock, Vice-President Stimson called the meeting to order.

The hymn, "The Church's One Foundation" was sung.

Memorial Address.

Secretary Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois, delivered an address in memory of Rev. M. E. Strieby.

Memorial Minute.

Mr. Charles A. Hull, of New York, offered the following minute in behalf of the special committee appointed at the morning session to prepare a minute in memory of Rev. M. E. Strieby and Mr. Charles L. Mead:

"During the year just past, the Association has lost from its companionship and counsels two men who have been active and influential for many years in its administration.

"The first of these to pass to the higher life was the older of the two, and was also longer in the service of the Association.

"The Reverend Michael E. Strieby, D.D., came into its work in the year 1864, before the close of the War of the Rebellion, and shortly after the proclamation of President Lincoln had given to the Southern Negroes the privileges and responsibilities of freedom. The total annual receipts of the Association were then only a little more than $10,000. During the thirty-five years of his connection with it he saw its enlargement to its present eminent position, and to his wise management, his far-sighted wisdom and his regal and religious spirit, the marvelous improvement in the condition and outlook of the African race in the United States is in no small measure due.

"For more than a quarter of a century the work of the Association in its spirit and its widened scope was essentially his work (not that he was an autocrat, or that he was unwilling to listen to counsel), for he had the faculty of adopting and adapting the suggestions of others, as well as of initiating new policies, and of infusing his own consecrated spirit into others. His was a judicial mind combined with a rare and kindly enthusiasm, which made him pre-eminently a leader in his chosen life-work. His lasting monument is the elevation by Christian teaching of the oppressed and down-trodden to whom he came in Christ's name, and to whom his life was devoted. In the fullness of years he has passed on to his reward, and to him surely belong those gracious words, 'Inasmuch as thou hast done it unto the least of these, my brethren, thou hast done it unto Me.'

"The second man whose memory we honor to-day, Mr. Charles L. Mead, was at the time of his death one of our honored vice-presidents, and for seven years prior to 1898 had been chairman of our Executive Committee. He was first chosen a member of that Committee in 1875, and served upon it continuously until a year ago. Mr. Mead was probably more familiar with the actual work of the Association than any other member of the Committee. He had visited our principal schools and churches and knew the teachers and pastors. He was a prudent counselor, a true friend, a manly Christian, whose friendship was an acquisition, and whose companionship was delightful. He gave without stint of his time and means to the work and administration of the great trust which we hold; and in his death we lose an associate and friend whose memory we will always cherish, and whose counsel will be greatly missed in our Executive Committee and at our annual meetings."

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Edward Taylor, of New York.

The Jubilee Singers rendered, "We shall walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death."

The report of the Executive Committee on the work undertaken by the Association in Porto Rico was presented by the Rev. William Hayes Ward, of New Jersey.

Rev. John Edwards, of Ohio, who is under commission as evangelistic preacher in Porto Rico, made a brief address.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Albert J. Lyman, of New York, in behalf of the teachers and missionaries of the Association who are to go to Porto Rico.

The Jubilee Singers sang, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?"

Rev. Gerald H. Beard, of Connecticut, presented a report on the Southern Educational Work, which he followed with an address.

Rev. Laforest H. Planving, of Louisiana, delivered a missionary address.

Prayer was offered and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Ethan Curtis, of New York.

Adjournment was effected at 4.50 P. M.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Vice-President Stimson called the Association to order at 7.30 o'clock, by announcing the hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers."

Prayer was offered by Rev. Lewin F. Buell, of New York, and an anthem was sung by the First Church quartet.

Rev. Jee Gam, of California, made an address on the Chinese work in California.

A collection of $100.65 was taken for this Chinese work.

The Jubilee Singers stirred the congregation with "I Want to Be Ready," "Steal Away to Jesus," and "There's a Great Camp Meeting in the Promised Land."

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Stephen M. Newman, of Washington, D. C.

Miss Mary C. Collins, of North Dakota, made an address upon the missionary work among the Indians.

Rev. M. N. Sumner, of Tennessee, spoke upon the missionary work among the Mountain Whites of the South.

Prof. Joseph L. Wiley, of Florida, addressed the Association upon the missionary work among the Negroes.

Rev. Willard Scott, of Massachusetts, made the closing address of the evening.

The hymn "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" was sung, and Rev.

William E. Griffis, of New York, pronounced the benediction.

The Association adjourned at 9.55 o'clock.

Young People's Rally.

At the same hour a Young People's Rally was held at the Plymouth Church, over which the Rev. Edward Sampson Tead, of Massachusetts, presided. Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Charles M. Southgate, of Massachusetts; Rev. George H. Gutterson, of Massachusetts; Rev. George V. Clark, of South Carolina; Rev. Jee Gam, of California; and Miss Mary C. Collins, of North Dakota. Singing was led by the young people's choir, and the Jubilee Singers rendered several selections. The collection taken for the American Missionary Association amounted to $12.00.

THURSDAY MORNING.

A prayer service was conducted by the Rev. Lewin F. Buell, of New York, and at nine o'clock, Vice-President Stimson in the chair, the Association convened.

The hymn "I need Thee every hour" was sung, and Rev. George H. Gutterson offered prayer.

The minutes of Wednesday were read and approved.

Vice-President Stimson appointed the nominating committee for next year and the appointment was confirmed.

Nominating Committee for next year.—Rev. Willard Scott, of Massachusetts; Rev. Stephen M. Newman, of Washington, D. C.; Rev. John R. Nichols, of Ohio; Rev. James W. Bixler, of Connecticut; Rev. Sydney Strong, of Illinois.

Rev. William E. Griffis, of New York, made a report on Chinese Missions, and followed it with an address.

Rev. Jee Gam, of California, made a missionary address on the success and needs of Chinese work in California.

An offering of $77.00 was made toward the debt on the Chinese Mission in San Francisco.

Rev. Sydney Strong, of Illinois, made a report on Southern Church Work, and followed it with an address.

Missionary addresses were made by Rev. George V. Clark, of South Carolina; Rev. George W. Moore, of Tennessee; Rev. Joseph E. Roy, of Illinois.

Voted, that the business meeting be held at 2 o'clock, and followed by the regular programme.

Rev. George E. Hall, of New Hampshire made the closing address.

The Jubilee Singers sang "I want to be like Jesus."

Rev. Jee Gam pronounced the benediction.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Annual Business Meeting.

The afternoon session began at two o'clock with the hymn "The morning light is breaking," Vice-President Stimson in the chair.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Eugene C. Webster, of Massachusetts.

Telegram.

The following telegram was read by Secretary Hazen:

"CHICAGO, Ill., October 18, 1899.

"To the American Missionary Association:

"Greetings and congratulations. I regret deeply my inability to be present. May light from God be given the Association to see clearly what the hour demands, and the moral courage to take an attitude as true to the colored people of the South under their new perils and persecutions, as was the attitude of the brave souls who bore their testimony and did their work back in the early days of our own cherished and now sainted Whipple and Strieby, and of Garrison and Whittier, and Beecher and Sumner, and the immortal Lincoln. Numbers 6: 24—27.

"F. A. NOBLE."

The closing address was delivered by Vice-President Stimson, of New York.

Resolution of Thanks.

The following minute was adopted by a rising vote, and responded to by Rev. N. M. Waters, Pastor of the First Church of Binghamton:

At Binghamton, in its Fifty-Third Annual Meeting, the American Missionary Association has proved once more the warmth of Christian fellowship and the graces of Christian hospitality. As these meetings close, we would express to the two churches, their pastors, the many active helpers, older and younger, those who have led in the service of song, and to those who have welcomed us to their homes, our hearty gratitude. The name of this city will be associated in our minds with the Christian patriotism of this work and the Christian friendliness its workers meet.

We have been met with a thoughtful and abounding courtesy on the part of the public press, the railroads and their representatives, and all who could find a way to make our coming and our tarrying a delight. May the lasting blessing be left with them such as we take away with us.

Closing Exercises.

The Jubilee Singers* sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

The sessions closed with the Doxology, and the benediction was pronounced by Vice-President Stimson, after which the Association closed without day.

HENRY A. HAZEN,
EUGENE C. WEBSTER.

W. Work, of Nashville, Tenn.; bassos, Albert E. Greenlaw, of Woodstock, Ontario, and George E. Martin, of Charleston, S. C.

FIFTY-THIRD ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1899.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The Executive Committee submits its Fifty-third Annual Report. Its varied and various lines of work are interwoven with the theories and reasons for our methods.

Beginning with the Southern educational work, the experiences of the year have been characteristic and happily uneventful, continuing with their added confirmations in the practical tests of schools and school work. The story of one year within the schools is substantially the story of all. At the same time our workers have been keenly awake to whatever may be secured by hospitality to new suggestions and improved methods.

Our theory and purpose remain the same. From its beginning the Association has held to a purpose of education identical with that of Christianity. President Tucker, in the recent International Congregational Council, said with decided acceptation, "Religion cannot hold its own in any other form than that of education." When, therefore, we put emphasis on our educational agencies, it is because this is our Congregational theory, and also because by the very nature and conditions of our work we are obliged to do this.

The good seed of the Kingdom of God cannot bear much fruit in shallow ground. Where there is sterility and impotence of mind—no deepness of earth—if the seed springs up at all, it soon withers away. It only yields "much fruit" when intellectual energy and Christian faith take root in disciplined minds and multiplies itself in diffusion. This is not to say that we must wait until people are educated before we carry the gospel to the ignorant and the illiterate. It is only to say that there is little hope of permanent growth and strength in conditions of ignorance. With this theory and practice of personal and social regeneration the work of the year has gone on as aforetime.

ELEMENTARY SCHOOLS.

Our purely elementary schools (twenty-six in number) are chiefly in those places uncared-for by public schools. We do not undertake to do the work of public schools, nor in any way to compete with them. On the other hand, the graduates of our graded and normal schools are year by year teaching in hundreds of elementary schools, both in cities and in the rural regions where the demands are unspeakably great. Whatever charter we have to continue our common schools is in the call to do that which must be done by us or must go undone. For the most part these schools sustained by the Association are associated with our rural churches. These are in the states of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee.

NORMAL AND GRADED SCHOOLS.

These, located in different centers, are in ten Southern states, as follows: Virginia, 1; North Carolina, 8; South Carolina, 2; Georgia, 10; Florida, 2; Alabama, 8; Tennessee, 6; Kentucky, 3; Mississippi, 4; Arkansas, 1. Total, 45.

The year under review has added one more justification of the policy of having these permanent centers of larger educational privilege in which youth can be prepared with thoroughness through all the grades from the primary onward, not only for the struggle of life for themselves, but also as preparatory schools for teaching others. Each passing year testifies to the missionary wisdom which is thus teaching the race, under God, to save itself. The kind of education which has proved to be wise and good for white people is proving itself to be equally good for black people. While colored boys and girls as yet, and as a rule, are somewhat slower in their apprehension than white people are, every year shows that they can do the same work in the same ways, are susceptible of the same influences, and are enlarged in thought and mind by the same studies and the same methods.

The inquiry sometimes comes to us, why the Association should continue these in cities of the South where the graded public schools for colored youth are established. The reason is that in no city where we are working can the public school begin to meet the urgent necessities of the people. There is a constant movement from the rural places to cities. In cities where we are located there are great numbers roaming the streets and growing up in ignorance.

Several of our schools in the past year have been gladdened with a permanent religious interest which has resulted in many hopeful conversions. One school numbered seventy-nine, who have begun a hopeful Christian life, and the church annexed to it has doubled its membership.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

These Mountain Schools are in the same system with similar courses of study as those among the colored people. They are ten in number, with fifty-five teachers and 1,587 enrolled pupils. Two of these—one of them nearly 5,000 feet above the sea—need enlargement in order that young men in these remote regions may have equal privileges in school life that are afforded the young women. Only co-education in the mountains will insure better homes in the future. We have this year the new school edifice for Grand View Academy from the proceeds of insurance. It is refurnished and is filled with eager students.

Our Academy building in Joppa, Ala.—a school among the white people of the mountains—was destroyed this summer during vacation by fire. Six persons now under the indictment by a Grand Jury have been arrested and are awaiting trial for incendiarism. The building was insured and will be rebuilt.

Through the continued benevolence of Mrs. Joseph K. Brick, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has planted and is responsible for the fine institution at Enfield, N. C., the girls' dormitory—Benedict Hall—has been doubled in capacity during the year.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS.

Our higher institutions, five in number, are as follows: Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.; Straight University, New Orleans, La.; Tillotson College, Austin, Tex.

SUMMARY OF EDUCATIONAL WORK IN THE SOUTH.

The nomenclature of these institutions has led many to think that most of the students in them are pursuing collegiate studies. The fact is, that while these institutions bear a college name and have a college intention, each one has all the grades of elementary, grammar and normal instruction. The collegiate departments receive only the patient and courageous few, and these only by the survival of the fittest. It should allay the fears of those who anticipate an overproduction of disciplined minds among the colored people to remember that the people but two-score years emancipated from a condition in which to learn to read was forbidden by law, now number, by late estimates, ten millions. If this estimate is correct, they are nearly twice as many people as are in the entire group of New England states; twice as many as are in the Dominion of Canada; as many as are in the combined populations of Scotland and Ireland; ten times the population of Cuba, and ten times that of Porto Rico; one-half of these millions yet untouched by education, and all alike handicapped with many unjust and unchristian hindrances, while not more than one in ten thousand of them has yet received a college education. In the five higher institutions of the Association but eighty-five students are in the college courses. "What are these among so many?" There is pressing reason for continued emphasis upon the duty of a Christian people to whom education has been a birthright not to be overborne by the plea for superficiality, nor turned aside from the call to furnish thoroughly educated leaders, preachers and teachers for an increasing race which must learn without delay to work out its own salvation.

We may again quote the approbation of the International Congregational Council, viz.: "The best training and education which the best institutions can give him, and the most consecrated spirit, make a man none too good for the least, and humblest work in the ministry of the Church, and the humblest and weakest churches require not weak men, but strong men to help them out of their weakness." This is true without respect to race or color. We leave it to those who think otherwise and who plead for a minimum requirement of mental discipline and intellectual development to make the contention that there is danger lest the colored people may not be left sufficiently in darkness.

We call attention anew to the importance of these institutions. They are essential to the permanent elevation of the colored people, and year by year are making great returns for Christianity and civilization. They deserve Christian appreciation and help.

Tougaloo University is rejoicing in its new and spacious brick dormitory hall, with accommodations for one hundred girls—replaced by insurance—and a separate building for dining-room and for needed kitchen uses has also been erected this year.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

One of the factors in the preparation for the struggle of life among the Negro people, is industrial training. Much attention is given to this in our schools. If we do not claim that it is the way and only way of salvation this does not mean that we fail to recognize its place and importance. At Talladega, Ala., a farm of three hundred acres, with instruction in agriculture, scientific and practical, with the rearing and care of cattle, with a model barn, not surpassed in the county, a shop for wood-working, a printing-office, a modern and model laundry, with domestic economy and nursing and care of the sick for the girls, make the institution a hive of industry. Teachers' and farmers' institutes are regularly held in Talladega and adjoining counties. At Enfield, N. C., a farm of more than one thousand acres, a large part in excellent cultivation, with varied crops, with cattle-raising and horticulture, with new and modern buildings and appliances for wood-working and iron-working, with ample provisions for teaching the domestic sciences in varied forms, repeat the same story. At Tougaloo University, in Mississippi, a farm of six hundred acres raises crops of corn, oats, hay, potatoes, sugar cane, berries and fruits, both for home consumption and for market. Practical training is given in the raising and care of cattle, and farm cultivation is given to the students. Excellent mechanical shops for architectural drawing, wood-working, for iron and steel working, with courses based chiefly upon those of the Massachusetts School of Technology, testify to our regard for this auxiliary of education. Straight University, in New Orleans, gives its students also a thorough knowledge of wood-working and printing, and the young women instruction in the domestic sciences. Likewise in Tillotson College, Austin, Tex., wood-working, architectural drawing and iron-working are taught.

Mechanics and printing, together with the domestic sciences, are taught at Fisk University. Tougaloo and Straight Universities have received generous appropriations from the Slater Fund during the year.

THEOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

In Talladega College, Straight, Fisk and Tougaloo Universities, there are special departments for theological study, where students are to a greater or less degree prepared for the ministry of the gospel. Especially in Talladega and Straight the theological departments are well attended. The enrollment at Talladega last year was 25, and in Straight 23, most of whom look forward to church pastorates. In most of our schools there are missionary societies, and those of Christian Endeavor in vigorous and useful service. Seven mission Sunday-schools, e. g., in the vicinity of Talladega, enrolling 300 pupils, are maintained during the school year.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

In closing this general survey of the educational work in the South it may be right to meet the inquiry which has been started of late as to the conditions in which we are working and as to our encouragement or discouragement, in view of the alleged increasing criminality among the colored people, and the complications of the problem of salvation through the oppositions which multiply against them, both under the forms of law and of the lawless outside of these forms. The question is frequently asked of us, "Are our schools and institutions yielding what we expected?"

Our reply is that for one-half of these millions the development and progress have been wonderful, whether from an educational, moral or material point of view. This has the consent of nearly all candid and intelligent people in the South.

Those who are looking chiefly at the degradation of half the race, not yet raised from their low estate, and at the criminality which attends upon ignorance—always among all people, for crime is not a racial phenomenon but exists largely where empty minds have neither within themselves nor in their environments protection against evil —will do well to remember that this degradation is not because the race is losing ground once possessed. The condition is simply made more apparent because the race is gaining. In slavery, when all were down in the bogs together, the race had no element to make its degradation so manifest, but now, when the standards of the race by education, and its character and possibilities stand forth, the contrast is striking, and the condition of the residuum is quoted to the effect that the race is deteriorating. President Schurman of the Philippine Commission says: "We should judge of a race by its best products." There are those who judge the Negro race and its future by 5 per cent. of degenerates out of 95 per cent. of the ignorant half. That 56 per cent. of an entire race have been upraised to their present intellectual and moral condition, to their already attained degree of material thrift and pure home life, to their general regard for law and order, which regard will not suffer in comparison with that of white people North or South, must be our reply to both the question of encouragement and to the question of theory and method. Certainly when we see these as yet unreached millions in a weakness and wretchedness not easily overstated, we might well be discouraged were it not that "the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation," and that we have the actual and abundant evidence of this in the work of the Association for the past two-score years. The Negro race is being saved, and there is no more call for discouragement in the work than there is for our being discouraged at the condition of the world now, nineteen centuries after our Lord's resurrection.

In "that far off divine event
To which the whole creation moves" the Negro race will not be excluded.

PORTO RICO.

In January last a committee, by appointment, consisting of Rev. Dr. Ward and Secretary Beard, visited the island of Porto Rico to inquire into its religious condition and needs. This was done in response to many requests of our constituents. Six of the seven provinces of Porto Rico were visited. The committee returned and reported a population of a million people—a Catholic country without religion—in which above 800,000 are under no church influence, absolutely illiterate and miserably poor. They reported that while a certain kind of purely evangelical mission work might bring some of these people to some degree under the power of the gospel, the ignorance was so appalling that there could be no warrant for permanent church growth or intelligent church future without the enlightenment which must come from Christian schools. A people with a long heritage of superstition and in dense ignorance must be taken out of this through the children, before habits of thought are formed and while they can, day by day, come under continuous influence.

It was also reported that the church work undertaken ought to be such as would not bring to the mind of these people the denominational divisions which owe their origin to conditions which could have no significance to them, and that it would be better for the Christianizing of Porto Rico if there should not be there the spectacle of a divided Protestantism.

In accordance with this report, Secretary Beard was requested to again visit Porto Rico with the purpose of locating three schools and to make arrangements with the authorities and communities for temporary school buildings, with the necessary appointments for the work and homes for the teachers. This duty was performed in April last, and within a year of the time when Porto Rico had become a member of our national family. One school was located at Santurce, on the mainland, about three miles from the capital—San Juan—and suitable buildings were rented for a school and for the teachers' home.

Another location chosen is in Utuado—a town in the centre of the mountainous coffee region. A building well fitted for school work was secured and arrangements perfected for a teachers' home. In both of these localities we are assured of the hearty welcome and co-operation of the authorities and the people.

It was advised that the third school proposed be held in abeyance until these two shall be in successful operation. This report was adopted and Mr. Charles B. Scott, an experienced school principal —a professor in the New York State Normal School at Oswego—an earnest Christian man, has accepted the appointment of principal, and with his wife—also an experienced teacher—are now in Porto Rico. They took with them an entire outfit of school furniture, desks, maps, etc., and all the necessary appliances for model schools, and are instructed to have the schools and teachers' homes in readiness for the teachers to follow them. These teachers have been selected with great care for their missionary devotion, their practical experience in teaching and their ability to use to some extent the language of the Island.

They come from the following states: Connecticut, New York, Ohio and Michigan. They will take to their work in Porto Rico, in themselves fine types of educated womanhood, and we think they will not fail to do a noble Christian service not only, but also will do something towards recreating the spirit of friendliness on the part of the people toward our country. We ask for them the remembrance of those in whose name they begin the hopeful and needful missionary work.

The Committee also voted to inaugurate such preliminary evangelizing and church work as may seem wise, and, after extensive correspondence, commissioned the Rev. John Edwards, formerly a missionary among the Spanish-speaking people of Mexico, to go to Porto Rico and enter upon this service. Mr. Edwards will take up his work immediately, leaving for the island at once after this annual meeting. His large experience in Mexico, and his acquaintance with the language make the promise of his efforts specially encouraging.

The utmost care was taken in entering this new mission field. Conferences were held by the representatives of different boards of missions. The plans of all the societies for work in this new territory were mutually considered. As a result, no two Protestant denominations have so planted their missions as to duplicate the work, or to occupy the same general territory. Denominational controversy in the field seems impossible. The missionaries have been instructed by all the societies to meet together as frequently as possible for comparison of plans and conference in behalf of the whole work. Our constituent churches we are sure will thoroughly approve of this method of entering upon the new field.

SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

Number of Churches	211
Ministers and Missionaries	140
Number of Church Members	11,398
Added during the year	1,447
Added by profession of faith	1,238
Scholars in Church and Mission Sunday-schools	14,806

We report a further advance in our Southern church work for the current year. Fifteen new churches have been added to our roll, of which three are in the Southern mountains and fourteen in the lowlands, and six churches are dropped. The last decade has witnessed many fluctuations in this work. The changes of population from one region to another have in some cases reduced and in other cases increased the number of our churches. But, upon the whole, there has been a steady and gratifying gain in the decade, increasing our enrollment of one hundred and twenty-eight churches to two hundred and eleven. This is a net increase of sixty-five per cent. For the same period the net increase of Congregational churches throughout the United States has been twenty per cent. The largest number of Southern churches received by the Association in any one year was in 1895 when forty-two churches were added, and the smallest number was in 1891, when four churches were added.

More than one-half of our churches are found in the three States of North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama, including over five thousand members. The churches of North Carolina are specially well organized. The recent annual meeting of its State Association was a noteworthy occasion. It was held in Charlotte with one of the new churches recently organized, and already the strongest Congregational church in the State. The twenty-one new churches organized during the last five years were fully represented. The discussions were of high order, and there was marked enthusiasm over the progress recently made by the Congregational fellowship.

Our Southern churches now comprise eleven thousand four hundred members, twelve hundred of whom were received on confession of faith during the year. It has been a time of great depression among the colored people throughout the South. Some of our churches are in the immediate vicinity of the scenes of violence and murder which have shocked the nation at large, and in some cases the people have given up their homes and fled to other sections in the hope that they would find conditions of peace and order. It is a significant fact that the perturbation and discouragement so rife among these poor people have seemed to turn their thoughts more deeply towards the comfort of religious trust and hope. For years there has not been a time of such frequent continued meetings and prayer for revival as during some months of the past year. Our evangelists have labored incessantly and have wrought a good work. Pastors have written us from many regions of the consolation which religion has brought to those who feared the perils surrounding them.

Seasons of special revival have been experienced in the following, among other churches, and have resulted in the reception of a large number of members on confession of faith: Athens, Florence, Montgomery and Talladega, Ala.; Temple Park Church, Wash.; Thomasville, Ga.; Evarts and Louisville, Ky.; New Iberia and Roseland, La.; Charlotte, Little's Mills and Wilmington, N. C.; Charleston, S. C.; and Howard Church, Nashville, Pine Mountain and Robbins, Tenn.

The inception and growth of our new church work, both in town and in country, are due very largely to the great educational service which the Association has been carrying on in the centres of population and influence for so many years. Students who have attended our schools and become imbued with their principles, after settling down in life and taking up the responsibilities of family and home, desire for themselves and their families better forms of church life than are rife about them. Whenever a few of these families are grouped together a desire is awakened for a church fellowship which shall discountenance all forms of immorality and stand for intelligence and purity. With comparatively little aid from the Association, they are ready to undertake the organization of a church and school, or the introduction of teachers who have been trained either in our own or kindred institutions into the schools of the neighborhood. The creation of these social centers is of inestimable importance. The new church life gives form to all social relations, and sheds a beneficent influence throughout the community and region round about.

Some of our city churches are actively engaged in city mission work among the poorer classes of the colored people, and their service has been attended by marked success during the year. We have received testimonials to the value of this service from city officials and other leading men. There is also activity along the lines of institutional church work, and many of our churches carry on mission Sunday-schools and hold mission services in a number of localities in the vicinity of their own church home.

While some of our new churches are already large, the majority of them are small in membership and composed of very poor people. Still these churches have organized themselves, without suggestion from the Association, in protest against corrupt forms of church life, and they provide in a very large measure for their own expenses. Some of them are classified as missions rather than churches. In many instances the laboring population is changeable, and the number in attendance at the churches fluctuates widely from year to year.

Our church work in the South is not a service of denominational propagandism. We care little for a sectarian name. There are aided churches which do not wear our denominational name; they are union churches. But while we care but little for the name they wear, we care everything for the thing they are. They stand on a platform of moral character as a condition of church fellowship in the pew and in the pulpit. They stand for the freedom of the local church from any outside jurisdiction, and for the fraternal fellowship of these free churches, without regard to caste or color or any other un-Christian distinction.

Our mountain churches now number sixteen hundred members. We have been able this year to initiate more effective service by a slight increase in the number of our ministers. Three new churches have been organized, and a number of outside missions are carried on. Our ministers are sorely taxed to provide even inadequately for the demands made upon their time and strength. Some of them have circuits of five or six different churches, many miles apart. Hardly any of these churches are in the towns, and many of them are out on the hillsides and valleys of the country, to which the people gather from many miles distant. In the mining districts, the changes from labor troubles have quite depopulated some communities, while they are building up others; and the gospel work has ceased in one locality only to find new and encouraging openings in others.

No adequate statement can be given of the stream of activities and influences proceeding from these churches both in town and country. Some of them are centres of influence in the leading cities and towns of the South. Many of them are situated in the midst of back country populations where dense ignorance and superstition prevail. They are environed by churches which wear the Christian name, but make little account of the standards of Christian virtue. They represent the aspirations of the new life among the colored people, and bear witness to requirements of virtue and morality, utterly disassociated with the superstition and wild fanaticism characterizing the lower types of church life. The denser the ignorance, the more intense is the sectarianism of these churches, and our churches have to meet not only this obstacle, but the opposition of that witchcraft and necromancy which so darkly clouds the life of millions of the more ignorant Negroes.

Our church work is leagued with our school work in behalf of the growth of an intelligent Christianity. Both are joined in the one aim of its development. Both seek the poor and lowly for the sake of their upliftment. The gospel is for the educated man and the highly cultured community, but it is not the less for the illiterate Negro and Indian. We do not hold that a condition of previous culture and refinement is a necessary prerequisite for the ministration of the gospel and the church. On the contrary, we hold that the lost condition of vice and ignorance and degradation is the very condition to which the church should address itself as a saving power. The work of the church for the poor is in fulfilment of the errand on which Jesus Christ came into the world, and the mission work of the American Missionary Association has evidenced a thousand times the power of the gospel in transforming the lowest conditions of humanity.

INDIAN MISSIONS.

INDIAN STATISTICS (INCLUDING ALASKA).

Number of Schools	6
Number of Pupils	368

An extended missionary experience leads to the conclusion that for civilizing and Christianizing the Indian, direct evangelistic work must be largely depended upon. Mission schools should be introduced as far as means can be provided. But the direct work of making a Christian home is really prior to the school itself.

In various fields our evangelistic service is reaching children in the unsectarian government schools. In some cases these schools are largely attended by children of Protestant Christian parents Always, if we have a church in the vicinity, these children, upon the request of their parents, are permitted to attend the church services. Thus the joint ministration with the children at the school and with the parents in the home is not only educating the young, but forming Christian homes for them to return to from their schools, so there needs be no backward step when they leave the school and come back to a pagan home as would otherwise be the case.

The ideal plan would be the formation of such mission schools in the villages as would open the way for the children to be educated in the immediate neighborhood of their homes, while they could still draw their share of the home rations, and thus save the onerous expense of their support from mission funds. Then, from these schools, the most promising pupils can be selected for the higher educational training of our boarding schools, the local schools thus being preparatory to our larger central schools. But when these primary local mission schools cannot be furnished, the only remaining course is to carry the evangelistic work directly into the villages and homes. Our missionaries say, give us Christian schools by all means, but if this gift cannot be made, we must claim as an essential right that you give us missionaries to evangelize the homes of the Indian.

The marked feature of the year's work is the religious advance. Native churches are growing stronger and stronger, and whole communities are emerging from the shadow of paganism. A new generation of Christians is coming forward. Long years of devotion and self-denial in these regions are now bearing their fruitage. The younger generation of Indians is coming out of the old superstitions and many of their leading representatives are earnest Christians. All out-station work is offering greater promise, year by year, in the different fields. At a single communion of the Grand River church, our missionary had the joy of receiving fourteen young girls into the church. They had grown up under the influences of the church, and their entering encourages the conclusion that they will make intelligent and earnest Christians.

The annual council of our Indian missions met at Grand River in May, drawing missionaries from various parts of the wide field which extends hundreds of miles north and south. A most interesting feature of the gathering was the recognition of a church at the new Oak Creek chapel, eight miles away from the mother church at Grand River. The evangelistic work on the Grand River district extends about sixty miles, and the people gather two or three times a year at the central chapel for communion. Eight preaching stations are covered by the missionaries and two Indian assistants.

The station reports denote improvements in many directions. The one-room house seems to be going out of fashion. In some cases the young men have built snug and warm houses near their own, for some of the older people. Much more could be done if only the people had the privilege of earning something. One missionary counted at one period fifteen men, within a few weeks, who either came to her and asked for work, or who had come wanting to dispose of what represented their work. Many of these she had to turn away owing to the impossibility of finding any service for them. She says:

"The seed has taken root; one can see it and feel it, sometimes in the lighting up of the face that was so stolid, the cheery word, the warm handshake, the prayer and heart utterances in the social meetings, the little, kind, thoughtful acts. While we in the work do not want the sympathy which savors of pity or condolence, we do want and need strong, warm, loving sympathy in the work."

The Santee Normal Training School, our central educational institution, has had a year of quiet and successful service. After protracted waiting and very earnest work, the longed-for artesian well has been finished and is reported as a great success. It pours out 1,700 gallons to the minute, and has flowed clear from the first. The workers feel that this newly-opened fountain will be as lasting as it is abundant. It furnishes water for all the general purposes of the mission, as well as for irrigation and the much-needed fire protection.

A valuable feature of instruction reported to us from Santee is that of nature study. It has proved helpful in awakening the dull perceptions of the pupil, and in the end, increasing the activities of his higher mental faculties. One of the most useful features of the industrial work is the cooking school, in charge of the principal's wife. The girls greatly enjoy their training in this direction, and are most anxious during the summer vacation to show at their own homes the skill which they have attained in household work while at Santee.

Early in the year the missions at Fort Berthold received a visit from a government officer of ability and experience, the supervisor of Indian schools. He examined the various schools carried on throughout the region and declared them to be the best attempt of the Indians to help themselves in educational lines that he had seen.

On March 14th the largest building at Fort Berthold, the Calhoun dining hall, was consumed by fire with nearly all its contents. This greatly hindered the school work throughout the remainder of the year; but through the insurance provided by the Association, means have come in for such rebuilding and improvements as will partly restore the efficiency of the school. Half of the pupils, the older ones, were still carried forward in the school work. The old mission house was turned into a temporary dining hall, by gathering up all the utensils which could be found in the mission. A number of the little girls were taken into a log house at Elbowoods, where they were cared for and taught.

On November 26th, while the Rev. T. L. Riggs was away among the out-stations of the Moreau River, the old home at Oahe was suddenly and totally consumed by fire. Although the money loss was partially covered by the insurance which the Associatiou secures on all its buildings, the greater loss of many things made precious by the affections and associations of a lifetime was irremediable. The work was continued regularly in the school, and Mr. Riggs returned to the incessant activities of the out-station work. For the next six weeks he averaged two hundred miles a week of wagon traveling from station to station. Before New Year's, the Oahe school was filled to its utmost capacity.

ALASKAN MISSIONS.

Last year we had to report the remarkable service rendered by our missionary in his use of the reindeer herd, after driving it seven hundred miles, for the rescue of the imprisoned whaling fleet. Conspicuous mention has been made in the government reports of this great service. The present year has been marked by the erection of a small mission building at Mit-le-tok, a settlement some twenty-five miles northeast of the main station. Two native helpers, Sokweena and his wife, have been sent there to teach the people, and a special interest attends the work from the fact that the Mit-le-tok people saved Sokweena's life last year by rescuing him from an ice floe after he had given up hope. Mr. Lopp writes that there are nearly twenty children of school age, and a number of young men and women who will take interest in trying to learn to read, and he thinks that the older people will generally attend the Sunday services. Mr. Lopp reports special need of a minister or a lady teacher for assistance in his work, which is being carried steadily forward in the upliftment of the natives, not only through the direct influence of the gospel, but by introducing such industrial improvements as are of great value in rescuing them from danger of starvation. The general region has been visited by gold prospectors with unfortunate results to the explorers. It is to be understood that this Alaskan work is entirely distinct and separate from other missions in Alaska. Great care was taken some years ago when the American Missionary Association, with societies of other denominations, took up new work in Alaska, and as a result, this Association has never had any differences with other missionary bodies, but has occupied the field, large and important, allotted to it, trenching upon that of no other Christian organization. It is to do the work that is not done by others that the American Missionary Association stands, and not to interfere with the efficiency of other Christian labors. We receive reports from this far-distant and isolated field very seldom, and are now awaiting the only communication possible after a number of months of silence. Everything seems to indicate that the work is making good progress.

CHINESE MISSIONS, CALIFORNIA AND UTAH.

CHINESE STATISTICS.

Schools, including Japanese	21
Teachers, including 10 Chinese	35
Pupils	1,360
Professing faith during the year	152

Our Chinese work has been faithfully continued throughout the year in twenty-one different schools and with the service of thirty-five missionaries. In the Central School in San Francisco, sessions are regularly held for five evenings of the week, in addition to the religious services of Sunday. The attendance ranges from fifty to one hundred. In addition, there is the meeting for mothers and girls, the Sunday-school, the children's meeting and that of the Christian Endeavor Society. There are over six hundred Chinese families in the city and an increasing endeavor is made to reach and evangelize them.

The new central mission house in San Francisco is evincing its usefulness more and more every month. The year has witnessed considerable progress towards the payment of the debt, and the Association has recently enlarged its grant by $2,000 in aid of this purpose.

Reviewing all mission work from the beginning, we find nearly twenty thousand Chinese have been reached in the mission service of Christian churches on the Pacific coast, and nearly two thousand of them have become Christians. These Chinese Christians are engaged actively in the support of the missionary service, both here and in their native land. In China their representatives have gone into scores of cities and preached the gospel to thousands upon thousands of their own people. These Chinese Christians have faced persecution in almost every form, both in this country and abroad. There have been days in this country when they were in prison and scourged. In China they have been ostracised and received cruel treatment from their kinsfolk and fellow countrymen, but they have continued faithful.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

We acknowledge with appreciation receipts from Women's Missionary Societies to the amount of $26,578.12. Thirty-five State organizations have contributed. Twenty-two increased their contributions over those of the previous year. We have endeavored to give frequent information from the field through letters from the missionaries. Programs for missionary meetings have been provided, the Secretary has responded to numerous calls for speaking, and nearly all literature sent out has been in response to direct request. We hope that the evidently growing interest will result in continued and larger gifts to the Association.

FINANCIAL.

The receipts for current work for the year ending September 30th, 1899, were, from donations, $154,422.39; estates, $83,862.43; income, $14,638.24; tuition, $39,053,76; Slater Fund, paid to institutions, $5,000, a total of $296,976.82, which with the balance in hand at the beginning of the year, $705.16, makes a total of $297,681.98. The payments have been $296,810.84, leaving a balance in hand at the close of the year of $871.14. We are devoutly thankful for another year of freedom from debt.

The main sources of support are the contributions from churches, Sunday-schools, missionary societies and individuals, and receipts from legacies. The great fluctuation in receipts from legacies, sometimes amounting to $95,000 in a single year, has been the chief cause of the debts which have so often burdened us in the years past. It has been the policy of your Committee to conduct the work of the year within a reasonable expectation of receipts, but such has been the annual fluctuation in receipts from legacies that we have found it impossible to make any satisfactory estimate of receipts from this source for the appropriations for the year. This has led your committee to give careful attention to some plan which would aid in the equalization of current receipts from legacies from year to year. At the January meeting of the Committee it was voted to adopt the following plan:

"That all money in excess of $3,000, received from an estate in one year for the general purposes of the Association shall be credited to the account of reserved legacies. All other money received from estates, unless otherwise designated by the donors, shall be available for current receipts."

"Reserved legacies shall only be paid out upon special appropriation by the Executive Committee."

The amount credited to Reserve Legacy Account from January 1st to September 30th, under this plan, was $28,230.06. Of this amount $19,500.00 has been appropriated by special vote of the Committee to meet the urgent demands of the work. This leaves a balance of $8,730.06 now in Legacy Reserve Account, of which $5,000 has been appropriated for repairs greatly needed on buildings in the South.

It is hoped that this purpose of your Committee will meet the approval of the friends and supporters of the missionary work of the Association.

There has been received, also, the following amount for Endowment Fund for Straight University, from the Estate of Seymour Straight, in part, $2,026.12. The securing of endowment funds for the Chartered Institutions is one of the pressing needs at this time.

THE DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND FOR COLORED PEOPLE.

The income from the Daniel Hand Fund for the current work of the year has been $71,960.50, which, with the balance of $14,573.07 at the beginning of the year, makes a total of $86,533.57, and the expenditures have been $67,339.24, leaving a balance in hand and appropriated of $19,194.33. We make special and grateful recognition of this magnificent philanthropy by which during the past year a thousand students have been able to enjoy educational advantages which otherwise they could not have done.

There have also been received during the year from the Estate of Daniel Hand, $95,000 face value securities as a part of the Daniel Hand Educational Fund, the income of which to be applied according to the terms and conditions of the Deed of Trust.

The Summary of Receipts for the year is as follows:

Current Work	$296,976.82
Income from Daniel Hand Fund	71,960.50
Endowment Fund for Straight University	2,026.12
		$370,963.44
Reserve Legacy Account, $8,730.06

DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND—ENDOWMENT.

Estate of Daniel Hand, by Wilbur F. Day, Executor, Securities face value	$95,000.00

The financial result of the year, gratifying as it is, has been secured, in a great measure, because of the firm policy of your Committee to deny many applications for strengthening and enlarging the present work, and refusing to take up new and opening fields of very great interest and promise. With larger gifts and resources, much greater work could be accomplished in the name of the Master in the various fields committed to the Association.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND CONCLUSIONS.

Your Committee would acknowledge the hearty and cordial support given to these important missionary operations during the year by constituent churches, Sunday schools, Endeavor societies and individuals. We appreciate that the favorable financial showing of the year is rendered possible by the generous and often sacrificial gifts which have come into the treasury. Beginning the year with no debt, the missionary work has been somewhat developed and all the expenses met from the current income. We gratefully acknowledge the slight increase in gifts from living donors. This gain is not large enough to give any great confidence for the future enlarged development of the missionary work which is greatly demanded, but it is sufficient to warrant the belief that the constituency are thoroughly interested in the work and ready to give it their cordial financial endorsement. As a principle in the support of the missionary operations of the churches it is evident that the income from living contributors must always be relied upon as the permanent or responsible source of income. Legacies are fluctuating and unreliable. In the progress and development of the work reaching the needs of the present generation, it must be supported by those who constitute this generation. A large responsibility, therefore, rests upon the constituents of the A. M. A. to support the work in the fields already occupied and to make it possible to push out into Porto Rico and other regions demanding help. Your Committee has every confidence in view of the satisfactory showing of the closing year that this responsibility will be met by the churches with courageous and hearty generosity.

Certain special movements among the constituent churches have been of peculiar interest. Lincoln Memorial Sabbath, a day set apart among the Sunday schools and young people to be devoted to Christian patriotism, was observed this year by something like thirty thousand children. In many schools a brief memorial service was held, drawing especially from the life of President Lincoln such lessons as that noble life teaches. By the testimony of many superintendents the day proved of much value to the schools, and resulted to the American Missionary Association in a considerable financial support.

Three of our Theological Seminaries have introduced an interesting department of lectureships. The American Missionary Association, with other societies, is invited through one of its secretaries to present the history, principles and methods of benevolent operations before the students of these seminaries. This is a significant and important movement, and will tend to furnish pastors thoroughly with the great missionary movements of the churches when they enter upon their pastorates.

The co-operation of pastors of local churches in organized efforts in behalf of the work of the A. M. A. in various States, is worthy of especial mention. With the small force of officers the numerous requests for the presentation of work before the churches can not all be met. In the different States local conferences have organized appointing a pastor who shall especially represent this Association, gather fresh information to be read and present the latest facts obtainable in the gatherings of the conference. This method of reinforcing the efforts and increasing the efficiency of our officers is gratefully acknowledged by your Committee. In many States this organization is very complete and effective.

Christian Endeavor Societies and Young People's Mission Circles have manifested increased interest in the work of the A. M. A. during the year. The Young People's Rally held in connection with the annual meeting of the American Missionary Association for several years, has become a recognized feature, gathering large numbers of young people and furnishing missionary intelligence and stimulating missionary enthusiasm for the great work which the Association is doing.

The response to the appeal for "The Taking of Porto Rico for Christ" is evidence of the interest of the Sunday-schools and young people in Endeavor Societies in the inauguration of this important work in the Antilles. A circular letter sent to the young people met with hearty response in generous contributions.

We welcome the valuable co-operation of the Committee of Fifteen, elected at the National Council in July, 1898, in their efforts to organize the churches throughout the country for more effective and intelligent support of the missionary movements of the churches. This Committee will doubtless effect greater economy in the use of benevolent funds, tending to prevent a large waste which arises from somewhat frequent contributions of funds to irresponsible agencies in response to impassioned and moving appeals. The effort to secure a contribution from every church throughout the land to the recognized benevolent societies of our churches which this Committee is so earnestly making, must prove of great value.

In the American Missionary Magazine we have given large space this year to illustrated articles presenting the work of different institutions and missions. We have reason to believe that increasing interest has been taken in the magazine, and thoroughly appreciate the words of hearty approval that have reached us through the notices in the press and by personal letters. We plan still further to present missionary intelligence along this line, and trust that the magazine may be of increasing usefulness. Life members are entitled to the magazine and all other publications of the Association, but it is necessary that a special request should be sent, together with the life membership fee, in order to secure them.

In Congregational Work the American Missionary Association has had its allotted space. This periodical, during the three years of its publication, has not cost the Association anything for its support. The income from subscriptions has so far supported the paper. The paid subscription list this year included sixty thousand names. This paper seems to meet a demand on the part especially of the young people in Endeavor Societies, Sunday-schools and Mission Circles that warrants its publication and indicates its usefulness.

Pamphlets and smaller leaflets have been issued in large numbers during the year. In their distribution a greatly-increased number has been sent out in response to special requests. This is a hopeful sign. It indicates increasing interest on the part of the constituency and a growing desire to gather missionary intelligence and fresh information concerning these great fields. Your Committee rejoices in this evidence of intelligent and cordial support of these missionary operations, and would gladly increase still further the circulation of printed information in every direction possible. This literature belongs to the churches, and we are glad to get it into the hands of those who use it so wisely.

With evidences of increasing interest among churches, Sunday-schools and young people; with our constituents taking up systematically the consideration of the great missionary movements of our churches among the needy people who come under our flag; with more efficient organization of the churches through the Committee of Fifteen; with the large and increasing support of the Christian women who sustain many missionaries in the field, and with the evident blessing of God witnessed during the year, we enter with great hopefulness upon the future. The fields are ripe to the harvest, and the churches are more and more realizing the importance of sending the laborers into the harvest field, who, with sacrificial earnestness, deep devotion and confident faith in God, are gathering in noble results.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

BY GERALD H. BEARD, PH. D., CHAIRMAN.

Your committee wishes to express its firm belief in the spirit, the theory and the method that underlie the Southern Educational Work of this Association. The chief regret in respect of results is that there are not means provided for more of the same sort. Seventy-six schools and 414 instructors are but small provision for so gigantic a task.

We believe that there was never more need than now of holding to "a purpose of education identical with Christianity." The educational work of this Association is not a substitute for Christianity: it is identical with Christianity. It is not set over against conversion: it is an essential complement of conversion. It is an indispensable method of instilling into the lives of the Negro and the Mountain White the abiding truth that makes men free.

It is worth repeating and repeated approval, that the Association is not competing with Southern public schools; but that its 76 schools have as their chief aim to train those who shall themselves become Christian teachers, Christian Church members, Christian home-keepers, Christian citizens.

We are glad to note that, while the Executive Committee is giving attention to Industrial Education and, in several schools, has scientific appliances and practical methods second to none, yet it "does not claim that this is the only way of salvation." Even here, in our judgment, the chief aim must be, not to supply the South with farmers, carpenters and nurses; but to set an example of industrial life, and prepare teachers, themselves skilled in the several industrial departments, who shall teach the people.

That anyone should fear that 85 collegiate students and 125 theological students were likely to embarrass ten millions of colored people with their educational riches, or that the educational standard is in danger of being set too high, can be accounted for only by prejudice against Negro progress or superficial views as to the material that makes men.

It is worthy of note, as suggestive at least of the business management of the Association, that no less than three school buildings lately burned have been rebuilt, or are about to be rebuilt, with insurance money.

We are told that there are those who, because of the startling crimes in the South the last year or two, and because, as the Committee remarks, they "judge the Negro race and its future by five per cent. of degenerates taken from the ignorant half," question whether the schools of the Association are yielding the fruit expected. It will be time enough to consider seriously the solicitude of these persons when the first evidence is produced that educated Christian black men form the stratum of Southern society that furnishes the sickening list of lustful and cruel deeds that shame us all—legitimate heritage of the slave-master's impure past—or that educated Christian white men are the perpetrators of those not less infamous and lawless outrages against life and property. The report well says that the wretched condition is "made more apparent, by contrast, because the race is gaining."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON MOUNTAIN WORK.

REV. A. HADDEN, CHAIRMAN.

The great block of needy Anglo-Saxon people, over two million strong, almost solidly Protestant, one-half illiterate, in which is only a sprinkling of colored people, religious but untaught, restless in their hunger for education, appeals powerfully to all our best missionary impulses.

The work of the American Missionary Association among them reveals again an encouraging growth, and growth is the sign of life.

The schools need no new endorsement of this committee. While we commend the efforts which supply common schools where there are none, and appreciate the self-sacrifice of teachers and ministers in this direction, we note with special satisfaction that the main strength of the teaching force is being exerted on the graded and normal schools, and that these academies, eight in number, are growing in teaching force, buildings and equipment, and it is needless to say in pupils, for the number of pupils is only limited by the capacity to take care of them. Increase of capacity means wider extension of the educational leaven.

We hope the day is soon coming when in this process of growth a higher educational institution may arise somewhere on these highlands, perhaps developing out of one of these academic plants.

While it is true that students can and do go away to such colleges as Oberlin for their higher education, we also consider the fact that the strongest influence of any college is in its immmediate vicinity, and can see what a power a college could be at some strategic point in this mountain region. We commend this possibility to the benevolent.

The reduction in the number of missionaries and the loss of churches noted two years ago seem to have been fully made up and we now enroll fifty-eight churches with our sixteen hundred members, which shows that Congregationalism will grow up among the hills if it is given a chance. The mountain people readily respond to our policy and ideals. The evident purpose to raise the standard of a minister and elevate the life of the churches with its inevitable result of provoking churches of other denominations to such good works cannot be too heartily commended.

Finally, we emphatically endorse this mountain work as a whole, as most urgent, necessary and hopeful.

In this day when all English-speaking races are drawing together and coming to a higher appreciation of their own unity, importance and use in the world, we can ill afford to neglect so sturdy a branch of the family tree. This branch needs our nurture and help now. Later we shall need its fruit.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

REV. SYDNEY STRONG, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The church work forms an important if not a large part of the work of the Association. The work has been thrust upon, rather than sought by, the Association. The work of the Association was at first almost entirely educational, until here and there imperative demands impelled the Association to undertake the formation of churches. The work has been signally blessed so that to-day there are, as reported, 211 churches with 11,398 members, and the last decade shows that the net increase in the number of churches has been at the rate of 85 per cent.

These churches are important both for quantity, and, especially, for quality. Those persons who have led in their formation have generally been the product of our educational institutions, and they have been formed in answer to the demand of a purer morality and more intelligent faith. It is but just to say that the influence of these churches, because of the high standard of Christianity raised and maintained, has deeply and permanently affected great numbers of churches of other and larger denominations. This influence is ever widening.

They are not, therefore, simply so many churches, but they are centers of light and power, and their influence is not to be estimated by arithmetic, but by the parable of the leaven. The thought of these 211 churches among the colored population and the Mountain Whites of the South gives great reason for gratitude to God.

We are glad to note that in the cities, the churches of the more well-to-do of the colored population enter heartily into mission work among the poorer classes of their own race, and that most approved methods of work are eagerly sought and adopted by these churches. We note also that many churches have been blessed by revivals, showing that while the Gospel has assumed more reasonable and moral forms the refreshing spirit of Pentecost has not been wanting. We note also an increase in the ability to stand alone, and to understand and apply the principles of self-government and Congregational polity. The past year has been noteworthy for the meeting of strong and ably conducted State Associations, which give promise of progress in Christian fellowship. We rejoice that these, our brethren, have the spirit of Christ and have found the consolation that is in Him.

Your committee most earnestly commend this work to the Association and urge that so far as consistent with its Christian judgment the work of evangelization be pushed. Since this work has shown during the past few years what amounts to a "new birth," your committee feel that the time has come when more aggressive steps should be taken in the organization of new churches. Not fewer schools, but more churches. The material going out of our schools should more persistently be used for new organizations, so that the material trained be not lost to our denomination or to the Kingdom.

Your committee will also raise the question whether the time has not arrived when a band of trained evangelists might not be successfully employed to preach a pure Gospel to the colored race. Something akin to the student volunteer movement adopted in the "forward movement" of the American Board may be practicable. At any rate, it is believed that a serious burden rests upon the Association to bring the Gospel of evangelization, by church organization, and the preached word, to the people already upon the heart and conscience.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN WORK.

REV. J. R. NICHOLS, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The constituency of this Association has occasion for profound gratitude to God in the reports coming to us from the work carried on among the Indians. In every item of the report there is a substantial gain over last year save in the number of schools supported by the Association and the number of pupils in such schools, and this loss is due solely to the policy of retrenchment made necessary by declining Government aid and the failure on the part of the churches to make good the loss. There is a gain in the number of churches and church members, and a marked increase in the gifts made by these Christians for church benevolence which indicates a real spirit of sacrifice.

And yet the ground for encouragement and gratitude lies not so much in any specific thing accomplished as in the assurance given in this report that seed sown in past years is at last giving promise of speedy and abundant fruitage, in renewed lives and increasing appreciation of the work being done for them and the blessings brought to their door by the Christian teacher and the missionary.

The significant word in the report is evangelization. "The marked feature of the year's work is the religious advance. Native churches are growing stronger and whole communities are emerging from the shadow of paganism," is the language of the report. Children in the unsectarian Government schools are being reached by the evangelistic services, all of which goes to show that the leaven of the gospel is leavening the lump.

In view of these and other facts brought out in the report, we find:

First, Abundant occasion for profound gratitude to God for the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit in the Indian missions, and reason for increased activity and prayerfulness among the workers and friends of the Association along this line.

Second, We see in the policy of the Government to provide secular training for the Indian youth no reason to slacken our hand or diminish our work, but rather an incentive to increased activity in view of the rapid changes coming in the life and manners of the Indians.

Third, We believe it to be the duty and privilege of the Christian people of this land to establish missions and churches within easy reach of the Government schools so far and so fast as possible, and we as churches and individuals recognize and accept our full share of responsibility in this matter.

Fourth, We rejoice to find our workers on the field in the front line of progress, and ready to adopt such methods and make such changes in their plan of work as are demanded by changing conditions.

Fifth, We hereby convey our sympathy to the workers at Fort Berthold and Oahe on account of the serious inconvenience which they have suffered in the loss of much-needed buildings, and we express our earnest hope that the Association may soon find it possible to replace the buildings destroyed by fire.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHINESE WORK.

REV. WILLIAM E. GRIFFIS, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The Committee would report in full endorsement of the statements made by the Executive Committee as to the work carried on during the year. The twenty-one schools, with their thirty-five teachers, have gathered thirteen hundred and sixty pupils, Chinese and Japanese. The Central school in San Francisco has employed the services of four teachers and held its missions almost every evening of the week, in addition to the religious services on the Lord's Day. Every endeavor is being made to reach and evangelize the hundred Chinese families in the city, special meetings being held for mothers and girls, besides the Sunday-school services and the Christian Endeavor Society meetings. Quite an advance has been made towards the completed purchase of the Central Mission House in the city, which is in constant service with growing usefulness. The two thousand dollars lately granted by the Association have been most gratefully received. The missions under Congregational auspices are but one department of the Chinese mission service which has been carried on by different denominations for many years. In this general work nearly twenty three thousand Chinese have been reached and about two thousand of them have become Christians. The self-denial and sacrificial benevolence of these Chinese Christians has been remarkable both in the amounts they have raised and in the activities with which many of them have engaged personally in missionary service both here in America and in their native country. Frequent reports of their great usefulness in China are received, detailing the many cities into which they have gone preaching the Gospel to thousands of their own countrymen. These Chinese Christians have confronted trial and persecution many times; both here and in their own native land, in perils of prison and scourging they have shown great fidelity, patience and courage. The genuineness of their conversion has been attested by cruel and long-continud trials many times from their heathen kinsfolk and fellow countrymen, both here and abroad.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

IRVING C. GAYLORD, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Finance have to report that in the fulfilment of the duties devolving upon them of examining and reporting upon the condition and management of the Financial Department of the Association, they have had submitted to them by the treasurer the financial books of the Association, together with the treasurer's report for the year just closed, and the certificate of the auditors of his accounts.

The auditors for this year have employed a certified public accountant of the state of New York to examine the books and accounts of the Association, and he has made his report to them covering his work, which report becomes a part of their certificate. The thoroughness of such an audit commends itself to your committee.

In the accountant's report, he says: "As a result of this audit I am able to report in the highest terms of commendation the system and methods employed in recording the transactions of the Association," and from its examination of the treasurer's books your committee confirm this view.

The report of the treasurer shows receipts for the year aggregating $296,976.82, as against $327,487.34 for the year ending September 30, 1898, a decrease of $30,510.52.

An increase is shown in receipts from donations of $3,761.88, and from tuitions of $1,648.35; and a decrease in receipts from income of $252.40, and from estates of $35,668.35. The apparent decrease of receipts from estates is lessened by $8,730.06, which amount has been placed in the Reserve Legacy Account through action of the Executive Committee. The Reserve Legacy Account has been authorized by the Executive Committee to assist in equalizing the use of the annual receipts from legacies, and its plan is explained in the report of that committee. It seems to us to be wise.

The payments for the year aggregate $296,810.84 as against $271,837.15 for the previous year (exclusive of $54,945.03 paid last year to extinguish the debt of the Association), an increase of $24,973.69.

This increase of expenditure has mainly gone into the upbuilding of the old work of the Association which, owing to the necessary retrenchments of the past years, has suffered in many places.

The Daniel Hand Fund Account is kept in separate books from the other accounts of the Association. It shows an income this year of $71,960.50 as against $68,684.19 last year, an increase of $3,276.31, and payments of $67,339.24 this year and $66,342.49 last year, an increase of $996.75. This leaves an unexpended balance of $4,621.26 this year, and with a balance at October 1st, 1898, of $14,573.07 makes $19,194.33 on hand, which sum has been appropriated for work during the coming year.

Your committee having examined the books, records and methods of the financial department of the Association, have been impressed with the care and efficiency with which the department is managed, with its plan of checks and counter-checks which has been arranged for the safe-guarding of its financial interests, and with the system which prevails throughout the department.

The Association is free from debt. It has kept its work within its income during the past year, but this has only been accomplished by careful economy in its management, and by declining to take up new fields which, with its income increased, can be entered and in which large work can be done in the upbuilding of character and the ennobling of lives.

Your committee trust that this may be accomplished during the coming year through the increased contributions from the churches and the generous gifts of friends.

Obituary.

A PIONEER WORKER GONE.

Miss Hannah L. Fitts, of Candia, N. H., died at the home of her brother, Rev. J. H. Fitts, Newfields, N. H., January 5th, 1899. She engaged in the work of the A. M. A. in 1866. The next year she was appointed to Wilmington, N. C., where for twenty-one years she served as teacher with rare devotion and fidelity, winning universal respect and love. With great reluctance she gave up her position when health failed, but with unfailing interest she freely devoted her remaining strength to her former pupils, securing student aid and keeping up a most inspiring and helpful correspondence with them. It is wonderful how one so frail could accomplish so much. Suddenly, unexpectedly, in the midst of great usefulness—her last work and plans being in behalf of her loved people suffering from the race troubles in Wilmington—she was called to higher service. Her monument is in the noble, Christian lives of many who delight "to rise up and call her blessed."

MISS HARRIET A. BROWN.

Miss Harriet A. Brown died in the New York Hospital, New York City, January 13, 1899. Miss Brown had been for eighteen and a half years a missionary at Santee Normal Training School for Indians at Santee Agency, Nebraska. She had had charge of the Bird's Nest, in which a considerable number of the smaller pupils found their home. She was the house mother. She was greatly loved by all the missionaries, as she was a woman of beautiful character. Her influence among the Indians was by no means confined to the school. She often found her way to their tepees, and gained the confidence of Indian women especially, helping them in their home life.

Miss Brown will be greatly missed in this mission field, but she will still live in the hearts and lives of the people to whom she gave herself a "living sacrifice."

REV. MICHAEL E. STRIEBY, D.D., LL.D.

Michael E. Strieby was born in Ohio, September, 1815. He died at Clifton Springs, N. Y., March 16, 1899. He was, therefore, in his eighty-fourth year of age when he passed away. But little is said when the mere record of these two great events in personal existence is chronicled. Between the sunrise and sunset there lie the long, weary hours of life's busy, restless, struggling day. The toil, the sacrifice, the sorrow, the disappointment, and—to Dr. Strieby—the splendid victory of accomplished work, are brought together in the compass of his life. Certain salient points stand out in peculiar prominence. His early education was secured at two institutions in Ohio—Hudson College and Oberlin College. He was graduated in the class of 1838. The years of his scholastic life were years of intense excitement and profound upheaval. The anti-slavery agitation was rapidly gaining a hearing and followers.

The influence of this college experience, both in the classroom and in the practical application of the instruction he received to the immediate solution of the problems of human freedom, was evident through his whole life.

Dr. Strieby was a successful pastor. After graduating from Oberlin Seminary, he became pastor of the Church at Mt. Vernon, Ohio. Here he served for eleven delightful and successful years.

From Mt. Vernon he went to Syracuse, N. Y., where he organized the Plymouth Congregational Church. Here again he proved his special ability as a pastor and preacher. After a pastorate of eleven and a half years in the Plymouth Church he was called, in 1864, to a Corresponding Secretaryship of the American Missionary Association. It is a remarkable fact that he did not enter this service until he was forty-nine years of age. His larger and most permanent work was accomplished after middle life. This place he occupied with distinguished success until, by his own request, he was permitted to retire in 1896, and became Honorary Secretary.

He was often at the front immediately after the war encouraging despondent teachers, gathering about him a great mass of Negroes just freed from bondage, seeking to inspire them with purposes of self-control and self-direction. But the development of the work of the American Missionary Association is written in history, and well-known to the Christian and philanthropic public. Michael E. Strieby was a tremendous factor in this development. No one can measure his influence.

"He steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." His Jerusalem was the physical, intellectual and moral freedom of downtrodden races. The journey thither must involve hardship and sacrifice. It might involve martyrdom. With an intelligent and appreciative sense of the future he still pressed forward with patient and tireless purpose toward this Jerusalem. Who can question that his unseen Lord walked beside him, giving him courage in times of greatest threatening, and kindling within him the large and splendid hope which he always manifested in times of greatest discouragement!

Through the columns of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY, of which Dr. Strieby was editor for several years, he affected largely the thought of the Christian and philanthropic public. He was bold to take up the discussion of questions of national policy. The more humane and wise treatment which has characterized the policy of the United States toward the Indians in recent years was secured partly through his advocacy. This missionary magazine gave him an opportunity month by month which greatly increased the audience and compass of his public addresses and personal influence.

The American Missionary Association will miss his wise counsel and his loving and tender companionship. The whole body of Congregational Churches will mourn his loss and find no other one who can fill his place. He was prominent on boards of trustees in different institutions, notably in that of his own Alma Mater, Oberlin College. His large views of educational problems and practical knowledge concerning the administration of institutional life made him a valuable member.

Dr. Ward closes a touching tribute to him with the following impressive characterization: "Peaceable, benign, wise, progressive, even radical, and no less wise when radical, round-minded, wide-looking, large-planning, he was the guiding spirit of our Congregational Churches in the most Christlike work they have undertaken for downtrodden bnt rising humanity. God needed, and so God found, such a man for such a work."

Born at Chesterfield, N. H., January 21, 1833. Died at Norfolk, Conn., August 19, 1899.

The death of Mr. Charles L. Mead came with startling suddenness. He was a man of great vigor, physically, intellectually and morally. His strength and endurance seemed equal to his aggressive and persistent energy along many lines of important and prominent activity. He was known in business circles as a man of marked ability. In the church of which he was a member (Broadway Tabernacle, New York) he was for many years one of the deacons. His Christian life was characterized by great simplicity as well as depth of spiritual earnestness and conviction.

For nearly twenty-five years he had been a member of the Executive Committee of the American Missionary Association, for a long time occupying the responsible position of chairman of that body. He was a man of comprehensive sympathies. He did not take in the interests of any single department or the work among one race at the sacrifice of other departments and other races. His mind was so broad and his view so comprehensive that he saw the relationship of the whole work of this Association to the interests of our country and the progress of the Kingdom of God. The work among the Negroes had his hearty and well-considered support. The developing work among the Highlanders also had in him an advocate and wise friend. The work among the Indians he saw in its true value and important significance. The missions among the Chinese and Japanese under the direction of this Association he saw had meanings for the nations from which they came across the ocean, and contained the prophecy of the spiritual regeneration of millions of people. The work in far-off Alaska so interested him that he took a journey there with members of his family to study the field and needs of the people, with the view of the wiser administration of the large responsibilities that fell upon him as a member of the Executive Committee. He will be greatly missed in the administration and deeply mourned by the missionaries in the fields.

OF
BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

Another year has unfolded its opportunities for Christian service in the field of the American Missionary Association, and we come to its close deeply grateful to God for the encouraging results we are permitted to report. It is true that not all these precious opportunities have been improved. Those who share in the work of either missions or support know well that some opportunities are lost through our failure to make close connection in service, for this is a joint work, and not either part can be a real success without the other. Sometimes in the field the opportunity is missed for want of money that might have been forthcoming, but was not. It did not start soon enough, or it got on the wrong road, or did not start at all. Sometimes the faithful member of the woman's society did not receive the field news in time, or it was not of just the right sort to stir the benevolence of one who could be reached only then and would give only when specially interested. But we do thank God that, through united effort in missionary work, we have been able to do so much and see so good results.

The total contributions through women's societies have been $26,578.12, a slight gain over the preceding year. Thirty-five of the state organizations have contributed, of which twenty-two have increased their contributions over those of the last year. The sympathy manifested in the work by officers of state organizations and their earnest efforts to increase contributions have been warmly appreciated. There is evidence, too, of a better apprehension of the extent of the work of the American Missionary Association and a more just proportion of aid assigned.

During the year some of the state organizations and many local societies have prepared programmes for missionary meetings of an exceptionally high order. The Association has also issued two programmes, one on "The Negro Race," the other on "The American Highlanders," both of which call for more than casual study of these subjects. Although requiring time for preparation, as much as for literary subjects in clubs, they seem to have met a need for women's and young people's societies in study of mission fields in the light of history and of current events.

This wider study of the whole work of the Association tends to obviate the narrowing tendency of concentrating interest upon one particular missionary or school; for the contributions through women's societies have been assigned almost exclusively to individual schools and missionaries. Unquestionably the personal element has helped to arouse interest, but experience shows that interest cannot be maintained without a larger hold upon the work than any single missionary or station can give. The system of missionary letter-writing has been a helpful channel of communication between the missionaries and the supporting societies.

The missions that have been aided through women's contributions are those at King's Mountain, Blowing Rock, Saluda, in North Carolina; Savannah, McIntosh, Thomasville, Marshallville and Andersonville, in Georgia; Talladega, Cotton Valley, Athens and Nat, Alabama; Meridian and Moorhead, Mississippi; Nashville, Pleasant Hill, Grand View and Big Creek Gap, in Tennessee; Williamsburg and Corbin, Kentucky; Santee Agency, Nebraska; Fort Berthold, North Dakota; Grand River, South Dakota; Crow Agency, Montana; Chinese in California; and Cape Prince of Wales, Alaska. Woman's aid has thus had a wide range, and besides the regularly-supported teachers at these stations, aid has been given in many other ways and at other missions, even including Porto Rico. Woman's work has radiated to all parts of this broad mission field.

The work of the missionaries representing the women's societies has been exceedingly practical. Some have been principals of schools, some assistant teachers, but all have helped to the success of the work in all departments, Biblical, literary, industrial. In the latter department instruction has been given to girls in the use of sewing implements, plain stitching, buttonholes, hemming, gathering, making plain garments, darning, patching, fancy stitching, children's clothing, cutting under clothing, dressmaking. Also the principles of cooking have been taught under the heads of boiling, steaming, stewing, baking and broiling; and not only this, but the elements which enter into food are explained and its selection as adapted to one's age and physical condition. Nurse-training is taught in the care of sick room and furniture, food, medicines, outward applications, emergencies, symptoms, bandages and massage. In all schools with boarding departments most of the general housework is done by student boarders who serve daily in the dining-room, halls, bed-rooms, kitchen and laundry. In all these departments the proper way of doing work is taught, habits of neatness and order are inculcated, and to the success of the instruction every missionary teacher must contribute directly or indirectly.

There is no halting between the close of the one year and the beginning of another, and we can only take this swift glance backward and a swift glance forward; but that is enough to show that we have more than usual incentive for the work of the next year. The fact that so many of the state organizations gained over the previous year in their aid to the A. M. A. is encouragement to them and to the others likewise to keep steadily at their labor of love. There is money, and it can be obtained and applied through right channels for work our denomination is reponsible for.

Then there is so much to work for. The taking on of new fields like Porto Rico emphasizes our yet unfinished work in the old directions where the fruits of much labor are still to be garnered. It pays to save one girl or boy to good citizenship in our loved republic and in the kingdom of God. Note the testimony of a daughter of a slave-born mother, taught in an A. M. A. school and now the wife of a minister of the gospel. Referring to the missionary who was her preceptress, she says: "She is to me a wonderful woman, an ideal woman. I can never thank her enough for what she did for me. Had it not been for the training I got in that school, and the special training through her, I could not have got along through these hard times. But aside from my literary training I learned to keep house. I can mend and darn and change and make over garments so they will look new. I know how to cook and to do some upholstery work, such as making lounges and other things for comfort, and to improve the looks of my rooms." And she learned something more and better, for she says: "In my darkest time I thank God I could say, 'Though He slay me yet will I trust in Him.'" And, "Wherever we go I hope we may find a field full of opportunities for usefulness." You must multiply that many hundredfold to get the result of even one year's work. O, how it pays! What an incentive to keep on with it.

Then there comes the stirring appeal from the farthest south, the island of the sea with its million voices. Listen to Mrs. Henry in her article on "Porto Rico from a Woman's Standpoint." "Porto Rico is ours and so are the Philippines. No matter to-day how or why they became ours, the ever present question is what shall we do with them? Like Christian's pack, they are strapped upon our back. When we lie down they must still be with us; when we arise as a nation and travel onward, they will go with us, and we must carry the burdens uow straight forward to the end. Like Christian, too, we are forgetting all about Christiana and the children, but they, too, are running on behind calling and calling to know the way." * * * "It is a wail from the women and the children of our new land for life and light, for a hand to guide and hold and help them to rise above the ignorance and poverty which for generations have held them down." * * * "The secret of success in our new possessions lies in the measure of how high we shall lift the women and children to be of future usefulness and reflect credit upon our nation."

And we are near the twentieth century. Let us set the pace with full ranks and with no laggard step. Courage, vigor, undaunted faith, unfaltering work, generous giving of no "blemished thing," but "a pure offering," and this field of the American Missionary Association shall feel to its utmost bounds the thrill of the coming of the Kingdom of God. For then we shall not only hear but heed the call of the Christianas of all these races to whom the American Missionary Association is sent as they cry, "Carry me and my children with you that we may also go and worship the King."

REPORT OF AUDITOR.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30, 1899, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all the Stocks, Bonds and other Securities held by the Association, and find the same to fully sustain the balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

CHAS. N. SCHENCK,
EDWIN H. BAKER,

New York, Oct. 9, 1899.

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with your instructions I have made a careful audit of the accounts of the American Missionary Association for the year ending September 30th, 1899, and herewith submit my report, as follows:

CASH BOOK. In the Cash Book I verified the balance brought forward, proved the footings on both sides, using the canceled checks as vouchers for the payments, compared them with the entries, and found that the balance on hand agreed with the balances in the banks.

PETTY CASH. The system in use for the recording of the petty cash transactions is known as the English Imprest system, and is simple, satisfactory and complete in its working, being periodically settled by a check voucher, leaving no cash in the office at the end of the year.

BANK BOOKS. I verified the totals of the deposits and checks, proved the balances, and received certificates from the Banks and Trust Companies as to the correctness of the figures.

LEDGER. In the Ledger I verified the totals of the postings from all the other books and compared the balances entered in the Trial Balance sheet, the footings of which I also verified.

MONTHLY REPORTS. I compared the totals of the Cash Book with those in the Monthly Reports, including those of the receipts, as published in the American Missionary Magazine.

I note that the monthly reports are examined and approved by two members of the Finance Committee before being presented to the Executive Committee.

DANIEL HAND FUND. I note that the receipts, disbursements and record of securities of the Daniel Hand Fund are all kept separate from the other accounts, and that the funds are deposited in a different bank, the uninvested funds being in a Trust Company drawing interest.

As a result of this audit, I am able to report in the highest terms of commendation the system and methods employed in recording the transactions of the Association. I have found entire arithmetical accuracy in the entries, the accounts presenting a record of the facts, arranged and focused so that the result of the operations may be readily obtained.

There is evidence of great painstaking in keeping these detailed records, and the most approved methods used by financial institutions for the safety of the funds and completeness of the records adopted wherever available.

The system of bookkeeping enables the entire receipts and payments to be verified by the bank books, the deposits tallying with the receipts, and the canceled checks with the payments. Deposits are made in banks selected by the Executive Committee, and no monies are withdrawn therefrom except upon checks bearing the signatures of two of the officers of the Association and in payment of appropriations made by the Executive Committee.

The securities of the Association are kept in a safe deposit vault, accessible only by the use of different keys in the possession of the Treasurer and a member of the Finance Committee, necessitating the presence of both for the purpose.

The records of the securities are especially valuable, showing in detail each class, each fund by itself, the sources from which they are derived, rates, costs, interest dates, market value, location, disposition, and all the facts connected with each, needed for complete information.

Respectfully submitted,
FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT.

DISTRICT SECRETARY G. H. GUTTERSON, BOSTON, MASS.

That portion of the field of support of the American Missionary Association known as the Eastern District consists of the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

In this district there are 1,289 churches, with a membership of 186,430.

Of the direct income of the Association from the churches, this district usually contributes about one-half, Massachusetts giving more than all the other churches in this district combined.

For this collecting work three persons are constantly employed, two of whom give a large proportion of their time and strength to speaking upon the missionary fields of the Association before the churches, conferences, Christian Endeavor Societies, Sunday-schools, etc., etc.

In addition to these regular speakers, the presidents of our great Southern institutions, faithful missionary workers and teachers from the South and West, as well as some of our colored brethren, often present the work to the churches. Stereopticon campaigns, for the purpose of pictorially illustrating and explaining the many phases of our work, are often planned and carried out with great success. For this branch of the work we are particularly indebted to the teachers and missionaries mentioned above.

We have strong and able allies in this work of interesting the churches whom we desire to mention with special gratitude — the Woman's Home Missionary Association of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, whose president is Mrs. C. L. Goodell, and secretary, Mrs. L. A. Kellogg, and the Maine Woman's Aid to the A. M. A.

It is probably safe to say that the work of the American Missionary Association has more friends in New England than in any other section of the country. Certainly it is true not only of the Indian, for whose welfare New England people have always been very sensitive, but also for the Negro, whose liberty and manhood have, from the very outset, been championed and defended in this part of the country.

The following items and details will show something of the amount of work which is being done from the Eastern District office in the way of supplying information to the New England churches, about this great branch of their missionary work.

The New England people give when their judgment and conscience are both convinced. Spasmodic and sensational appeals do not, in the long run, stir or command their financial support.

During the year ending September 30, 1899, 316 public addresses have been made by the District Secretary and Field Assistant. These addresses have been made at the regular church services. 110 churches have been visited. Addresses have also been made before the ministers' meetings, Christian Endeavor conventions, theological seminaries, Sunday-schools, colleges, women's meetings, literary clubs, Memorial Day exercises.

In order to do this work the speakers have traveled nearly 30,000 miles. Some seventy-five invitations have been declined, owing to the impossibility of accepting them.

A particularly encouraging feature of the work during the last year has been the large number of local conferences and state meetings addressed from the New England office, namely, twenty-nine conferences and meetings of three State Associations.

Further insight into the amount of work accomplished in the office is obtained by a glance at the following figures:

In acknowledging the money received directly at the Boston office it was necessary to fill out and send 941 receipts and to make 150 deposits in the Third National Bank in this city.

The branches of the regular business in the office required the writing of over 5,000 letters.

Beside furnishing information and encouragement by the living speaker, great quantities of literature are sent out every year to individuals and churches. The amount distributed last year was 18,750 pieces, and beside this 1,389 mimeograph pastoral letters were sent out, and 26,779 collection envelopes, and 1,130 postal cards were also circulated among the congregations.

A somewhat peculiar feature in the New England office consists in meeting and entertaining and answering questions of the many friends of the Association who call from day to day, to transact business, to inquire about the work, and to express their interest in the cause so dear to them. 3,752 such friends have called at the Boston office during the year just closed. All such friends are cordially welcomed here, and every inquiry, as far as possible, answered at once.

The amount received in this district for the last fiscal year, from donations and estates, amounts to $93,874.64.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT.

DISTRICT SECRETARY J. E. ROY, D.D. CHICAGO, ILL.

This district extends from Lake Michigan to the Pacific Coast, embracing sixteen states and three territories, and having over two thousand Congregational churches, large and small.

The field is favored by varied instrumentalities. The office in the Y. M. C. A. Building is itself a seed-repository and a seed-sower, the literature called for and circulated being an immense quantity. The District Secretary is out on the Sabbath and often on week-days, sometimes making a tour of a week or two alone, with services every night except Saturday, sometimes having a missionary, or two or three, with him for a tour of one or two months. In January last, Mrs. Ida V. Woodbury, of the Boston District, under the auspices of the W. H. M. U. of the Chicago Association, within its bounds and contiguities, addressed forty ladies' meetings, greatly to their delight, to the replenishment of funds, to the quickening of missionary zeal. We all said, "Come again." Thank you, Boston.

Lincoln's birthday is vitalized; church schedules honored; representatives secured in local associations; pastoral exchanges sought with reference to securing A. M. A. sermons.

Universal Brotherhood through Christ.

SERMON

BY

REV. C. H. PATTON, D.D.

COLOSSIANS iii, 11.—"Where there cannot be Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bondmen, freemen: but Christ is all and in all."

These words, taken in the connection in which we find them, indicate that the supreme office of Christianity is the unification of the race—nothing less than that. To it is committed the task of overcoming all the separating diversities of life and uniting humanity in a great moral brotherhood. It is of the essence of sin to separate. Sin separates the individual within himself, the lower against the higher, a part against the whole, and prevents the man from realizing that symmetry of character which gives manhood eternal worth. Sin breaks up society into conflicting factions. It puts men out of relations. It never combines, except for destructive ends. We speak of it as a world spirit, but it is only a fractional world for which it stands. Its whole tendency is destructive of the world idea. It walls up the nations and segregates the races. It stirs up enmity, prejudice, bloodshed and war. After many years of discussion, we are pretty generally agreed that sin is separateness; and it should be equally clear by this time that holiness must be wholeness.

Our Lord clearly taught that the great task before us is to break down the barriers men have erected between themselves, and to bring in social wholeness when he made the Kingdom idea his central thought. And this also, I take it, is why he commanded his followers to make disciples of all nations; and then, in that most solemn moment of his life, prayed that his disciples, so gathered, might be one. We may say that the crowning purpose of his life was to make the many one.

Thus the idea of a race unity was asserted by Christ, and thus it entered into the thought of all the early disciples. But there was one with whom this became the very passion of his soul. To St. Paul it was given to stand pre-eminently for the mission of Christianity in the consolidation of the race. So vast has been his influence in this direction through the ages that to-day we honor him as the Apostle of Universal Brotherhood, the man who committed himself to the idea of a world condition where individual and social strife becomes an impossibility; "where," as he wrote to the Colossians, "there cannot be Greek and Jew, circumcision and uncircumcision, barbarian, Scythian, bondman, freeman."

This faith on the part of the Apostle Paul appears the more remarkable when we consider the deep-seated nature of these distinctions which he enumerates, and the bitterness of spirit in which they were held at that time. The distinction indicated by the words "Greek and Jew" calls to mind the intensity of national prejudice, the white heat of hatred between the Romans and the nations they had conquered, notably between the Romans and the Jews, during the years when St. Paul was writing his Epistles. Then there were the religious differences involved in the words "circumcision and uncircumcision. St. Paul did not hesitate at these, although they were a middle wall of partition as high as heaven, and, shall we add, as deep as hell. We know well what this difference was and what it has been to this day between Gentile and Jew. Furthermore, the apostle is not afraid to attack social distinctions. He insists that the barbarian must be treated as equal to the Greek; and the Scythian, the barbarian of barbarians, who stands for the lowest type of man then known to exist, our modern Hottentot or Digger Indian, is to be received as a brother. The last plunge is deepest of all. The distinction between master and slave must be wiped out, for in the coming state there cannot be "bondman, freeman." "Here is pure madness!" we can imagine some of his readers exclaiming. "Such notions are an insult to the intelligence and culture of his readers!"

And yet this man was no unpractical dreamer. He was not a philosopher writing from the cloistered security of one of the schools, and looking out upon life only through the visions of the mind. Nor was he a poet on some Olympian slope, above the noise and strife of the world, picturing to himself the beautiful condition which once existed in some far-off golden age. The Apostle Paul was a man of affairs, a man of wide travel and close observation. He spoke upon these things as a practical expert. He had faced and was facing every day the selfishness and strife of the actual world. And it was with this dreadful state of affairs clearly in mind that he raised the banner of universal brotherhood and stood for it with all the strength of his being.

It is not necessary for me to recite to this audience the details of the peculiarly distressing situation in our country to-day, which make a discussion of race unity appropriate upon such an occasion as this. Suffice it to remind you that some of the stoutest-hearted friends of humanity are growing faint in these days. The forces which separate men of different races in our midst seem so appalling that many are inquiring to what shall we look for the solution of this great problem. I ask you, then, to turn with me to the Apostle Paul as we seek, first, to discover, and then to apply the principles and forces in which he believed as making for universal brotherhood.

I.

In the first place, it is evident that the Apostle Paul found a basis for brotherhood in man himself. He believed in humanity. I think we may say he gave us the conception of humanity. Sir Henry Maine, in his "Early History of Institutions," states that the notion of a moral brotherhood in the whole human race has been steadily gaining ground during the entire course of history, so that we have now a large abstract term answering to this notion—humanity. While this is undoubtedly true, we must not forget that the conception of humanity is found fully developed in the writings of the great apostle to the Gentiles. Almost alone, in his day, he held to the idea of the human race as a whole, to the worth of man as man. We find nothing equaling this in the uninspired thought of the time. In St. Paul's day men lived a life in which their whole attention was concentrated upon a purely physical existence. The result was that not only the spiritual side of their nature was sadly neglected, but the multiplicity of peculiarly human interests was quite forgotten. Everywhere the race was divided against itself. Strife, bloodshed and war were regarded as the natural results of the reign of selfishness to which the world seemed to be bound by an unrelenting necessity. The despairing thought of the time may be expressed in the words of Shakespeare's "King Lear:"

> "Humanity must perforce prey on itself
> Like monsters of the deep."

There were many who believed in Jews and Greeks and Romans, but in the eyes of the Apostle Paul the worth of a man consisted not in the fact that he was a member of this or that favored nation, but in the fact that he was a man.

Whatever might be the outward circumstances of his life, the individual held within himself the essential elements of ideal manhood. He needed but the proper influence and environment to endow him with the highest spiritual qualities.

The apostle has this ideal humanity in mind when, in the words immediately preceding the text, he speaks of "putting off the old man and his doings and putting on the new man, which is being renewed into knowledge after the image of Him that created him." In his dramatic way he personifies the universal and ideal man, and sets him over against the narrow and distracted being whose works are anger, malice and lying, the things which divide society. We find an even more explicit statement of his thought in his sermon at Athens, where, standing in the center of the world's intellectual life, he made that memorable declaration, "God hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." Thus he gives us a constitutional basis for brotherhood of the most fundamental sort, a unity built into the very physical being of the race.

In this connection it is interesting to notice that no exception was taken to this remarkable statement on the part of the apostle's cultured Greek audience. It was only when he came to indicate the divinely appointed means for making real what the constitutional basis of brotherhood suggested as possible that they took offense at his words. This is not to be explained solely on the ground that he was able to quote from one of their own authors in defence of his position. That was a fact of no little significance, but one of vastly greater import is the trend of thought among both the Greeks and Romans toward a broader outlook upon the race. If that was an age of hatred and strife beyond others, it was also an age made ready for the annunciation of the great social ideal. There had been a wonderful preparation in the world for the promulgation of the New Testament conception of humanity, a preparation involving practically all the nations having a part in that great composite known as the Roman Empire. The dispersion of the Jews, the spread of the Greek language, the universality of Roman law and institution, with the presence of the Roman officials in all parts of the empire, were so many international and interracial links. They furnished a visible basis for a far higher and more real system of co-operation. To a man like the Apostle Paul, eagerly studying the movements of God among the nations, it must have been evident that national intolerance and race prejudice were doomed to an ignominious death by the whole trend of human history.

Let us not, however, suppose that the Apostle Paul advocated the obliteration of all national and race distinctions. It is not diversity he sought to overcome, but the diversity that separates. There are differences that combine. The world condition which he describes in the text as devoid of national, religious, intellectual and social distinctions was not a dead-level of national and social attainment, devoid of all variety and interest. It was a condition of diversity in unity. It was a brotherhood of distinct nations, a fellowship of distinct races, the heavenly Jerusalem brought down to the earth, as in the vision of St. John, where all the kings of the earth bring their glory into it. "God, who made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, hath also determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitations.

I think that St. Paul would teach us that the brotherhood of races in our own country to be sought after does not involve the wiping out of all race characteristics; but, rather, the utilization of such traits of character as have been developed in these various people through the centuries. There is an enrichment of life which should come to our country from the recognition of what each human race, brought here in the providence of God, may contribute to the common welfare. We need not seek directly either to promote or to destroy the race distinctions which are so apparent in our national life, but simply to give the largest opportunity for all to develop in such directions as their constitutional trend, their past history and their free choice may lead them to adopt.

Mr. Ruskin has a passage in his "Stones of Venice," in which he speaks of the one magnificent attribute of the coloring of the thirteenth century—the union of one color with another by what he calls reciprocal interference. That is, if a mass of red is to be set beside a mass of blue, a piece of the red will be carried into the blue, and a piece of the blue into the red. "A magnificent principle," he remarks, "for it is an eternal and universal one, not in art only, but in human life. It is the great principle of brotherhood, not by equality, nor by likeness, but by giving and receiving something from and of others' gifts and others' glory." What could be more suggestive of the type of brotherhood we should seek to develop in this country? God has placed here side by side various races of men with their distinctive traits, accentuated by the varying colors of their skin. We have our red, our yellow, our black and our white to be blended in the harmony of an ideal society. Is it not plain that the Divine Artist is seeking to bring this about by such relationships and blending of masses as shall conserve what is effective in each, while yet producing the unity of the whole—a brotherhood by giving and receiving something from and of others' gifts and others' glory?

II.

Inquiring still further as to the Apostle Paul's basis for universal brotherhood, we come to a consideration which to him was final and supreme. Even with the acknowledged basis for race unity in humanity itself, and all the possibilities wrapped up in that fact, it was apparent to St. Paul that there could be no coming together of so many diverse elements without a common center of attraction. Passing to the second part of our text, we find that his final basis for brotherhood was in the universality of Christ—"but Christ is all and in all."

It is the old matter of the magnet and the fragments of steel. The experimenter floats his needles on bits of cork in an open bowl. They cleave together in detached groups without symmetry or order; but when he suspends a magnet over the surface of the water each separate needle seeks that common center and all arrange themselves under the pole in a perfect mathematical figure. In some such way, the apostle teaches us, Christ comes to the human race. He finds it sadly disjointed by hatred and prejudice. But under the power of his own personality each fragment of society takes its place around the great center, and all combine in a grand race harmony.

St. Paul regarded Christ as the universal man. He possessed in perfection those traits of character which draw men together with none of the traits which separate man from man. Here is the secret of the apostle's extraordinary expectations. His hope was in Christ as the rallying center of humanity. He saw all the separating diversities of society, the awful abyss of prejudice and hatred, but over and above all he saw the Christ.

And when we turn to the life of Christ to learn whether this confidence was grounded in fact or fancy, we find the power of His universality exemplified in a truly wonderful manner. Take for an example the scene at Jacob's well. We are told the Jews had no dealings with the Samaritans, and we know a faithful Israelite would journey many weary miles around to avoid crossing the territory of his despised neighbor. But we see Jesus not only so free from this intolerance as to tarry in Samaria, but by his bearing and a few searching remarks breaking down this prejudice on the part of the Samaritans themselves. Note how this woman with whom he talked at the well addressed him at first by the despised name of Jew. We can imagine the scorn she put into the words, "How is it that thou being a Jew askest drink of me which am a woman of Samaria?" But when this stranger, who seemed to carry the world in his heart, opened to her the depths of her own soul as they never had been opened even in her most secret thoughts, and then revealed the fountain of cleansing and of soul refreshment in himself, and finally led her thought up to the great and holy God, she rushed off to her friends exclaiming, "Is not this the Christ?" She began by calling him a Jew. She ended by giving him the title of the Lord's Anointed for all Mankind.

There can be no question that Jesus bore the marks of the Jew in face, in speech and in the whole manner of his person. He belonged to a despised race, a race which was hated at the time and against which a prejudice has existed with a fierce pertinacity to this day. And yet who of us thinks of Jesus as a Jew? In what nation is it any obstacle to the acceptance of the Ch ist that he comes from the stock of Israel? The world has recently seen the great nation of France, through her officials, supported by popular sentiment, lend herself to this narrow intolerance in a way which rightly has brought upon her the scorn of the civilized world. But it has never been suggested that in France there is any unwillingness to acknowledge Jesus on the ground that he was a Jew. The transcendence of Jesus in respect to racial and national distinctions is the supreme fact of the age, the one truth worth setting over against the strife and the war of the world. Consider the significance of the fact that the story of Jesus' life has been translated into no less than four hundred living tongues, and that all but thirty-eight of these translations have been made in the present century! What an astonishing testimony for the increasing universality of his influence! More and more he draws to himself men from all sections of the world, all ages, all occupations, all circumstances in life. Mazoomdar, of the Bramo Somaj, in his "The Oriental Christ," fascinated us a few years ago with his brilliant portrayal of the life of our Lord from the Oriental standpoint. His idea was that the Christ had not been fully understood by the Western mind, that there was needed a man of his own Eastern temperament to properly interpret him to the world. More recently, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward has written what some one has aptly called "The Woman's Christ," on the theory that the masculine mind had not fully sounded the depths of that unique personality. Well, he is the Oriental Christ, and the Occidental Christ, the man's Christ, and the woman's Christ, the old man's Christ and the young man's Christ, the children's Christ—yes, everyone's Christ, because he is the universal Christ.

"Christ is all and in all." I know not whether to place the emphasis upon the one clause or the other. They must go together. Such a Christ as we have seen him to be would by that very fact become a common center of interest and holy love for all who accept him. In the simple fact of his universality there exists a mighty bond between men. But add the truth of the indwelling Christ, "Christ in all"—the universal man seen to be dwelling actually or potentially in every other man, indwelling and outshining through each personality, and what more is needed for the solution of this problem of human brotherhood? From this standpoint it matters not what may be the outward appearance of men, whether they wear their hair long, like the Chinamen, or short like the Japanese, whether their color is a dull red like the Indian, a rich black like the African, or a pure white like the Caucasian. We do not see the color, or the shape, or the dress. We do not even see the man. We see the Christ. We value the man as we value the Christ who shines through him in the splendor of ideal manhood.

Can we wonder at this confidence which St. Paul had in the ability of Christ to bring harmony to the race when we remember that it arose directly from his own experience? He knew that the one who was able to change him in the twinkling of an eye from a bigoted, intolerant Jew into an apostle of universal brotherhood was able to do a similar work in others. And so, if we seek an ultimate ground, we must say his hope was based upon the changed view of life which comes in conversion. Each regenerate man becomes a pledge of race unity. Every new birth is like the coming of Christ himself to the earth, with the angel chorus proclaiming,

> "Peace beginning to be
> Deep as the sleep of the sea
> When the stars their faces glass
> In its blue tranquility," and prophesying of,

> "Love, which is sunlight of peace,
> Age by age to increase,
> Till Anger and Hatred are dead
> And sorrow and death shall cease."

In this sublime conception the apostle clearly marks out for the church in all ages the way to the breaking down of national and race prejudice. We must insist upon the sense of universal brotherhood as a part of the regenerate state. Acceptance of Christ should be acceptance of the Universal Christ, and alliance with him in the task of bringing in universal brotherhood. We should not be surprised at the frequent and even violent displays of race antipathy on the part of worldly people. It is of the world spirit, the natural and inevitable fruit of selfishness reigning in the heart. The surprising thing is to find this worldly spirit in the Church. Race prejudice and social enmity here is an abnormal, unholy thing, an offense to Christ, an insult to him in his saving work. It should be lovingly but firmly frowned upon as subversive of what is essential to Christianity. No Church has a right to the name unless its members can unite in the sentiment of Keble's beautiful hymn,

> "So it is with true Christian hearts,
> Their mutual share in Jesus' blood
> An everlasting bond imparts
> Of holiest brotherhood."

III.

Dear friends, the task before us in the direction of universal brotherhood is great. It is not as great as in the days when Paul, the prisoner and hated Jew, wrote of race unity to the Colossian Church; but there still remains much to do. Paul did not look for an immediate consummation of his great idea. He speaks of the ideal humanity as that which is "being renewed unto knowledge after the image of him that created him." It was a process of unity he looked for and believed in. That process has been going on ever since. The first step was the triumph of Paul's universal conception of Christianity over the narrow Judaistic views of his opposers in the Colossian and other churches. That broad conception becoming accepted in theory, its working out in the practical life of the world has been in progress for many centuries. Much has already been done, for which we should be profoundly thankful. But the task still before us is stupendous. It is much that the slaves in our land have been made free, and that the rights of the Indians have been recognized by law. But constitutional enactments and national legislation have but opened the way for the deeper work of establishing the desire for unity and brotherhood deep down in the hearts of all our citizens.

Just now there are discouraging features in our national life which call for an emphatic assertion of the Christian idea as to what are the proper relations of the races to each other. The recent outbreaks of hatred toward the negro on the part of his neighbors in the South reveal an alarming state of affairs.

We seem to have gone back to the worst days following the war. The mass of ignorant colored people are being oppressed in a most unrighteous manner; and no attempt is being made to disguise the determination to keep them down perpetually. On the other hand, the better educated among the negroes are appreciating more and more keenly the heartless discrimination against them. Their future is full of darkness and elements of bitterness. Our very attempt to help them and lift them up by Christian education has made more manifest the crushing disabilities under which they must labor. The more they are educated and the more cultivated they become, the more must they appreciate that the door of social, political and business opportunity is closed on nearly every side. Nor are things so much better in the North, where the negro is supposed to find himself among his friends. What shall we say when a company of Hampton students, all cultured Christian gentlemen, under the conduct of their white pastor, find it impossible to obtain food at any hotel or restaurant in one of our most Congregational New England cities, and are obliged to go hungry to their appointment in the church? What shall we say at the exclusion of one of our talented Negro pastors from a summer school connected with one of our Northern and supposedly Christian universities? Alas, too, we recall with shame, that not all the violence against the freedmen has occurred in the South.

These are heart-searching days, days which call for a courageous assertion of human rights, days which demand much self-sacrificing work. There is a vast work to be done among the masses of our citizens who seem not to have heard that we belong to a human race and that a universal Redeemer has been upon the earth. There is much to be done in government circles, where the idea of brotherhood is too often laughed at as the idle speculation of impracticable dreamers; much, too, in the Church, where the loving Spirit of Christ has entered into the sonls of far too few of his followers.

But let me remind you that, as in the days of St. Paul, so now, the world is specially prepared for the message of brotherly love. There are many encouraging features in the world's life and thought which offset the gloomy picture I have attempted to draw. Brotherhood has become the watchword of the age in many circles. The scholars of social law and life are writing of brotherhood as never before. Laboring men are being organized into local, national and world brotherhoods. This is a conspicuous mark of our time. In a somewhat different sphere the rapid spread of fraternal societies may be cited as indicative of the great trend towards social unity. There can be no question about the sincerity and depth of this movement. The universal spirit is in the air. It has recently found noble expression in the virile poems of Edwin Markham, whose clarion-call rings through the world.

"The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star, is Brotherhood;
For it will bring again to earth
Her long lost Poesy and Mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race.
Come, clear the way, then, clear the way:
Blind creeds and kings have had their day.
Break the dead branches from the path:
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this Event the ages ran:
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for Man."

There is cause for encouragement in this longing after wider relations among men. It shows that many among us, both in and out of the Church, realize that they have been living narrow lives; and they are becoming tired of it. They are moved to break away from exclusive interests in their own kind, to bid farewell forever to the caste spirit and enjoy the larger fellowship of the race. But let us not deceive ourselves. These longings and passionate outcries must produce something better than lodges and labor organizations, if they are to bring in real brotherhood.

Congenial spirits coming together and calling themselves a fraternity, even though it spread far and wide over the earth, will never solve the question of race unity, whatever other good they may do. Labor organizations, valuable as they are for many purposes, are futile as a means of true brotherhood, so long as they receive into their membership a limited few and call outsiders "scabs." All these attempts are brotherhood by exclusion. What we want is brotherhood by inclusion. We want a brotherhood which has room for the poor as well as for the rich, for the black man as well as for the white man, a brotherhood which goes out with mighty impulse to the man who is down, whoever or wherever he may be. We want a brotherhood which, finding in men the diversities which separate, can transform them into the diversities which combine. We want a brotherhood which forms a new man from within. Is it not plain that this can be accomplished only through Christ? We must rally around him. We must hold him forth as the only power which can break down race prejudice, whether in the United States or in France.

I thank God for the American Missionary Association; that he has placed it in the midst of our Congregational churches to keep us true to this great Ideal. Through all these years of its glorious history it has anchored us to the conception of a universal brotherhood. Some churches have cared nothing for these things. Some have openly advocated the disruption of the races in the very house of the Lord. We have stood firm. We have refused to lower our standard a hair's breadth under the pressure of prejudice or expediency. Please God, we never shall. This Association stands supremely for the highest ideal of humanity. We believe in it with all our souls. We are confident of its increasing success. Our progress may be slow, for the tendencies we combat are as old and as mighty as human wrong. But the result is sure. The race has been built for this idea. The Church is founded upon it. The life of Christ is its expression. It matters not if we meet with indifference, criticism or opposition; the cause is the cause of humanity, and has behind it the eternal purpose of God.

Christian friends, may I, as I close, relate a little incident which is very precious to me as being connected with the boyhood of him at whose feet I learned the first lessons of brotherly love? It was in the little village of Torringford, Conn., in 1835, that a stranger came into a private school for boys. He was asked if he would like to say anything to the scholars, and he consented to do so. He asked them about Africa, where it was; and drew out all they knew of the great dark continent. And then about the Africans; and when their information was exhausted he told them more. He spoke feelingly of the people of Africa, who were torn from their homes and brought to this country as slaves; how unjustly many of them were treated here, children being torn from their mothers; of the cruel lash, and other things which, thank God, we have nearly forgotten. And, seeing that the boys were visibly affected, he asked those to raise their hands who would promise him that when they grew up they would oppose the institution of slavery. Nearly every hand went up. And then in the silence of the room he lifted his hands to God and pronounced upon them this benediction: "And now may the blessing of God, who is the Heavenly Father of the white man and also of the black man, and of Jesus Christ, His Son, our Lord, who is the Saviour of the white man and also of the black man, and of the Holy Ghost, who is the Comforter of the white man and also of the black man, rest upon you all and keep you faithful to your promise. Amen." That man was John Brown, afterward of such tragic reputation in his efforts in behalf of the slave. Long since his heroic though mistaken career is ended, and possibly not one of those boys who heard his solemn words is living to-day. But more than one of them lived to inherit the blessing for which he prayed, in the devotion of their lives to the oppressed children of Africa. And certainly the one to whom I alluded lived to realize that the very highest benedictions of God came to him in connection with his efforts to place the black man as honored and beloved in the midst of his brethren.

I feel that it has been so with our Congregational churches. The blessing of God, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, has been upon us as we have carried on this work. What we have given of time, of money and personal service, has been more than repaid in the enrichment of our life and the increase of our power. And we have just begun. The door of opportunity, the door of blessing, stands wide open to-day, yes, wider than ever before. Not only for these weaker brethren of the South, but for other races as well, God has raised us up to stand for the brotherhood of Christ. And now that in his wonderful providence there have come under our care the stricken people of Porto Rico, Cuba and the distant islands of the sea, he is calling us to share with them also the spiritual privileges which have been our peculiar glory in the past. Surely these are heavenly places in Christ Jesus which we are to occupy in the coming sessions of our annual gathering. A special blessing awaits us if we are determined to honor his brotherhood as universal, his kingdom as meant for all. In all future years his richest grace will be with us if we remain faithful to this sacred privilege, if to the end of our days, holding to the ideal of a universal family through Jesus Christ, we look and work with confidence for the time—

"When the wise King from out of the nearing heaven comes To break the spell of long millenniums—
To build with song again
The broken hope of men—
To hush and heroize the world,
Beneath the flag of brotherhood unfurled."

BRIEF HISTORY.

The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854 its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees, and in North America among the Indians.

The home department embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave States and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave States gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

AMONG THE NEGROES.

The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute, which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk, the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo.; and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

CLOSE OF THE WAR—FREEDMEN'S BUREAU—BOSTON COUNCIL.

The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the Northern States. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861 to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,769 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midninght, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

PERMANENT EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains as higher institutions Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana, and Tillotson College, Texas, together with forty-five normal and graded schools and twenty-six common schools scattered over the South and among the mountains, six schools among the Indians, twenty-one among the Chinese on the Pacific coast, one in Alaska and two in Porto Rico.

Theological departments also have been established in Howard University, Fisk University, Talladega College and Straight University. Industrial instruction first began in Southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools, and has been constantly extended. Talladega College and Tougaloo University have large farms. In all the larger institutions and normal schools, mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

CHURCH PLANTING.

Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions, the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 230, located in nearly all the States of the South, among the negroes, the mountaineers and the Indians, with most fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Conferences or associations have been formed, and of these there are now nine, designated as the Conferences of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, South Carolina and Tennessee.

MOUNTAIN WORK.

The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations or schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and sweeping nearly across both States: in Kentucky at Williamsburg, Pleasant View, Corbin, Grey Hawk, Combs and Campton; in Tennessee at Jellico, Pomona Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Bon Air and Mill Creek; in North Carolina at Saluda, Whittier and Blowing Rock; in Alabama at Nat (Bending Oaks) and Joppa. The Sunday-school work in these districts reuders most efficient service in laying the foundation for churches and day-schools, and in promoting the cause of temperance.

THE INDIANS.

Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed amoug the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions at S'kokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., and the Crow Agency, Mont. The churches number nineteen, with a membership of 1,097. Schools number six, with 368 pupils. The outstations number thirty-three.

Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It is now entirely supported by special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of the missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

CHINESE IN AMERICA.

The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of teachers is thirty-five, and schools twenty-one, located at Fresno, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Petaluma, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Santa Cruz, Ventura, Vernondale, Watsonville and three in San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

PORTO RICO.

The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessings of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth, and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island.

Two schools have been established, one is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work. The other is at Lares in the western portion of the island. Both schools opened hopefully and were crowded with eager pupils from the first. The evangelist holds a large circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of women's aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of this Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting, at an Annual Meeting, the amendment having been approved by the vote of a majority at the previous Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-eight of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and is hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled: An Act relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month, at 3.30 o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Committees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Missions.
3. A Committee on Support.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee,

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his inability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of the financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Missions to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to it desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the missionary and educational work of the Association. It shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to it, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON SUPPORT.—It shall be the duty of this Committee to meet at least once in two months to consider methods of promoting a missionary spirit throughout the churches, and of securing from the churches and friends of missions by addresses and publications, and through the various district offices and agencies and otherwise, the amounts required for the support and constant enlargement of the work, and to report to the Executive Committee such recommendations as shall seem desirable.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Chairmen of the first three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the appropriate Committee according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient work of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office, and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.
5. Reading the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Missions. (3) Support. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive Session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work recognizes no distinction of race or color. Since emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES, especially in the mountain districts [illegible]

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work recognizes no distinction of race or color. Since emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America and as missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES, especially in the mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to extend the blessings of the gospel and civilization to the INDIANS of North America. In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

FIFTY-FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-Fourth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the Court Square Theatre, Springfield, Massachusetts, October 23, 1900, at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, and was called to order by President F. A. Noble.

The hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" was sung by the audience. The Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan, read the sixtieth chapter of Isaiah, and, after a song by the Fisk Jubilee Singers, prayer was offered by the Rev. James W. Cooper, of Connecticut.

The hymn "Soon Shall the Last Glad Song Arise" was sung.

Organization.

The Rev. Willard Scott, of Massachusetts, Chairman of the Nominating Committee, presented nominations as follows, which were confirmed by vote of the Association:

Rev. John L. Sewell, of Massachusetts, Recording Secretary; Rev. J. Brainerd Thrall, of Massachusetts, Assistant Recording Secretary; Rev. Frank S. Fitch, of New York, and Rev. A. R. Thain, of Illinois, additional members of the Nominating Committee.

Addresses of Welcome.

Addresses of welcome were delivered by the Hon. William P. Hayes, of Springfield, in behalf of the city, and by Rev. Philip S. Moxom, in behalf of the churches of the city.

Response.

resident F. A. Noble responded for the Association.

The Jubilee Singers sang again.

The Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer H. W. Hubbard, of New York, read the treasurer's report, which, with the certificate of the auditors, was accepted and placed on file.

To the call of .e President for the "most jubilant song the Jubilee Singers can us, in view of this report," they sang "There's a great Camp-m ng in the Promised Land," with the refrains, "Going to work and never tire," "Pray and never tire," "Shout and never tire," "Fly and never tire."

General Survey.

The report of the Executive Committee, giving a General Survey of the Field, was read by Mr. Charles A. Hull, of New York, Chairman, and, by reason of its great importance, was laid on the table until the business hour of the following day.

Program.

The report of the Committee on Program, presented by Rev. James W. Cooper, of Connecticut, was adopted.

The Lord's Supper.

The Nominating Committee presented the following names for the celebration of the Lord's Supper:

Officiating Clergymen: Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Connecticut, and Rev. A. J. MacGowan, of New Hampshire.

Officiating Deacons: A. H. Kirkham, C. E. Brown, H. B. Lincoln, D. W. Willcox and E. Boynton, of Massachusetts; W. H. Catlin, of Connecticut; Dr. L. C. Warner and C. A. Hull, of New York.

The Committee on Nominations made the following report on subcommittees, which was adopted:

Business Committee.

Rev. Philip S. Moxom, of Massachusetts; Hon. T. C. MacMillan, of Illinois; Rev. C. F. Roper, of New Hampshire; Rev. James Chamberlain, of Connecticut; Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Connecticut.

Committee on Chinese Missions.

Rev. E. H. Byington, of Massachusetts; Rev. Josiah Strong, of New York; Rev. T. R. Waite, of Connecticut; Rev. Samuel L. Loomis, of Massachusetts; Rev. D. W. Morgan, of New York.

Committee on Indian Missions.

Rev. C. A. Vincent, of Illinois; Rev. Charles F. Carter, of Massachusetts; Rev. T. S. Devitt, of Connecticut; Rev. W. A. Rice, of New Jersey; Mr. R. B. Risk, of Rhode Island.

Concert of Prayer.

A service of prayer, led by Secretary Beard, and participated in by a large number of delegates, was opened with the chanting of the Lord's Prayer by the Jubilee Singers, and closed with "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, and adjournment was taken until 7.30 P.M.

TUESDAY EVENING.

At half-past seven the Association assembled, President Noble in the chair, and an immense audience rose to sing "Ye servants of God, your Master proclaim."

Rev. R. W. Wallace, of Massachusetts, read the seventy-second Psalm.

A quartette rendered the anthem "Glory be to God on high."

Rev. A. R. Thain, of Illinois, offered prayer.

The quartette chanted the Lord's Prayer.

The following committees were proposed by the Nominating Committee and were elected:

Committee on Southern Educational Work.

Prof. Samuel T. Dutton, of New York; Gen. W. A. Aiken, of Connecticut; Pres. S. H. Lee, of Massachusetts; Rev. Howard Billman, of New Hampshire; Rev. G. E. Taylor, of Nebraska.

Committee on Southern Church Work.

Rev. Frank S. Fitch, of New York; Rev. Joel S. Ives, of Connecticut; Rev. Alexander Lewis, of Massachusetts; Rev. A. C. Garner, of the District of Columbia.

The Jubilee Singers sang "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?"

Annual Sermon.

The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, from the words, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, for every knee shall bow and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." His subject was "Jesus Christ and Social Progress."

At the close of the sermon the Jubilee Singers sang "Lord, I want to be a Christian in my heart," and after prayer and the benediction by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan, adjournment was had to the old First Church, where the Communion was administered by Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Connecticut.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

After a devotional service at 8.30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, the Association was called to order at 9.15 o'clock by President Noble.

"Stand up for Jesus" was sung, and prayer was offered by Rev. E. H. Byington, of Massachusetts.

Report on Federation.

The report of the Committee on Federation of the Benevolent Societies was read by Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, of Massachusetts, Chairman, as follows:

Report of Committee on Federation.

The committee appointed by this Association at its annual meeting in 1899, in accordance with the vote, "That a committee of five be appointed to consider the relations of this Association with the other benevolent societies of our denomination and such administrative adjustments as may help toward their federation and toward the efficiency of the work of this Association; said committee to report at the annual meeting to be held in 1900," having attended to the duties assigned them, would respectfully report:

First.—That an organization having already been formed by the representatives of our six missionary societies for the purpose of "advancing the common interests of the societies and securing the utmost economy and efficiency of their administration," this Association expresses its most cordial approval of steps taken toward a closer alliance of these societies, and promises to co-operate in the efforts of the "Committee of Nine" to that end.

Second.—We recommend that one general conference of the benevolent societies of the Congregational churches be held each year, at some convenient place, at which the work of each society may be presented and the necessary business of each transacted; said meeting being its annual meeting.

Third.—That the intelligent acquaintance of the members of our congregations with the progress and demands of our philanthropic and missionary enterprises will be best secured by the publication of a single attractive monthly magazine, in the maintenance of which each society should bear its appropriate share.

Fourth.—That as the "Committee of Nine" have formally recommended to the various constituent societies that all their salaried officers should be elected by the various managing Boards, rather than by the societies themselves, we do most earnestly approve such proposal, and urge its adoption by this Association.

Fifth—That the branch of this Association's work known as that "Among the Mountain Whites," be offered to the Congregational Home Missionary Society, as coming within the sphere of its commission, and which might properly be undertaken and sustained by it.

Sixth.—That in accordance with the above recommendations, a committee of five be appointed, to make overtures to the other five societies, and to offer such amendments to the Constitution and By-laws of this Association as may be necessary to effect the changes herein proposed.

(Signed) DEWITT S. CLARK,
ALFRED T. PERRY,
STEPHEN M. NEWMAN,
JOHN R. NICHOLS,
E. D. REDINGTON.

The report was accepted and was ordered printed, pending discussion at the business hour of Thursday morning, final action to be deferred until further report by the committee.

The following resolution was presented by Secretary C. J. Ryder and unanimously passed:

Voted, That the thanks of the American Missionary Association be tendered to our sister society, the Sunday-school and Publishing Society, for its thoughtful courtesy in furnishing hymn-books to be used at the Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting.

Report of Executive Committee.

The report of the Executive Committee was taken from the table and referred in its several parts to the various sub-committees.

Report of Committee on Chinese Missions.

The report of the Committee on Chinese Missions was presented, and an address delivered thereon, by Rev. E. H. Byington, of Massachusetts, and, after discussion by Rev. Elijah Horr, of Massachusetts, was accepted.

Owing to the inability of Mr. R. B. Risk to serve as a member of the Business Committee, the Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Connecticut, was appointed in his place.

Rev. Josiah Strong, of New York, addressed the Association on "The Chinese in America, and the Regeneration of China."

Recommendations of the Business Committee.

The Business Committee made the following recommendations, which were accepted:

1. That Rev. J. H. Roberts, of Kalgan, China, be invited to speak for ten minutes immediately after Dr. Strong.
2. That President S. H. Lee, of the French-American College, be given opportunity to make a statement and give an invitation.
3. That at 2 o'clock P.M. the Association take up amendments to Articles IX and V of the Constitution, in this order.
4. That the report of the Committee of Nine be presented for consideration at 9 o'clock A.M. on Thursday.
5. That time limits be sharply observed by speakers and the President.

Rev. J. H. Roberts, of Kalgan, North China, discussed the topic which had been presented by Rev. Josiah Strong in his address.

Rev. S. H. Lee, President of the French-American College, Springfield, presented the greetings of the college.

Report on Indian Missions.

The report of the Committee on Indian Missions was presented, and an address delivered thereon, by Rev. C. A. Vincent, of Illinois, Chairman. The report was accepted.

The Jubilee Singers rendered "Rolling in Zion's Jubilee," and sang, as an encore, "O Lord, I've done what you told me to do."

Secretary Ryder introduced Rev. A. C. Garner, Pastor of Plymouth

Church, Washington, D. C., who presented "A Negro's Plea for the Negro."

President Horace Bumstead, of Atlanta University, spoke on "The Higher Education of the Negro."

Recommendations.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, it was voted that the business meeting be held in the First Church on Thursday, at 2 o'clock P.M.

It was also voted that an overflow meeting be held on the evening of Wednesday in the First Church, simultaneously with the regular meeting.

After prayer and the benediction by Secretary Woodbury, the Association took adjournment until 2 o'clock P.M.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

At 2 o'clock P.M., President Noble called the Association to order by announcing the hymn, "Jesus, Lover of my Soul."

Prayer was offered by Rev. William Hayes Ward, of New York.

Amendments to Constitution.

The Business Committee called up the amendments proposed to Articles IX and V of the Constitution, laid over from last year.

By vote, Article IX was amended so as to read:

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting at an annual meeting, notice of the amendment having been given at a preceding annual meeting.

Further consideration of Article V was deferred until 4.30 P.M.

Overflow Meeting.

The Business Committee announced that the evening program, including the singers, and the address of Rev. A. C. Garner, would be repeated at the overflow meeting in the First Church.

The Jubilee male quartette sang "Way Down upon the Suwanee River."

Rev. H. L. Hoyt, of Tennessee, delivered an address, entitled "A Missionary Message from the Mountains."

The Jubilee Singers sang "I want to be ready to walk in Jerusalem."

W. H. Strong, of Michigan, one of the vice-presidents, took the chair.

Rev. John Edwards, in a short address, brought a "Missionary Message from Porto Rico."

The Jubilee trio of women's voices rendered the anthem "Lift thine eyes."

J. R. Savage delivered to the Association a "Missionary Message from the Negroes."

President Truman J. Backus, of New York, spoke on the "Threefold Education of the Negro."

President Noble resumed the chair, and the Jubilee Singers sang "March on, and you shall gain the victory."

The Secretarial Paper.

Secretary A. F. Beard presented a Secretarial paper on the subject "The Present Indicative."

The following committees, presented by the Nominating Committee, were chosen for the ensuing year:

Finance Committee.

George P. Stockwell, of New York; Charles Denny, of Massachusetts; Hon. Thomas C. MacMillan, of Illinois; Gen. William A. Aiken, of Connecticut; George Keith, of Massachusetts.

Nominating Committee.

Rev. Frank S. Fitch, of New York; Rev. Charles F. Carter, of Massachusetts; President Alfred T. Perry, of Ohio; Rev. W. E. Strong, of Michigan; Rev. Lucius H. Thayer, of New Hampshire.

Amendment to Constitution.

After the singing of "More love to Thee, O Christ," the amendment proposed to the Fifth Article of the Constitution was taken from the table.

A motion to amend was laid on the table.

Report of the Committee on Church Work.

Rev. Frank S. Fitch, of New York, presented the report of the Committee on Church Work in the South, and, owing to the lateness of the hour, declined to speak upon the report.

Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, of Massachusetts, delivered an address on "The Ethical and Spiritual Value of our Churches to the Negro."

The Nominating Committee presented the name of Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Michigan, as presiding officer at the overflow meeting.

After prayer and the benediction by Rev. J. R. Nichols, of Ohio, adjournment was taken until the evening.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

At 7:30 o'clock on Wednesday evening, President Noble in the chair, the great audience sang, "Stand Up for Jesus," and "'Tis by the Faith of Joys to Come."

Professor W. H. Ryder, of Andover Theological Seminary, read the Scripture in the XI Chapter of Hebrews.

Prayer was offered by Dean J. G. Merrill, of Fisk University.

The following gentlemen spoke for the respective mission fields: Chan Kew, of New York, for the Chinese, and Rev. Wheeler M. Wellman, of Oklahoma, for the Indians.

The Jubilee Singers sang "The Year of Jubilee," and gave as an encore, "The Old Ark's a-moverin'."

Secretary Beard introduced Mr. William Pickens, a sophomore in Talladega College, who spoke on "Negro Evolution."

The Jubilee male quartette sang "My Old Kentucky Home."

Principal H. B. Frissell, of Hampton Institute, delivered an address on "Our Responsibilities to Undeveloped Races, Specifically the Negro and the Indian."

Major R. H. Pratt, Principal of the Indian School at Carlisle, was introduced, and spoke briefly on "The Sources of Inspiration for Work Among the Indians."

By special request, the Jubilee Singers repeated "Were you there when they crucified my Lord," the audience standing.

Mr. Booker T. Washington, of Alabama, Principal of Tuskegee Institute, was introduced with the presentation of flowers at the hand of Rev. P. S. Moxom, and delivered an address on "The Condition and Outlook for the Negro."

After "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," and "The Lord Bless Thee and Keep Thee," sung by the Jubilee Singers, Rev. George A. Tewksbury, of Massachusetts, offered prayer and pronounced the benediction.

THURSDAY MORNING.

After a devotional service at 8:30 A.M., President Noble announced, at 9:15 o'clock, the hymn, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Mr. George W. Crawford, a former student at Talladega College, now in Yale Law School, read the 23d Psalm, and Rev. A. J. Lyman, of New York, offered prayer.

The hymn, "Awake, my Soul, in Joyful Lays," was sung.

The report of the Finance Committee was read by Mr. A. Lyman Williston, of Massachusetts, one of the members of the committee appointed last year.

The report of the Committee on Federation was taken up and a motion to accept and adopt was, on motion of Dr. L. C. Warner, amended so that the Fifth clause of the report should read:

"Fifth.—We heartily approve of the action which has been taken by the Executive Committees of this Association and of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, looking toward a better division of their several fields of labor, and we trust that this action will result in such transfer or exchange of fields as may conduce to economy and efficiency of work and administration."

After discussion by Dr. L. C. Warner and Mr. C. A. Hull, of New York, it was voted, on motion of Rev. Philip S. Moxom, that the fifth recommendation and the substitute proposed be laid on the table.

Section Second of the report recommending a General Annual Convention of the Benevolent Societies, was discussed by Rev. Wayland Spaulding and Dr. L. C. Warner, of New York. Gen. T. J. Morgan, of New York, on invitation, explained the practical working of the General Conference of the Baptist Benevolent Societies, and Rev. P. S. Moxom presented the following formal communication from the General Association of Michigan:

At the annual meeting of the Michigan Congregational Association, at Ypsilanti, May 15–17, 1900, the following resolution was unanimously and heartily adopted:

Resolved, That the suggestions of the Congregational Convention of Vermont concerning the annual meetings of our five Home Missionary Societies receive our cordial approval.

Resolved, That we further declare our conviction that the interests of the Kingdom of God will be advanced through our order by the union of all our missionary societies in such an annual gathering where our denominational sentiment, sympathy and service may find emphatic, adequate and satisfactory expression.

In behalf of the Michigan Congregational Association I have to request that these resolutions be presented at your annual meeting.

JOHN P. SANDERSON,
Registrar of Michigan Cong'l Assoc'n.

Articles 1, 2 and 3 of the report were then adopted, and after discussion by Mr. C. A. Hull, of New York, Rev. S. W. Clarke, of Connecticut, and Rev. A. H. Bradford, of New Jersey, further consideration of Articles 4 and 6 was postponed until the afternoon.

A resolution, presented by the Rev. J. L. Sewell, of Massachusetts, with reference to the annual business meeting of next year, was referred to the Business Committee.

Proposed Amendments to Constitution.

Mr. C. A. Hull, of New York, presented the following proposed amendments to the Constitution, to be considered at the next annual meeting:

Proposed amendment to the Constitution of the American Missionary Association, Articles V and VI, to be amended to read as follows.

ARTICLE V.

The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors, and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot as hereinafter provided.

The President, Vice-Presidents, Recording Secretary and Auditors shall be elected each year by the Association at its annual meeting.

The members of the Executive Committee shall be elected in accordance with the following plan: At each annual meeting of the Association five members shall be elected for a full term of three years, and such additional members as may be required to fill vacancies for the shorter terms of two years and one year.

The Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries and the Treasurer shall be elected each year by the Executive Committee at the first meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the Association.

ARTICLE VI.

To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of salaried officers, missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in their own membership or in the officers of the Association occurring between the annual meetings until the next annual meeting; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision, when necessary, for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the annual meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

These proposed amendments were referred to the Business Committee.

The Jubilee Singers sang, "What Kind of Crown You Going to Wear."

Changes in Program.

The Business Committee recommended that President J. H. Barrows be requested to transfer his address to the evening, and he be asked to repeat it in the First Church.

General T. J. Morgan, of New York, Secretary of the Baptist Home Missionary Society, delivered an address on "Our Common Work."

The Jubilee Singers sang the "Thanksgiving Blessing," followed by "Christian, Hold up Your Head."

Rev. M. C. B. Mason, of Ohio, Secretary Freedmen's Aid Society, M. E. Church, delivered an address on "The Results of Our Work in the South."

Professor Samuel T. Dutton, of the Teachers' College, Columbia University, presented the Report of the Committee on Educational Work in the South, and delivered an address thereon.

President J. H. Barrows, of Oberlin College, being introduced, addressed the Association briefly on "Dominant Christianity."

OVERFLOW MEETING.

The Committee on Nominations recommended Mr. C. A. Hull, of New York, as presiding officer of the overflow meeting at the First Church, and presented the following names for the Committee on Resolutions.

Rev. Amory H. Bradford, of New Jersey; Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, of Massachusetts; Mr. S. E. Bridgman, of Massachusetts.

After prayer and the benediction by Secretary Mason, of the M. E. Freedmen's Aid Society, adjournment was taken until the business meeting at the First Church at 2 o'clock P.M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The Annual Business Meeting.

The Annual Business Meeting was called to order in the chapel of the First Church, at 2 o'clock P.M., by the Chairman of the Business Committee, Rev. P. S. Moxom, and, in the absence of the president and vice-president, Rev. J. W. Cooper, of Connecticut, was chosen to preside.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Asher Anderson, of Connecticut.

A resolution, presented by Rev. Elijah Horr, and protesting against the affront upon the manhood of the negro in certain of the states, was referred to the Business Committee.

The Business Committee reported the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the resolutions in respect of Dr. Cravath be read at the evening meeting at the theatre, and that the leader of the Jubilee Singers, Mr. Work, be requested to add a brief tribute to the memory of the deceased president; also, that the Jubilee Singers be invited to sing one of their songs which was a favorite of Dr. Cravath.

Minute to the Memory of Secretary Hazen.

The following resolution was offered by Secretary Beard, with consent of the Business Committee, and was unanimously adopted:

This Association desires to place on record its deep sense of loss in the death of its Recording Secretary, Rev. Henry A. Hazen, D.D. A warm friend of the work in which we are engaged, he gave his exceptional ability as a Secretary with unvarying fidelity and with true devotion. The Association cherishes the memory of this sincere and earnest servant of God and of his fellow-men.

Annual Business Meeting of Next Year.

The following resolution was presented by the Business Committee, and was adopted:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be hereby instructed to set apart the entire session of Thursday forenoon in the next annual meeting for the Annual Business Meeting, and for open discussion of the work of this Association.

The proposed amendment to Article V of the Constitution was taken from the table, discussed and re-tabled:

Report on Federation.

Section V of the report of the Committee on Federation was taken from the table and adopted, as follows:

That, in accordance with the above recommendations, a Committee of Five be appointed, to make overtures to the other five societies, and to offer such amendments to the Constitution and By-laws of this Association as may be necessary to effect the changes herein proposed.

A report from the Committee of Nine, representing the Executive Committees of the six benevolent societies, was presented by Rev. R. T. Hall, of Connecticut, as follows:

PEAN OF CLOSER UNION OF THE SIX MISSIONARY SOCIETIES OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES.

For some years a feeling has been growing among the Congregational churches that there should be some readjustment of their six missionary societies in the interest of greater unity of action and economy of administration. This sentiment has found expression in the resolutions adopted and committees appointed by the National Congregational Council, in criticisms by the religious press, and in the action of several state and local associations. The chief points criticised have been duplication of work and supervision in the same field, conflict of urgency appeals, unnecessary multiplication of collecting agencies, and excessive expenses in the administration of the different societies.

The object of the benevolent work of the churches is to carry the blessings of the gospel to the destitute and needy. The spirit and purpose of the work are the same, whether the field is at home or in distant parts of the world. It seems eminently fitting, therefore, that there should be whatever co-operation and combination of the benevolent societies will best promote the unity of the whole work and the wisest economy in its administration. It may not be, and at present is not practicable or desirable to combine the several societies into one organization, but it is believed by many that a much larger measure of union than at present would result in great advantage to the individual societies and efficiency in the entire work. With this object in view, the Committee of Nine suggest to the societies and to the churches the following outline of a plan for promoting closer union and greater economy and efficiency in the benevolent societies of the Congregational churches:

1. We recommend that all the six societies hold a joint annual meeting in the month of October and suggest the provision of a united missionary conference, also, each year in that portion of the country where the annual meeting is not held.

2. We recommend that the six societies adopt a common basis of representation by delegates to the annual meeting. We suggest that these delegates be selected each year either by the churches directly or by the local conferences acting for the churches. The details of this representation may be arranged by a special committee of one member from each of the six societies, after which the constitutions of the societies can be changed, if necessary, to correspond with the new basis of representation.

3. We recommend that each society have its separate Board of Directors, Trustees, Executive Committee or Prudential Committee, as at present, the members of which shall be elected at the annual meeting, and also have its separate budget of receipts and expenses.

4. We recommend that each society have one secretary, to be appointed by and to act under the direction of its Executive Board.

5. We recommend that the treasuries of the societies be combined in two offices with two treasurers, one to be located at Boston and one at New York City, and that these treasurers respectively be elected by the local Executive Boards acting together.

6. We recommend that sufficient clerical assistance be provided for the secretaries and treasurers.

7. We recommend that the solicitation and collection of funds for all the societies be under the care of a special sub-committee, to be composed of two members each from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Congregational Home Missionary Society, and American Missionary Association, and one each from the Congregational Church-Building Society, Congregational Education Society, and Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society. This committee shall supervise and conduct, through the employment of necessary agents, a "Forward Movement" for the promotion of systematic giving by the churches to our six benevolent societies. They shall also, in conference with the secretaries of these societies, utilize missionaries and other workers upon the field to present the work with which they are familiar. They shall supervise the publication of magazines, papers, leaflets and books, and shall employ such other means as may seem to them wise to disseminate a knowledge of the work these societies are doing, and to awaken in the churches a recognition of responsibility for their proper support. The expenses of this committee shall be borne by the six societies in proportion to the amount collected for each.

8. We recommend that, whenever necessary, there shall be such a readjustment of the work or territory of the societies as will secure greater economy and prevent two societies from doing similar work upon the same field. If any two or more societies fail to agree upon the adjustment of work or territory, the Committee of Nine, above provided for, shall be a committee of arbitration to which the matter shall be submitted, and the vote of seven members of said committee shall be binding upon the societies concerned. Said committee shall also have power to decide when the need of such readjustment exists.

CHARLES A. HULL, WILLIAM H. WILLCOX.
JOHN H. PERRY.

It was voted to receive this report, and refer it to the special Committee of Five, to which the report of the Committee on Federation has been referred, to report, after consultation with the Executive Committee, at the annual meeting of the Association next year.

Vice-President Strong took the chair.

Place of Next Meeting.

The Business Committee reported invitations for the next annual meeting from Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and Oak Park, Illinois, and moved their acknowledgment by the Secretary and their reference to the Executive Committee.

Publication of Reports of Committees.

The Business Committee reported the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That hereafter reports of committees to be considered at the business meeting be published in the Congregational papers, for the information of pastors, members and such as may be delegates, at least three weeks before the annual meeting.

The Business Committee recommended that the resolutions from the Michigan Association be acknowledged by the Secretary.

The Business Committee reported favorably the resolution offered by Rev. Elijah Horr. After discussion, it was referred back to the Committee.

Election of Officers.

The Committee on Nominations reported the following ballot:

President.

REV. F. A. NOBLE, D D., Illinois.

Vice-Presidents.

REV. ALEXANDER MCKENZIE, D.D., of Massachusetts.
REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, D.D., of Ohio.
REV. HENRY A. STIMSON, D.D., of New York.
REV. JAMES W. COOPER, D.D., of Connecticut.
WILLIAM H. STRONG, ESQ., of Michigan.

Recording Secretary.

REV. EUGENE C. WEBSTER, of Massachusetts.

Corresponding Secretaries.

REV. A. F. BEARD, D.D., of New York.
REV. F. P. WOODBURY, D.D., of New York.
REV. C. J. RYDER, D.D., of New York.

Treasurer.

H. W. HUBBARD, ESQ., of New York.

Auditors.

EDWIN H. BAKER, ESQ., of Connecticut.
JOHN E. LEECH, ESQ., of New York.

Executive Committee.

To Fill Unexpired Term of One Year.

HENRY R. WILSON, ESQ., of New Jersey.

For Full Term of Three Years.

REV. WILLIAM HAYES WARD, D.D., of New York.
DR. LUCIEN C. WARNER, of New York.
REV. LEWELLYN PRATT, D.D., of Connecticut.
REV. PHILIP S. MOXOM, D.D., of Massachusetts.
REV. W. W. MCLANE, D.D., of Connecticut.

Judge John H. Perry and Rev. J. W. Cooper, of Connecticut, were appointed tellers.

The ballot having been completed, the tellers made their report, and Vice-President Strong announced that the persons whose names had been presented by the Nominating Committee on the printed ballot were the officers for the ensuing year.

Reading and Approval of the Minutes.

The minutes of the Association up to the business meeting of this afternoon were read by the Assistant Secretary, and were approved.

Adjournment was taken until the evening.

THE WOMEN'S MEETING.

At the same hour, 2 o'clock P.M., the annual meeting of the Women's Bureau of the American Missionary Association convened at the Theatre.

Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, of Massachusetts, presided.

After the singing of "Coronation," the Scripture was read by Miss Susan Hayes Ward, of New Jersey, and the Jubilee Singers chanted the Lord's Prayer.

Mrs. Constance L. Goodell, of Massachusetts, brought greetings from the Woman's Home Missionary Auxiliary of Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Singing by the Jubilee Singers was followed by the Annual Report, presented by Miss D. E. Emerson, Secretary, of New York.

Mrs. W. M. Wellman, of Oklahoma, presented "Our Plea for Indian Women."

Mrs. H. L. Hoyt, of Tennessee, presented "Our Mission to the Highlanders."

Mrs. Truman J. Backus, of New York, who was to have given "Observations in the South," was unable to be present, and the vacant place in the program was filled by the Jubilee Singers.

Miss Nettie Crump, of Alabama, spoke on "Student Life and Afterward."

The closing address, on "Progress of Colored Women," was given by Mrs. Mary Church Terrell, of the District of Columbia, President of the National Colored Women's Association.

The Jubilee Singers sang the "Benediction."

THURSDAY EVENING.

The Association convened at 7:30 P.M., Vice-President Strong in the chair. The hymn, "He Leadeth Me," was sung.

Committee on Federation.

The Nominating Committee reported the following persons as the Committee of Five, to which was referred the report of the Committee of Nine.

Rev. J. G. Johnson, of Connecticut, chairman; Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, of Massachusetts; Rev. A. H. Bradford, of New Jersey; Mr. Henry A. Wilder, of Massachusetts; Mr. H. Clark Ford, of Ohio.

A Protest and a Demand.

The following resolution was presented by the Business Committee and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, More than fifty years ago, the American Missionary Association made a protest against the oppression of the Negro and the indignity put upon his manhood by slavery, and through all the years of its history has not only continued this protest, but in its schools and colleges has given the Negro an opportunity to demonstrate his susceptibility to education and culture and his ability to profit by these in the general advancement of the race; and, whereas, a new and most subtle attack has recently been made on the manhood and citizenship of the Negro, despite the guaranty of the Fifteenth Amendment; Therefore, be it resolved, that, while we disclaim, now as ever, any political bias, or purpose to interfere in State or National politics, and while we recognize the right of States to regulate the conditions of citizenship and of suffrage, subject to the Constitution of the United States, we demand that these conditions shall respect the manhood of the Negro, and shall apply alike to white and black, without regard to race, color or previous condition.

Reading of Minutes.

It was voted that the reading of the remainder of the minutes, with the emendations, be referred to the Executive Committee.

The South Church Chorus of forty-five voices rendered the anthem, "Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem."

The Scripture was read by Rev. John W. Ballantine, of Connecticut.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. W. S. Hawkes, of Massachusetts.

The South Church Choir sang, "O Gladsome Light."

Rev. A. R. Thain, of Illinois, spoke on "Enlarged Work in Our Mission Fields."

The Jubilee Male Quartette rendered the anthem—"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy Youth."

President Noble resumed the chair. Rev. C. W. Hiatt, of Ohio, spoke on "Enlarged Fields for our Mission Work."

The Rev. Joseph Cook was introduced, and spoke briefly on the three words, "Educate, Evangelize, Enfranchise."

The audience sang "America."

President John Henry Barrows, of Oberlin College, delivered an address entitled, "The Missionary Appeal of the Twentieth Century for America."

Memorial to President Cravath.

The Rev. J. W. Cooper, of Connecticut, in behalf of the Committee on Resolutions, presented the following minute on the death of President Cravath:

The American Missionary Association, with profound grief, deplores the loss from the ever-lessening ranks of its laborers of one who, as a secretary of the Association and president of its largest institution of learning, has for more than a generation championed the principles for which the Association was founded—Erastus Milo Cravath, D.D.

The Association would place upon record its high appreciation of the great ability and deep consecration of the first and only president of the institution, which, in common with other schools of the Association, he planted at strategic centers in the South.

It would convey to the family of Dr. Cravath, to the faculty, alumni and student-body of Fisk, its profound sympathy in view of their bereavement.

It would join, with all the friends of the people for whom Fisk was founded, in prayer to God that He should choose one to succeed President Cravath who shall work out the plans, for the fulfillment of which this master-workman wrought, for which he laid down his life.

Mr. Work, of Fisk University, added a word of personal tribute in the name of the students and graduates of the University.

The Jubilee Singers sang

We shall walk through the valley of the shadow of death in peace,
If Jesus Himself shall be our leader, the favorite hymn of President Cravath.

The resolution in memory of President Cravath was then adopted.

Resolutions of Appreciation and Thanks.

The Committee on Resolutions presented the following resolutions of appreciation, which were adopted:

The American Missionary Association, at the close of its Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting, desires to express its high appreciation of the generous hospitality extended to its members and delegates by the city of Springfield, its churches and its homes.

The welcome of the Mayor and the greeting received from the churches of all denominations gladdened our hearts as we came. The abundant services of our hosts, and the indefatigable attention of the local committees on entertainment and arrangements; the resourcefulness and tireless kindness of the Transportation Committee and the Committee on Press and Printing; the generous provision of the Committee on Finance; the gracious care of the Committee on Reception; in short, the unwearied attentions of all, from first to last, have made the meeting of the Association in the beautiful city of Springfield one long to be remembered.

We are especially grateful to the First Church for the use of its building for various services, to the leader of our congregational singing, and to the South Church chorus, which has cheered us with inspiring songs.

We desire to express our appreciation of the courtesy and the work of the local press, especially of the Springfield Republican and the Springfield Union.

We commend to our constituency and to the public the official report of our proceedings in the Springfield Union, whose enterprise has been a feat in journalism, and through whose efforts and their results our exceptionally interesting proceedings will be conveyed to numerous homes in Massachusetts and throughout the United States.

Closing Address and Adjournment.

President Noble delivered the closing address on the theme, "Keeping at it."

The Association adjourned without day at 10.30 P.M., with the chanting of the Lord's Prayer by the Jubilee Singers and the benediction by President Noble.

JOHN L. SEWELL,
Recording Secretary.
J. BRAINERD THRALL,
Ass't Rec'g Secretary.

FIFTY-FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1900.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The American Missionary Association's year now completed has been marked chiefly by conscientious performance of a constant purpose.

In the survey of our field we find that it differentiates from other years mainly in the details and in the degree of realizations. Our Southern Educational Work, like that of our Church work, is the offspring of Christian faith. Our schools were organized not merely to be fountains of knowledge to fit the ignorant for life, but supremely to teach the wisdom which is life itself.

The problem with which we have to do is the problem of Christianity. Our school work year by year is to lay the foundations of Christian character in educating the intellect and conscience together. As a missionary society we are not doing two or three kinds of work, but in varied lines and with varied instrumentalities one work in the transformation of a people by the transformation of persons through the only transforming power of Jesus Christ. This is our educational charter.

Hence every teacher is expected to be as consecrated to this supreme purpose as if the service were in Asia or Africa. Every science taught and every lesson in the laws and histories of God's world and providence must be instruction in God's truth.

We gratefully acknowledge the fidelity of our teachers, not only in their regard for thorough mental discipline and for high standards in school studies, but also for their conscientious and earnest missionary spirit. Our school work is not only theoretically, but practically evangelistic work all along the lines. It is a constant winning to personal Christian discipleship.

In our schools we begin with life when it is receptive. In large measure the pupils—from whatever home or condition they come—are beginning their education early. In large measure pupils are now completing their studies at an average age with which a score of years ago they began their education. In this respect emphatically, for the Negro people, the pupils themselves are a demonstration of the upward movement of their race. We are having many applications for teacherships from graduates of normal schools where the applicants are no older than those who apply with diplomas from the normal schools of the North. In many cases the graduates of our missionary institutions in educational attainments will not suffer in comparison with those of the North.

Our common schools—twenty-nine in number—are closely related to our churches in localities where there is no worthy provision in public schools. These are taught chiefly by the graduates of our normal and graded schools, who are thus carrying into darkened homes and to darkened hearts the light of their knowledge and character.

NORMAL AND GRADED SCHOOLS.

These are forty-three in number, located in strategical, central points where the public schools are inadequate or where there is no purpose to furnish the element of Christian teaching. It must not be forgotten that our teachers go to a people whose history and heredity alike appeal for a religious teaching not given in public schools. More favored communities, with the uplifting influences which everywhere attend an intelligent Christianity, may find the public schools, with their ample appointments, sufficient, but those to whom we go need that which they do not have and do not get in their homes—churches or Sunday-schools. Besides, provision for the colored children in the cities best cared for is confessedly insufficient and in most cases sadly inferior.

Our normal and graded schools in the Southern states, with scarcely an exception, receive the good offices of many educated people in the communities where they are located. We have the highest commendations of Southern observers as to the results of these schools. "Rarely, if ever," writes one of these, "have any of the students been before the courts. Never within the past fifteen years has there been a graduate convicted of any crime, nor are they ever found among those who create friction between the races." Several of these normal schools have elicited high praise from Northern educators who have visited them in the past year.

Twelve of these important schools are under the care of Negro graduates of our own higher institutions. Among these may be mentioned with particular distinction the Joseph K. Brick Normal and Industrial School, at Enfield, N. C.; the Normal school, at Albany, Ga.; Knox Institute, at Athens, Ga.; Howard Normal, at Cuthbert, Ga.; Fessenden Academy, at Martin, Florida, and the normal school at Helena, Ark. Graduates of our institutions are also in various grades of other normal schools in which the majority of the teachers are from the North.

We report three new buildings for the Joseph K. Brick Normal and Industrial School, at Enfield, N. C., through a special benevolence of Mrs. Brick; a new building at All Healing, N. C., the gift of Miss Susie Cathcart, who died at the school and whose legacy has thus perpetuated her devotion and influence. Also additions for increased accommodations at Albany, Ga., and Blowing Rock, N. C.; one new building at Orange Park, Fla.; a new school edifice at Joppa, Ala., to replace the one destroyed by fire, and a new building at Tillotson College, Austin, Texas.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

These are ten in number. Grandview Normal Institute and Pleasant Hill Academy, upon the Cumberland plateau, are institutions of great interest. They are crowded with eager boys and girls who come from meager conditions but who are fired with ambition to rise above these and to make the most of life.

Lincoln Academy, at King's Mountain, N. C., is a mountain school for the Negro people. It has a remarkable record for its work and Christian fruitfulness.

Saluda Seminary at Saluda and Skyland Institute at Blowing Rock, both boarding-schools for girls, are sending out their gracious influences as the light streams from the sun. The past school year in all these mountain schools has been one of great satisfaction.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS.

These are as follows: Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.; Straight University, New Orleans, La.; Tillotson College, Austin, Tex.

A committee appointed to visit the Southern field of the Association, in addition to their examination of several normal schools, examined four of our chartered institutions.

Of Talladega College they report: "We found a contented, earnest company of missionary teachers. We found energy and esprit de corps among the students. Moral force, mental activity and Christian vivacity appeared. The institution and all varieties of its work were thus marked. The farming is excellent, the herd is fine. We inspected classes — the college, the normal, the preparatory and the primary departments. We inspected farm work, domestic work, industrial work. There was life in it all. The students are appreciating what they receive; possibly they appreciate it more from the fact that the dormitories are filled to the utmost and that nearly as many applicants for admission were of necessity refused admittance as were received at the beginning of the year."

The Superintendent of Education for Talladega County adds his testimony, viz.:

"For nearly twelve years I have been brought into contact with the students of Talladega College, by virtue of my official relation to them as teachers. I have examined many of them and had business transactions with them. I find that their training, from a moral and intellectual standpoint, has been excellent. Talladega College is doing a good work for the elevation of the colored race. The students deport themselves well. They are honorable in their business transactions, and I have observed that the longer they remain at this institution the greater regard they have for meeting all obligations devolving upon them in their business and civil relations."

A Talladega editor publishes an account of his examination of Talladega, saying: "We went in unannounced and unexpected. In two particulars we had the same impression in all cases, viz., that the teachers are thoroughly fitted for the work and that the students show remarkable proficiency in their studies.

We quote also from our visiting committee in their report upon Straight University: "The buildings are well adapted to their purpose. The educational work and its results are so commendable that the committee hesitates in saying that the discipline is possibly too rigid. The college classes are small. Three students will be graduated from the college course this year. The apparatus for the teaching of physics and its furnishings, the collection of geological and mineralogical specimens and the way they are used is more satisfactory than we have seen elsewhere. Manual training is a distinct feature of the school. Good work is done in mechanical drafting, in cabinet and general carpentry."

To this testimony it may be said additionally that the theological department under the direction of Rev. Dr. Henderson has been and is one to be highly commended. Not a few of the most able and useful pastors in several Southern States have been prepared at Straight University.

We desire to acknowledge the particular care taken by the Mayor and officers of the city of New Orleans to protect the property from the madness of the mob at the time of the recent New Orleans riot. One of the noblest school edifices in the city—the gift of a wealthy colored citizen—was burned to the ground merely because colored children were educated there, though it is proverbial in New Orleans, as elsewhere, that education is confessedly making for peaceful relations between the races. All honest observers agree that education adds to the number of the industrious and law-abiding, and that the idle and lawless classes are the ignorant and those without the moral training of the schools. Nevertheless, the prejudice of those who fear Negro competition and the political demands of those who pander to caste, has been strong enough to cause the City of New Orleans, by vote, to lower the standard of the public schools, and reduce the course of study for the Negro, so that his instructions shall hereafter be little more than elementary. The legend of those who have made this edict is, "Elementary education for an elementary people, who are to remain an elementary people forever."

At the present time, as we all know, the prospects for the Negro people of the South are more critical than they have been since the days of slavery. Deprived of political rights guaranteed them by the Constitution of the United States, discriminated against in the matter and manner of education, with the declared intention of the State to thus forbid them equal chances in life, handicapped with all sorts of hindrances, their appeal for the kind, Christian help, which the American Missionary Association stands for, has not been so urgent since the days when they were bought and sold like cattle.

The Committee of Visitation also reported upon Tougaloo University in Mississippi. We again quote from them:

"We found the buildings inexpensive, fit and adapted to their purpose, the students impressionable, sensitive and rejoicing in hopefulness, and the teachers finding happiness in their work. The parts of the school are well fitted together. The school is very black. Though students have come from cabins, the school has peculiar marks of refinement. We were convinced by what we saw that no field under cultivation of the Association gives promise of better harvest. Tougaloo University should be wisely and generously cherished by the Executive Committee."

Tougaloo has developed a largeness of work and accomplishment which elicits the unqualified approval of the far-seeing white people in the State. Much is due to Bishop Galloway, of Mississippi, for his most helpful influence.

The report of the Visiting Committee from Fisk University recognized its high standing and attainments. Among our colleges there is none higher than Fisk. Particular mention was made of the marked ability and devotion of President Cravath in the administration of the University. The committee found that each year numbers of students are compelled to discontinue their work on account of poverty, and that in many instances such students have high ambition and marked ability. Some spend several years in working their way through.

In the death of President Cravath and of Prof. Spence during the school year, Fisk University has sustained great loss. The resignation of Prof. Dunn is much regretted. The appointment by the trustees of Fisk University of the present Dean as its special representative to secure funds for endowment, has been amply justified by his winning golden opinions in word and deed.

The Visiting Committee also reported that in their judgment "the policy which established these institutions in their several States was far-sighted. These great schools are sending out Negro teachers in large numbers and the teachers are torch-bearers." The committee also "express their respect for the spirit and method of the entire educational work, their appreciation of the organization of the schools, the quality of the teaching force, the course of instruction, and the general business management."

In Talladega College, Straight, Fisk and Tougaloo Universities there are special departments for Theological study, to prepare for the work of the ministry. In general, the record of those who have gone forth thus prepared has been one of consecration, faith and patience. Some have proved to be able leaders of entire communities to higher standards of living and greatly improved material conditions.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

As means to the end which we seek, industrial training for boys and girls is a prominent feature. We regard this as one of the important means by which our students may increase themselves in power and value and may be prepared to enter into the practical activities of life. We believe in the dignity of labor, and sedulously cultivate a practical respect for it in our industrial training. In all our boarding-schools every student is required to work in some form of industry one hour each day.

Added to this, we are teaching agriculture in its varied forms, both in theory and practice, with a cultivation of more than two thousand acres of land, on which are raised crops of corn, oats, hay, potatoes, sugar-cane, cotton, vegetables of many kinds, berries and fruits both for home use and for market. Practical training is given in the raising of cattle, horses, swine and poultry and in the dairy produce of milk and butter. In our shops technological instruction accompanies architectural drawing and lessons in the use and strength of materials, with manual training. Printing, harness-making, upholstery and cabinet-making are also taught.

For the girls are such industries of the farm as belong to their duties in life—domestic science and economics, butter-making, dress-making, millinery, and nursing. The demand for our students both as teachers and skilled workers is in excess of the supply, and every summer from June until October finds them engaged in some form of work. We hear of no idle or dependent graduates of our schools. The shiftless, the thriftless, are the untaught and uncared for. For this normal and industrial work we acknowledge grants from the Slater Fund, for Straight and Tougaloo Universities.

PORTO RICO.

Schools	2

With the beginning of the school year, missionary schools were opened at Santurce, a suburb of San Juan, and at Lares in the highlands of the district of Aguidilla. Both of these schools were experimental, as every new work must be among a people of different race, religion, traditions and mode of life. It is too soon as yet to pronounce upon the work. The schools were organized and well attended and the people of Lares were especially appreciative.

These schools are now opening with their second year. Six of the eight teachers take with them previous experience and much hopefulness in our work.

Our church work in Porto Rico has been prosecuted with great earnestness in the eastern part of the island. Our missionary has worked chiefly at the two leading centres, Fajardo and Humacao. He has also made evangelizing tours through many other places and finds many openings for successful gospel work in regions not visited by any other evangelizing agencies. There is immediate need of additional force in this interesting service.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of Churches	222
Ministers and Missionaries	147
Number of Church Members	11,602
Total additions during the year	1,235
Added in the year on profession of faith	1,023
Number of Scholars in Sunday-schools	15,293

The steady advance of the last few years in our Southern church work has been maintained during the past year. We have organized sixteen new churches, three of them in the mountain fields, and thirteen in the southern lowlands. Five churches have been dropped from the roll, all but one of them having been in our mountain work.

Thirty years ago two-thirds of our comparatively few churches were located with our schools, but it was even then anticipated that with the advance of education our church work would broaden out into many communities beyond those where we had our schools. This expectation has been more than realized. In the development of our church work during the last ten years we have planted 122 churches, of which only eight were connected with pre-existing schools and 115 were in other communities. This will undoubtedly be an increasing tendency in the future. Our great institutions as well as our lesser schools will spread their influence far and wide through the South, and many communities will call for free churches organized on the principles of morality and intelligence. The more rapid development of such churches will be the fruitage and support, as it has been the purpose of our educational work.

The object of the American Missionary Association, as defined in its constitution, is to "conduct Christian missionary and educational operations." In a large sense; all its work is educational; and it is also all missionary work. Our churches are educational; and our schools are missionary. The true education neither neglects the gospel nor supersedes it; and the real gospel takes hold of the whole man to develop him physically and intellectually as well as ethically and spiritually. As has been said, the work is one work; and because it is one it includes the ministration of the school as well as that of the church.

One of our oldest workers in the South testifies to the benefit of the Christian Endeavor movement as the agency through which the younger life of the churches has found embodiment, with ways and means for the employment of its energy. It is doing a quiet but powerful work among the colored people: "The young and aspiring, who have come by thousands to our schools from every dark corner of the South, have been trained to go forth bearing torches lighted at these centres of inspiration and zeal, into all departments of philanthropic and Christian work."

MOUNTAIN CHURCHES.

Ten years ago we had enrolled twenty-six mountain churches with an aggregate membership of six hundred and eighty-eight. We have now on our list fifty-four churches in Kentucky, Tennessee, North Carolina and Alabama with sixteen hundred and thirteen members. This large development in the past carries with it increased promise for the future. Our missionaries are laboring with hope and courage, though their present hardships are many and their difficulties serious. The ministrations of a mountain pastor usually cover from two to five different church organizations, sometimes many miles apart. To this must be added the preaching services and those held in outlying mission stations, in almost every one of which there is a promise of growth. Nearly all our missionaries feel that they cannot take advantage of the new openings which come to them to any such extent as is desirable.

Three new churches have been organized within the year, and the state and local associations have been well attended. In some of the district associations the meetings have resulted in great benefit, not only to pastors and delegates in attendance, but to the welcoming church. An evangelist whose home is in the mountains has visited and labored with quite a number of our churches during the winter and spring with good results. Many other reports of successful revival work have been received. The Christian Endeavor societies continue to supplement the church work and carry on promising mission work in outlying neighborhoods. The churches continue to develop an enlarged capacity for self-support, and every effort is used to bring them into a feeling of responsibility not only for the support but for the direction of their own work. They are furnishing a large constituency to our schools and are recognized everywhere as forces on the side of law and order and moral reform. Six years ago we opened a mission in a wild mountain region of Kentucky. This year a Sunday-school convention was held there and testimonies were emphatic as to the moral improvement of the community: "Then it was whiskey, guns, cards, and fighting and scarcely a Sunday; now quiet reigns through the whole section and Sunday is known and respected in every home. The old settlers testify to the changes and bless the day when the American Missionary Association sent its missionaries to help them."

In some of the mountain fields we have to meet the Mormon propaganda. The Mormons have some five hundred elders now working as missionaries in ten of the Southern states. They usually seek communities which are isolated from educational and civilizing influences, and they report a growing work, claiming 9,000 or 10,000 members in the South. The impression made on the mind of one of our most important workers is that the Mormon leaders in the South are more afraid of education than of anything else in the world.

FIFTY YEARS.

The report of the closing year of the century gives occasion for a brief review of our church work during the last half century. In 1850, three years after its origin, the Association was aiding twenty-nine home mission churches in the North and one in the South. In 1860, its Northern home mission work increased largely and included one hundred and forty-five churches. That year its report of church work in the South dealt almost entirely with the persecutions of its missionaries who were mobbed, fined, imprisoned and expelled from a number of Southern states. The years of the great rebellion were included in the next decade. After the war the Association felt called upon to transfer its home mission work from the North to the South, where it was opening a new and greatly needed educational work and where it had planted thirty-five churches. In 1880 the number of Southern churches aided by the Association had doubled. The end of the next decade marked a further addition of fifty-five; and in these last ten years this number has been increased by nearly one hundred; so that there are now two hundred and twenty-two Southern churches aided by the Association instead of the one hundred and thirty-seven Northern churches receiving its aid forty years ago.

The work of our central school in Santee has gone steadily forward through the year. The artesian well now provides a plentiful supply of water both for irrigation and for the protection of the school buildings. The close of the school year was celebrated by the presentation of a unique and interesting programme, presenting the development of domestic and industrial life in a practical way and including interesting illustrations of scientific forces as used in daily life. If adequate means of support could be provided, a much larger number of pupils could be cared for and trained at Santee. The last report says: "Our pupils are gathering in. We have been open ten days. In the houses for young men, for boys and for little girls, we could have twice the number we can receive."

The boarding-school at Oahe has been continued, as usual, through the year and opens the new year with much interest. Owing to ill health, the superintendent of mission work in the Cheyenne River reservation had to be away from his work for a part of the year, but he made provision that it should be efficiently carried on, and is now in personal charge of it again. His large experience in the field, combined with the confidence and attachment felt by the Indians towards him, makes his services in this field invaluable. An assistant has been provided him for the coming year.

The work at Grand River is now put in charge of the missionary who has for so many years carried it on and who was ordained to the gospel ministry in the autumn. A commodious chapel is being put up through the devotion of one of the missionaries. Increased native force is provided for this district and also for the Fort Yates district of the Standing Rock reservation. The superintendent in charge there reports that his work is very encouraging in many ways, and God's blessing is with the missionaries. In February he made a long trip to the Moreau River, Virgin Creek and Cheyenne Agency. The journey began on a day when the thermometer was twenty degrees below zero; the next day was more trying still, and the trip closed under pouring rains. At the Cannon Ball River sub-station, where nearly one thousand Indians draw rations every other week, we have large Sunday congregations in the two log mission buildings. The service here can no longer be carried on by the worker stationed six miles south, without neglecting his other work. At the Porcupine sub-agency, thirty-five miles from Fort Yates, we have a number of church members with similar need of a native worker. In that portion of the Standing Rock reservation lying in North Dakota, we have now over 150 church members; and the need is imperative for an increased missionary force.

In the reservations where our missions are situated, the government carries on, schools containing over 2,000 pupils, many of which are open to the evangelizing work of our missionaries. Increasing attention is being given to these large and fruitful fields of labor and great good is being done. One of our missionaries with regard to this work writes: "We have made it a specialty and there has been an open door for Christian work. Do impress upon Christian workers the new field now opening up in the Indian government schools. We have had great encouragement and blessing in it."

Ten years ago the Association reported sixteen Indian schools with five hundred and twenty-seven pupils. Our present number of schools is six with two hundred and eleven pupils. In view of existing conditions it will be the policy of your Committee to develop the direct evangelizing and mission work among the Indians rather than to increase the educational work or even to maintain permanently the present number of schools, it being evident that this is in accordance with the judgment of our supporting constituency.

In the winter a most interesting revival took place in the Fort Berthold field. Quite a number of Indians were received into the church and the influence of the work went far out over the prairie. The Ree Indians have raised over $300 towards the building of a church to which the Woman's Home Missionary Association added a large gift, and the Church-Building Society sufficient further aid, so that a fine church building with a bell-tower is now completed. This movement of the Fort Berthold Indians has inspired a similar movement among the Mandans, and the superintendent has been greatly encouraged by the hopeful prospect of church work in his various mission stations.

The progress made in assigning individual allotments to the Indians, thus enabling them to situate themselves in their own homes, is an important factor related to the success of our missionary work. The most recent reports as to the reservations where we are carrying on missionary work develop the following interesting facts:

In the Santee reservation nearly all the 225 or 250 families are living on their allotments and cultivating from 20 to 100 acres. In the Cheyenne River and Standing Rock reservations no allotments have yet been made to the Indians. The soil of these reservations will not admit of general cultivation. The agents report that the most industrious Indian would find it utterly impossible to support himself and family on the product of 160 acres of land. Stock herding must be the Indian industry of the future. The Fort Berthold agency reports that the 1,118 resident Indians are all living on their allotments, some of them raising large crops, while every family has a garden in which they raise a fair supply of vegetables. Their total earnings for the year amounted to almost $30,000. The unallotted lands are reserved for grazing purposes. The Crow Agency of Montana has over 1,300 allotments. As farmers, the Crows are said to be further advanced than are many of the tribes. Sufficient wheat is raised to furnish all the flour used on the reservation. The reservation contains three million acres, of which over one million acres have been recently sold to the government at $1 per acre. The Cheyenne and Arapahoe agency, Oklahoma, reports 3,295 allotments on which over nine-tenths of the Indians reside and cultivate their lands. White settlers are intermingled with them. Amicable relations exist between the races and the Indians are rapidly gaining in civilized ways and a better knowledge of the government. The chief evils reported by the agent are marriages under Indian customs, tribal control, the upholding of the medicine men and the intoxicating use of the mescal bean.

ALASKA.

When our missionaries opened the work in Alaska, nearly ten years ago, it was the only Congregational missionary service in that vast territory. They were unable either to send or receive news from their native land oftener than once or twice a year, except by the chance call of some whaling vessel. But all this is changed. Our missionaries report that their isolation is becoming a thing of the past. Formerly a period of ten months used sometimes to intervene without their seeing a white man. During the last year not a week has gone by without the appearance of some of the miners, often for relief. The hardships of some of these prospectors for gold have been terrible.

The year has been one of steady and hopeful service. It has been marked by considerable sickness among the natives. In June a plague of measles was brought over from Siberia and afflicted the whole native population and all the missionary children. This was followed by other complications, resulting in the death of no less than fifty-five of the Eskimos within the period of a few weeks. An earnest plea comes from the field for the establishment of a hospital.

The supplies for the year were lost in the wreck of the bark "Alaska," which was driven ashore at Cape Nome in June; but, fortunately, Mr. Lopp could arrange to purchase the necessary supplies for this year at Cape Nome. Mr. Lopp mentions with gratitude the vigorous and impartial administration of the law by the present captain of the "Bear." He reports the erection of a new building, to be used as a workshop, a club room and for other purposes by the natives.

CHINESE MISSIONS.

STATISTICS.

Number of Missions	21
Number of Chinese workers	15
Whole number of workers, including Superintendent	43
Number of pupils in schools	1,446
Number giving evidence of having been converted	183

The last entry in the table shows how far the mission represents a Christian community at the time of the last report. No final report has yet reached us of the number converted during the year.

The terrible events in China have not been without their influence on our Chinese missions. Many of the Christian Chinese have had their hearts torn by the martyrdom of their friends and brethren in China, and once more "the blood of the martyrs has been the seed of the church." The ranks of the Christians have drawn closer, their zeal has grown more fervid and their faith more vital. To them the anti-Christian uprising in China has been a call to renewed prayer and effort. In the end, like all other persecutions, it will redound to the progress of the kingdom of Christ.

The superintendent gives some interesting facts. The Chinese helpers who give their whole time to the work receive only $30 per month. On this scanty income they have to support not only themselves but also their families in China. They are pastors, teachers and evangelists all in one. They have learned to teach by teaching, and to preach by preaching. The exigencies arising from limited means seemed to demand a reduction in the number of these invaluable helpers; but no way could be found to do their work as they did it. The non-Christian Chinese population is being wonderfully leavened by the influence of the Chinese Christians. More than a hundred subscriptions to the new mission house in Fresno have come from those who not long since would have been called "heathen Chinese." Two-thirds of the Chinese support for this work thus came from that class who once reproached, exiled, whipped or imprisoned their relatives who ventured to become Christians.

In the work for Chinese mothers and children all the workers gather monthly at the Central mission house for fellowship and prayer. They compare notes, report progress and intermingle all with song and prayer. At one of the meetings the opposition of Christian husbands to the conversion of their wives was helpfully discussed; and it was considered how they could be shown that the worship and love of Jesus would give them better wives, more kind, more faithful and more motherly.

The stupid and cruel quarantine established about the Chinese quarter in San Francisco, with no precautions against the spreading of the supposed plague among the 15,000 residents of the district, might have had fearful results but for the self-control of the Christian Chinese, guided by their American friends. Ultimately the blunder was overruled, and great meetings were held for thanksgiving in the name of Christ. Even the Six Companies, regarded previously as dead-set against missionary work, were represented in these meetings and declared their gratitude to the Christians and their hope that great success would attend the efforts to lead their people to Christ. A series of meetings began at once, resulting in nearly fifty conversions; bringing the total, since our work was opened, to above eighteen hundred.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Through this department the Association has furnished in various ways information and encouragement to Women's Organizations. More literature has been sent out upon special request than in any previous year, and the Secretary has responded to frequent calls for personal presentation of the work. Forty-four missionaries have been assigned for support, and twenty thousand copies of field letters have been circulated. Of the receipts of the Association for the current year there came through Women's Societies $24,673.58. Thirty-four of the State organizations contributed, ten of which increased their contributions to the amount of $1,429.11. Substantial sewing help has also been received in household furnishings for more than thirty large boarding institutions and mission homes. We extend our thanks to the Women's Organizations for their valuable aid, and believe that the increased interest will result in even larger contributions for this work.

FINANCIAL.

It is gratifying to your Committee to report that the receipts for current work were $335,779.63, an increase of $38,802.81—in Donations, $13,673.83, Estates, $20,779.29, Income, etc., $218.15 and Tuition, $4,131.54. The expenditures were $335,048.87—an increase of $38,-238.03—in the Mission Fields $41,886.98 more, and in Agencies, Publication and Administration, $3,648.95 less than the previous year. The balance in hand at the close of the year was $1,601.90. This is the third year in which there has been no debt.

The past year has been the first full year of the plan of reserving a portion of the estates for future needs, when the receipts from estates fall below the average estimated for the year. The plan was inaugurated in January, 1899. For the nine months ending September 30, 1899, there was a reserve of $8,730.06. There was credited during the past year, $79,794.75, making a total of $88,524.81. The amount transferred to receipts for current work was $43,000.00, leaving a balance at the close of the year of $45,524.81. The legacies for the year were $141,436.47, which is $49,010.60 in excess of the average for the previous five years. Past experiences lead us to believe that only as there is a Reserve Legacy Fund, to draw upon to equalize legacies in years when receipts from legacies fall below the average, can the work be maintained without a burdensome debt.

The income from the Daniel Hand Educational Fund for Colored People, has been $62,499.22, which with the balance of the previous year makes a total of $81,693.55. There has been expended for educational work and student aid $69,899.51, leaving a balance on hand and appropriated $11,793.96. The work which this fund is accomplishing for the Colored people in the South is along the lines approved by Daniel Hand, whose heart while living was made glad by the reports which came to him of the good being done through his munificent benefaction under the direction of your Committee.

There has been received from the estate of Seymour Straight $354.10, the income of which is to be used for Straight University.

The total receipts for the year, exclusive of amount credited to Reserve Legacy Account, are $398,632.95, and including Reserve Legacy Account $435,427.70.

SPECIAL ACTION.

In addition to the matters that relate to the development and details of the mission fields, your Committee has given especial attention to questions of large importance bearing upon the relationship of this Association to sister societies, and the economical and efficient development of this work in the general fields. In this your Committee has sought to secure the co-operation of the friends of the Association and to incorporate the judgment of our constituents. The action taken at various meetings of the Committee, as recorded in this report, are especially important, as is illustrated by the following:

Early in the year a sub-committee of two was appointed to confer with the other Congregational Societies in reference to a possible coordination of the work of the societies, and later a conference of the Executive Committees of the six societies was held in Hartford, Conn. This conference made the following recommendation, which was approved by your Committee: "That a Committee of Nine be appointed to advance the common interests of the societies, represented in this conference to secure the fullest development of their resources and the utmost economy and efficiency of their administration; and it is recommended that any question arising between any of the societies be submitted to this Committee." Also "that this Committee consist of one member appointed by and from the Executive Committee of each of these societies together with three additional persons appointed by the six so chosen to serve until July 1st, 1901, and that it be referred to the Executive Committees of the societies whether this plan shall be continued after that date."

The chairman of the Executive Committee was chosen to represent the Association on the Committee of Nine. The co-operation of the other societies having been secured the Committee of Nine has begun its work, and certain recommendations from that Committee will be presented at the business meeting of the Association at this time.

Your Executive Committee also reports that there has been a conference of the Treasurers of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions and American Missionary Association, and a plan has been arranged by which the annual reports of receipts and expenditures of the three societies will hereafter be made uniform so far as the conditions in each of the three societies will permit.

As to the particular work over which your Committee has supervision, it was decided early in the year that a sub-committee of the Executive Committee should visit the South to consider carefully the need and the work of the Association on the field. Accordingly Rev. E. S. Tead, of Boston and, Dr. Truman J. Backus, of Brooklyn, the latter a skilled educator, made a visit to some of the principal institutions in the South during the months of March and April. They were accompanied by the Senior Secretary, and made a report from which we have already quoted, which has been of great value to the Committee, and they have recommended with great heartiness the skillful and thorough work done in our schools.

Another matter which has received the serious consideration of the Executive Committee is the division of work between the American Missionary Association and the Congregational Home Missionary Society. At the present time sub-committes from the two Executive Committees are at work upon this matter, and very soon there will be a joint meeting of the two Executive Committees to consider this question in full and to attempt to arrive at a permanent settlement.

The question of the possible extension of the work of the Association, for instance, to the Philippine Islands, has had some attention from the Committee but no action has been taken as yet.

CONCLUSIONS.

Your Committee desires to express its hearty appreciation of the cordial support and co-operation extended to the great work during the year by the constituent churches of this Association. The excellent financial showing of the year has been made possible through the generous co-operation of pastors and people in the various churches. There has never been a time in the history of the Association when the missionary interest of our churches was more marked and active than now. This tends to an intelligent and comprehensive judgment of the work. With such judgment the American Missionary Association has held the place which it merits in the gifts and cordial support of the churches.

In the presentation of the work of the churches, normal methods have been adopted. No special or extraordinary efforts have been made. But through the various recognized channels of public address and missionary literature, the work has been kept before the attention of the Christian public steadily and quietly. Special appeals often involve a reaction which is unwholesome and sometimes dangerous. The fair and proportionate offerings to which this great work is entitled have been sought for with earnestness. We desire to recognize the cordial co-operation of the pastors of our churches during the year. The responses of the churches have been generous. We recognize with satisfaction the growing tendency on the part of our Endeavor Societies and Sunday schools to the systematic study of our mission fields. In providing literature we have sought to meet this demand.

We desire to bear testimony to the valuable work of the Committee of Fifteen elected at the last National Council. In several States the plan of this Committee has been carried out, and State associations and local conferences have been efficiently organized for the larger and more intelligent support of missionary activity of the churches. Support to the mission work in Porto Rico, although not entirely adequate, has been cordial and hearty, this mission having manifestly met with the approval of the churches. There is need of enlargement of the work in this island territory, both in the increase of the number of missionaries and in the erection of buildings for the mission-schools and chapels which have become the center of evangelistic movements.

This work appeals especially to individuals who have it in their hearts to give generously to the intellectual and spiritual redemption of this people in so deep need and who have been so long neglected.

Interesting campaigns have been carried on during the year in different parts of the country. During the summer, the missionaries from various fields, were, many of them, busy telling of their work in the churches and Sunday-schools. In the interior an extensive itinerary was filled by missionaries from Porto Rico. Great interest was everywhere manifested in the work. In the Western District, an extensive series of meetings was held in which representatives from the different fields presented the interests of their work. At the close of this series of meetings the Congregational Club of Chicago made the representatives of the American Missionary Association their guests, spreading a delightful banquet, and giving the evening to addresses of the various representatives of this Association. Your Committee desires to express appreciation of this courtesy on the part of the Congregational Club.

The example set by this Club in broadening and intensifying interest in the great benevolent movements of the churches seems worthy of imitation.

Your Committee, following out instructions given at different annual meetings, have inaugurated and carried out plans looking especially to the endowment of the large chartered institutions. Fisk University and Talladega College have had representatives in the field for that purpose. This is an important and essential movement for the safe and permanent establishment of these institutions.

The American Missionary quarterly this year has presented some new features in the publication of missionary intelligence. The Department of Christian Endeavor has been maintained throughout the year. Its purpose has been to bring the knowledge of the work in these mission fields to the attention of the Endeavorers among our constituent churches, and also to present that which is being done in behalf of this work by the loyal Endeavorers throughout the country. In each issue the matter in the department is prepared by a different writer. The value of this plan has already been abundantly proven.

In the early numbers of the quarterly this year, our larger institutions were presented in illustrated articles. Later especial attention has been given to the secondary schools and churches. These articles have generally been republished in leaflet form and have gained wide and constant circulation. We desire to express our appreciation of the cordial words of commendation which have come to us in private letters and through the press in hearty endorsement of our quarterly.

In Congregational Work, the American Missionary Association has maintained its usual department. This paper sustains its place among those interested in missionary work; indeed there seems to be a general increase of interest in the support of this joint periodical of the societies. It is certainly an economical method of getting information from our mission fields before our constituents. The subscription and advertising columns so far during its history have met the expense of its publication and no support has been necessary from the treasuries of the societies. Its history seems to warrant its continuance.

With an increasing sense of the responsibility on the part of the churches for the development of this great work, with a systematic and careful study of the fields by the young people in our Endeavor Societies and Sunday-schools, your Committee enters upon the future with every confidence that these important and varied mission fields which are constantly enlarging will receive the cordial and hearty support they deserve.

The divine favor so evident in the past is a pledge to our faith of the same guidance until this great work shall be accomplished.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

BY PROF. SAMUEL T. DUTTON, CHAIRMAN.

Any one reading carefully the report of work accomplished by this Association during the past year can but be impressed with the breadth of its scope, with its immense and pressing importance, and the earnest and thorough-going manner in which it has been prosecuted. In the first place the officers of this Association have the courage of their convictions and the faith which does not hesitate to attempt to remove mountains. Their spirit and their consecrated energy is contagious and is felt to a good degree by all the missionaries and teachers who are laboring under their direction. Thus every church and every school which has been planted by this Association is a center of influence and of power. In the communities where they are located the people see and respect the zealous and consecrated manner in which their work is conducted and the upright lives of the workers. The full educational significance of these Southern schools is not expressed in the number thirteen thousand and more of the attendants. Students are constantly going forth carrying with them the good habits, the manly and womanly bearing and the high purposes with which they have been impressed. Thus there is a constant shedding forth of helpful and suggestive influence in the person of those who have enjoyed these advantages.

It is worthy of note that this Association, both in theory and practice, recognizes the saving power of Christian education while not discounting in any way the value of churches and preaching. It is understood that wherever work is done for ignorant and backward peoples, it is necessary to begin at the very foundation of character, to lay those foundations in good habits, in intelligent and skillful labor and careful and rigorous training of all the powers of mind, feeling and will. Thus it is that the schools and colleges which have been planted by this Association in the South are highly charged with the industrial element, not merely that young men and young women may be able to do useful work, but that through that work the whole personality is developed and refined and the individual is inspired and elevated by a sense of the dignity of vocational service. We are glad to find that those who have observed the working of these schools and higher institutions can testify to the care and order of the student life as seen not only in the pursuit of ordinary education, both in its lower and higher ranges, but in the various departments of industrial training. We are glad that in this field of educational effort there is a clear recognition of the social and economic needs of the South, and that young women are being cultivated in everything that pertains to home-keeping and wholesome living, while young men are being taught the elements of industry as well as specific trades which will prepare them to pass directly from school to lives of productive labor.

I must also commend this Association for fostering higher education. In every community there are two classes of people, those capable of leading and those capable of being led. We are thankful that already there have come up from the South, largely through the channels of natural ability and liberal culture, men who can take their place among the colored people as honored leaders. Some of these are here to-day and we honor them. Is there not every reason, therefore, why we should extend to the most worthy and capable young men and women of the South the advantages of the broadest and most liberal training? The kind of civilization which we desire to produce in this country calls for many kinds of men, and we may well have in the educational field a large variety of educational institutions opening to American youth the largest possible number of opportunities. Differentiation of form and specialization of function is a universal law in all nature, as well as in progress of organized society. Anything in education which restricts the growth of aptitude or narrows the opportunities of the individual does violence to this law. We need the fullest social co-operation in our community life, and this means the highest perfection of individual capacity. If we desire to make the condition of the colored people more tolerable than that of slavery, we must grant to every member of the race freedom in thought and action, a freedom guided by an educational intelligence and a confidence which comes from the ability to pursue the path in life for which one is best fitted.

But the Christian school must ever be attended and supported by the Christian Church, so we note with interest that in all parts of the South, as well as in the new field of Porto Rico, ministers and missionaries work hand in hand with teachers, holding up those ideals of life and service which the Master illustrated in his life upon the earth, and which are the only hope of a struggling race.

One can find little to criticise where there is so much of patient and sincere endeavor even though there is something of insufficiency and incompleteness in the work accomplished. The vastness of the problem only gives professional spirit and dignity to those engaged in its solution. The redemption of the race has ever been a slow process; the Almighty has thus willed it, and it could not be otherwise. I think it will be interesting to the friends of this Association to learn from future reports what attempts, if any, are made to keep informed concerning the success of those who, having been in the institutions of the Association, have passed out into a world of activity and toil. It has always been one thing to convert a man and another to keep him converted and to hold him up to new and better standards of life and service. Without definite information I am willing to assume that those in charge of Southern schools and colleges never lose sight of those who have been under their instruction, but follow them by counsel, by prayer and encouragement, so that pride, courage and ambition are never dormant, and that throughout the darkest portions of the South there are threads of Christian fellowship which bind together all those who, through personal example and devoted effort, are trying to lift up and save the less favored members of their race.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

BY REV. F. S. FITCH, CHAIRMAN.

Christian influence has sought new fields of conquest by many methods, most conspicuous among which have been the evangelistic and the educational. The proclamation of the Gospel to individuals, to villages and cities, and the ingathering of councils have led to the organization of churches; and the training and establishment of an orderly ministry, schools and colleges, publishing houses, a Christian press and literature have naturally followed, and soon all the machinery of an advanced civilization. Preaching and teaching have ever gone together, usually the evangelistic first, then the educational, ever in loving accord. The evangelistic by its urgency, its adaptability and its quick returns, has been the pioneer. The educational method testifies of a second stage of occupation. It has time, method, training, as its assured agents. The land has been seized, now it is to be subdued and made as a garden of the Lord.

Occasionally some one appears to challenge the more leisurely and indirect plan, and demands a concentration of all our energies upon a swift evangel that the world may be redeemed for Christ in a generation; but among Congregationalists such a herald becomes weary from lack of followers. Our fathers have put the school with the Church, and in new communities one gifted man has often been both priest and professor. The first president, Dr. Dwight, was called from this dual service at Greenfield Hill, Ct., to Yale College.

Our honored Association has been unique in that it has placed the emphasis of its work in the Southland upon its schools and colleges.

It found the freedmen religious, Christian, in a sense, with many churches and preachers, and a people fond of Sabbath worship, emotional, imaginative and often superstitious. Two large denominations with several lesser ones seemed to occupy the field. There was here, truly, no field for denominational propagandism. A severe intellectual discipline, high ethical standards, and a discerning of spirits were needed, and we have been called to provide them.

With due regard for all that has been done in the South since the Civil War, by resident forces, or by other helpers, from the North, it is not a blind partiality that prompts the claim that this Society has been first in the money given, the men employed—and the methods used. With its New England knowledge of the higher education it has sought to teach the teachers, to train the preachers, to make a closer union between theology and morals, between worship and righteousness and purity. Something of the tonic of the Hebrew prophet, the Puritan preacher, and the Pilgrim moralist, has thus come to the land of poetry and song, to make a complete revelation from God and an enduring brotherhood among men. The success of this side of our work is unquestioned and everywhere most highly commended; but as it is not good for man to dwell alone, it has not been expedient to separate permanently church activities from the college discipline. The graduates from our higher institutions have become preachers, teachers, business men of large influence, and women prominent in all good works. What could be more natural and reasonable than that first in college towns, then in other communities, they should crave a type of church life in harmony with the intellectual and spiritual influences which they had learned to appreciate, that a free, intelligent, self-governed, and self-respecting laity with an educated clergy should be more attractive and helpful than the extravagant physical exercises, and experiences, and visions of the ante-bellum colored churches.

These societies have been organized slowly, chiefly by local demand, in answer to special needs, sometimes by the graduates of our schools, sometimes as a revolt against the ecclesiastical despotism which has governed them from a distance both of space and of sympathy, or by reason of the intellectual and moral unfitness of those appointed as their pastors. This Association has not sought in any artificial way to increase the number, or press the activity of these Congregational churches, but to care for those that were intrusted to its stewardship.

These young churches have become feeders to the colleges and exponents of its work in many important centres, both in urban and rural communities. They have carried the industrial earnestness, the cultivated home life, the regard for woman, and the true nurture of children, into many new fields, and have done much to develop that self-respect and self-reliance which were the chief need of the freedmen, and their descendants. They have challenged and won the regard of the progressive element of the dominant race, and have proven that industry, frugality, intelligence and character can overcome caste prejudice. When a black man ceases to be brutal, dishonest and licentious, and becomes a man, his color is no more an offense than that of a resident of Seville or Lombardy.

When that which has been done for a few of the gifted sons and daughters of the colored people of America becomes a little more general the burdens of social ostracism, so grievous to be borne, and so patiently endured for a century, will be sufficiently modified to be tolerable; and a new era of hope and progress will have come to all citizens in a renewed South.

That these churches should be cared for by that Association which created an atmosphere, which made them possible, seems to your committee axiomatic. The new leaven of Christian education is simply pervading the whole lump. Nor is their ministry limited to one race. Many teachers, and not a few other white people, have found a true church home with their colored brethren. How soon, or how largely, these churches may become self-supporting we may not prophesy; but their natural dependence upon this Society for aid in erecting modest houses of worship, and in the choice and support of pastors, needs no argument. That help which comes in the way of influence and not authority, is most consistent with the genius of Congregationalism, which confesses that all we are brethren, and yet recognizes the duty of age, culture and reputation to share its good things with those whose opportunities do not keep step with these aspirations.

The last year has shown a gratifying increase in this department of our work, justifying the faith of the past and the hopes of the future.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN WORK.

BY REV. C. A. VINCENT, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

Each year of work on the part of the Association brings new and increasing reasons for gratitude to God for His leadings and blessings. Real gains have been made in the work among the Indians. The report of the Executive Committee tells of schools successfully carried on, of effective methods of evangelization, of widespread interest on the part of the Indians, of the growth of churches, Sunday-schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, of the conversion of a goodly number, of energetic work and limitless devotion on the part of the missionaries, and of material improvements that bear upon the efficiency of the stations; and this report is only a glimpse of a work the far-reaching results of which no one can clearly tell. Your committee, taking into account the successes and needs of the field, would suggest:

First. The results which have come from the means and labor expended show this to be a fruitful field. The Indian is ready for the gospel and in danger of ruin from the evils of civilization. The results of our missionaries' work are significant, whether from the point of view of the nation or the kingdom of heaven. This field furnishes opportunity for the use of money and the expenditure of strength beyond measure.

Second. It should be borne in mind by the churches that among the larger claims of this hour the cause of the Indian must not be overlooked. The number of Indians is increasing. Probably there are as many as when our fathers landed at Plymouth Rock. Their claim must not be forgotten in the presence of other things. Our responsibility here is as sacred as in the South or in foreign lands.

Third. We recognize the force of the position taken by our Executive Committee in regard to the Association's schools, in view of the work of the Government school. Still, we would urge the necessity of great care in the matter, and the importance of such schools as training centers for Christian service, and that in places they may be the most effective means in the work of evangelization. It seems to us that no less work should be done through schools, but that, as fast as possible, the force of evangelists should be increased.

Fourth. We note with joy the growing interest of the churches in the work of the Association. It has always had this cordial regard, but the increasing attendance at its annual meetings and the generous support it receives speak of a deepening interest. We recognize the part which our officers have had in this enlargement of affection and service.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHINESE WORK.

BY REV. EDWIN H. BYINGTON, CHAIRMAN.

This year has been a testing time for the Christian Chinaman in this country, as well as for his brother in China. He has heard Christian men discussing the dismemberment of his country as though it were a light thing; he has been smitten and scourged with looks of hatred on every side, as scapegoat for the sins of the Boxers; he has been bowed down by the martyrdom of his fellow believers in his native land. Has all this embittered and disheartened him, or has it quickened his higher life?

The report of the Executive Committee answers this plainly. It says: "The terrible events in China have not been without their influence on our Chinese missions. Many of the Chinese Christians have had their hearts torn by the martyrdom of their friends and brethren in China, and once more 'the blood of the martyrs has been the seed of the Church.' The ranks of the Christians have drawn closer together, their zeal has grown more fervid and their faith more vital. To them the anti-Christian uprising in China has been a call to renewed prayer and effort." This statement is confirmed by the statistics of the year. In the number of Chinese workers, 15; in the number of pupils in the schools, 1,446; and in the number giving evidence of conversion, 183, the highwater mark has been reached.

This shows that not only have the believers stood the test, and proved the genuineness of their conversion, but also that the non-Christian Chinese have been more susceptible this year to Christian influences. In the early summer an unreasonable and dangerous quarantine, which had been placed in May on the Chinese quarter of San Francisco, was removed, and a thanksgiving service was held at our Chinese mission house. This proved a notable meeting for two reasons. First, there was an expression of appreciation and good wishes from a representative of the "Six Companies," the powerful secret society, heretofore hostile to Christian effort. And then, out of this service sprang a revival which resulted in the conversion of sixty Chinamen, and in other forward steps. The seemingly immobile Chinaman is aroused to-day, and is responsive to an unusual degree. One day is as good as another for some things; but seed sowing and harvesting must be done at the right time. Now is the time to put in our best work for the Chinamen in this country.

A feature of our work deserving comment and commendation is the extent to which Chinese Christians are employed as missionaries. The number of these helpers in California has increased to fifteen. The eventual evangelization and Christianization of any people must be accomplished by converts from their own ranks. Those of other nations can give originating impulses and inspiring guidance, but that is all. If the people themselves do not take it up, it never will pass the initial stages. The reports of previous years have emphasized the large amount of money being given by the Chinese Christians in America for the evangelization of their fellow countrymen in this land and in China. That they are able to supply men as well as money, is the most hopeful sign of this work.

The employment of these missionaries is not only effective, but it also enables a little money to go a long way. The salary of a helper, who gives all his time to the mission, is $30 a month. In this way $360 certainly accomplishes notable results. Are there not fifteen individuals or churches who would be willing to increase their annual gifts to the American Missionary Association to $360, that they might have the satisfaction of sustaining one of these missionaries, and might have a knowledge of what their gifts were actually accomplishing?

Your committee desire to make one recommendation. The Chinese of the extreme West are being reached by the American Missionary Association through the California Mission. The Chinese in New York and other great cities are being gathered into special local missions for them; but there are many large towns and small cities where nothing is done. There are only a few Chinamen in each place, five or ten, but the aggregate of those thus scattered through the country must reach into the thousands. Special Chinese missions for them would be unreasonably expensive. If approached, they must be approached by the local church in connection with its regular work. This is difficult, and most, not knowing the best way to do it, do nothing at all. There are many Chinamen in these smaller places, who, probably, never have been invited to a Christian church. And if they were invited and came, we would not know what to do with them. We recommend that the Association secure the advice of those most familiar with the temper of mind of these people, and the experiences of those who have succeeded in reaching them where the number is small. Let this information be placed in the form of suggestions, and made available to the churches. When this is done, the Association, in whatever way it deemed best, could call the attention of our churches to their opportunity in this respect, and urge them to attempt the evangelization of their Chinese neighbors. This would call for the expenditure of a very few dollars, and, if effective, would result in bringing under religious influences scores of Chinamen now utterly ignored by the various Christian communities where they are abiding.

REPORT OF THE FINANCE COMMITTEE.

The report of the Finance Committee of the Association elected at the Annual Meeting in Binghamton, N. Y., October, 1899, was read by Hon. A. Lyman Williston, of Northampton, a member of the Committee, as follows:

Your committee elected for the purpose of examining into the condition and management of the treasurer's department of the American Missionary Association, attended at the office of the Association in the City of New York, on the 16th and 18th days of October. 1900, in the performance of their duties, and submit the following report:

The books and papers relating to the Financial Department of the Association were presented for the inspection of your committee, and a full statement was received from the treasurer of the methods of conducting this department.

The treasurer's report for the year ending September 30, 1900, was compared with the entries upon the books, and found to be a correct transcript therefrom. The original certificates of the auditors of the Association and of the certified public accountant, copies of which will be presented to you, appear upon the books of the Association and indicate the thoroughness of the examination made by these officers.

The records of the department appear to be kept in an orderly and systematic manner, and every reasonable safeguard seems to be provided for the security of the funds intrusted to the Association.

The books show a marked increase in the receipts of the Association during the year, both from donations and legacies.

The treasurer reports for the year, as the total receipts from all sources, $435,427.70, while for the previous year the receipts were $379,693.50, making an increase of $55,734.20, an increase in donations of $13,673.83, and in legacies of $48,843.98, and a decrease in other items of $6,783.61.

The increased income from legacies has enabled the treasurer to credit the sum of $36,794.75 to the Reserve Legacy Fnnd, thus increasing that fund to the sum of $45,524.81.

It will be remembered that this fund was established in pursuance of a plan to equalize the benefit of the income derived by the Association from legacies, which income has been found to vary more or less from year to year. Having a reserve fund to draw upon in case of unexpected diminution of the legacy income in any year, the Executive Committee is able to determine in advance upon the appropriations for the work of the Association upon a more secure basis.

The year covered by the annual report is the first full year in which the plan has been in operation. Your committee approve the plan and recommend its continuance with such changes as experience may suggest to the Executive Committee.

The Daniel Hand Fund account is entitled to special mention, both from the fact that it is kept as a separate account and by reason of the importance of the fund.

Your committee examined the entries upon the books of the Association relating to the management of the fund itself as well as the income therefrom, and find the record in all respects satisfactory and complete. The income from the fund has been $62,499.22, which, with the credit balance at the beginning of the year, makes the sum of $81,693.55 available for the purposes of the trust. There has been expended during the year $69,899.59, leaving a balance in hand at the close of the year, $11,793.96. There was expended in maintaining common, graded and normal schools, $55,634.59, and for personal aid of students the sum of $9,265, and for cost of administration of this fund $5,000. making the total expenditure as already stated, $69,-899.59.

The schools aided by this fund are located in twelve different Southern states, and the students aided are connected with these schools. The monthly reports from the schools show that the pupils receiving personal aid are almost entirely in the lower and normal grades of instruction.

The administration of the fund is left entirely to the good judgment and discretion of the Execntive Committee of the Association. The terms of the trust imposed upon the Association, both as to the original fund and the supplement thereto, by virtue of the will of Mr. Hand, are found in the deed of trust, dated October 20, 1888.

The donor designates the class of persons who are to be beneficiaries under the trust, and suggests $100 as the largest sum that should be expended on any one person in any one year, and these instructions seem to have been carefully observed by the Executive Committee.

Beyond this there is no condition imposed upon the Association, and the deed of trust contains the following clause:

"I impose no restrictions upon said Association as to the manner in which they shall use such income for the education of such colored people, whether by establishing schools for that purpose, and maintaining the same, or by furnishing individual aid; trusting to said Association and the officers thereof the use of such means in the execution of said trust as in their judgment will be most for the advantage of that class of people."

The present satisfactory condition of the fund, as shown by the books of the Association, of which a full report will be submitted to you, justifies the confidence which Mr. Hand placed in the management selected by him.

The policy of the Association to subordinate its expense account to its actual income has been maintained through the past year, and the Association is consequently to be congratulated upon being able to close its treasurer's accounts with an increased credit balance and no outstanding indebtedness.

Your committee heartily commend the management of the treasury department of the Association and believe that a careful inspection of the full report presented to you will confirm their opinion.

The successful management of the Association and the vast importance of its work in its bearing upon the well-being of our country leads your committee to invoke for the Association cordial support and increased contributions for the coming year.

In behalf of the committee, GEORGE WILCOX, Chairman.

Obituaries.

MRS. MARY T. CHASE.

Mrs. Mary Tuttle Chase, wife of Prof. T. N. Chase, of Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga., died in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dr. Kirkland, Bellows Falls, Vt., Friday, March 23, 1900. Funeral services were held in the church in which she worshiped in her childhood in Acton, Mass. The president of the university, together with the pastors of this church, conducted the service. Some graduates of Atlanta University sang from the pathetic old negro hymns. Mrs. Chase came of heroic New England stock. She was graduated at Abbott Academy, Andover, Mass., and at once entered upon the work of teaching. She was married to Prof. Chase in 1862. Two years later they went to Washington, D. C. In 1869, with her husband, she went to Atlanta, Ga., and entered upon the great work of her life in Atlanta University.

Mrs. Chase was a ready and able writer, and frequently contributed articles to the AMERICAN MISSIONARY magazine. Her heart was quick in its sympathies for those who were depressed and needy, and the heroic courage of her ancestors ran in her veins. She was always ready to defend the weak. Her loss will be sorely felt in the ranks of faithful Christian workers, of whom she was one. A large circle of friends sympathize with Prof. Chase and the family in this their bereavement.

MISS SUSIE T. CATHCART.

Miss Susie T. Cathcart passed away at King's Mountain, N. C., on Monday morning, April 9, 1900. Miss Cathcart had been a teacher at Lincoln Academy, of which her sister is principal, for several years. At the beginning of this year her health was so delicate that she did not feel that she could accept reappointment. She still hoped to be strong again, however, and looked forward to future service among the people whom she so sincerely loved. Her work has been always distinguished by ability and great personal sacrifice, and almost an abandon of devotion to those to whom she ministered. Even in her sickness she did not for a moment forget them. Her sister, Miss Lillian Cathcart, Principal of Lincoln Academy, writes of her as follows: "In her sickness she has been very patient, never other than cheerful, and always trying to spare others any unnecessary work. She has been able to take an interest in what was going on almost all the time, and to send out messages and to pray for the scholars." And so another earnest and devoted life has gone out from earth, but its influence will continue and cannot be measured by the passing years.

PROFESSOR A. K. SPENCE.

Rev. Adam K. Spence, for twenty-five years a professor in Fisk University, died in Nashville, Tenn., April 24, 1900. He was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, in 1831. His parents removed to this country in his early childhood. He studied in Oberlin and Ann Arbor, graduating at the last named institution, where he taught for a time after graduation.

In 1870 he was appointed by the American Missionary Association as the principal of the school which afterward became Fisk University. Since then scores of young people have gone forth each year from this institution bearing the signate of Christian culture. Prof. Spence laid the foundations of the Greek department in this university.

His love for music and appreciation of its finest effects amounted almost to a passion. He helped give the university a high standard of music, which has rendered it unique in Southern schools. Especially was he an advocate of jubilee music, and did much to gather these songs of quaint power and value into the archives of the university. His great interest was in the spiritual development of the students. Many revivals, resulting in the conversion of large numbers, were greatly promoted by his prayer and earnest efforts.

At the funeral, when the people passed to take a last look at the familiar face, old men and women who had known him as their friend during all these years, students and little children, gazed lovingly upon him. A large body of students went directly from Jubilee Hall to Mount Olivet, where his body was laid to rest.

REV. W. S. ALEXANDER, D.D.

The death of Dr. Alexander removes one who, in other years, occupied an important position in the mission service of this Association. Dr. Alexander was president of Straight University during a difficult and important period. He made his impression upon the institution, developing the work internally both intensively and extensively. He was an earnest student, and encouraged scholarship among the students. He became something of a bishop in the Congregational work in that state.

Dr. Alexander was born in East Killingly, Conn., August 29, 1835. He was a graduate of Yale College and Andover Theological Seminary. He held important pastorates in Connecticut and Wisconsin prior to the war. He served under the Christian Commission with the Army of the Potomac. He went abroad in 1872 and took charge of twelve free churches in Italy. Returning from that country, he accomplished fruitful missionary service in the South. In 1886 he became pastor of the North Avenue Congregational Church, in Cambridge, Mass., and served in this capacity until 1890. Since retiring from active pastoral duties he has ministered to churches in various cities most acceptably to the people and with fruitful results.

REV. HENRY A. HAZEN. D.D.

Henry A. Hazen died August 4, 1900. At many annual meetings of the American Missionary Association Dr. Hazen filled the responsible position of scribe. In 1899 he was elected Recording Secretary of this Association. His familiarity with the statistics of the denomination and his natural gift for and long experience in secretarial responsibilities fitted him admirably for this important position. Dr. Hazen entered upon the duties in connection with the Association, and had already outlined certain important methods by which the keeping of the records would be more satisfactory. He was suddenly removed from the many responsibilities which rested upon him, having only a brief warning of the great change.

He was born December 27, 1832. He received the degree of D.D. from Marietta College in Ohio. For a time he was the Associate Editor of the Congregational Quarterly, and since 1883 was responsible for the editing of the annual Congregational Year-Book.

He was Assistant Secretary of the International Council in London in 1891, and Secretary of the Committee of Arrangements for the Second International Council, held in Boston in 1899. He was upon the Board of Trustees of several institutions, and a member of historical and literary societies. He was a man of quiet manner, of cordial and hearty friendship, and of rare executive skill. He will be greatly missed, and the place which he occupied will be difficult to fill.

PRESIDENT ERASTUS M. CRAVATH, D.D.

President Erastus M. Cravath, for forty years a prominent officer in the American Missionary Association's work, died at his Northern home, St. Charles, Minn., Tuesday, September 19, 1900. His death, though sudden, was not unexpected. For twenty-five years he occupied the responsible position as President of Fisk University. He was the first and only man to fill this important responsibility. In October, 1865, he with others of the American Missionary Association's representatives undertook the founding of a school for Negroes at Nashville. Property was purchased, consisting of land on which a large hospital stood, which at the close of the war was deserted. From this humble beginning there grew the great and important institution of which Dr. Cravath was the strong and honored head.

President Cravath was the son of anti-slavery parents, and inherited the rugged heroism that stirred the heart both of his father and mother. He was educated in Oberlin College, which was, at the time of his student life, one of the most prominent centers of anti-slavery influence. He gave himself deliberately and from choice to the work among the colored people. His life has already borne large fruits in the elevation of this people. He has won the respect of the whites of Nashville and the South through the sterling qualities of his character and his large intellectual power. The colored people not only love but deeply honor him. His loss will be greatly felt, and none can fill his place. His work, however, will perpetuate itself in the lives of multitudes of young people who have gained the inspiration of a larger and truer manhood and womanhood by his instruction and influence. At the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, after a loving tribute had been spoken by a graduate of Fisk, the Fisk Jubilee choir sang one of Dr. Cravath's favorite hymns amid the hushed attention of the great audience.

OF

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

The passing of the fifty-fourth year of the American Missionary Association brings the seventeenth anniversary to its Bureau of Woman's Work. The year just closed has been one of success in some directions and disappointment in others, out of all which we gather new zeal and purpose for the future, that with God's blessing we may yet win larger gain to the work of missions.

We report contributions in the last twelve months from Women's Missionary Societies of $24,673.58. Of the thirty-four state organizations, ten increased their aid over the preceding year. Although the total is less than was reported a year ago, there is encouragement in the fact that it is not below the average of the last ten years, a period which includes the special gifts of the Jubilee year in 1896. We recognize with gratitude the earnest and faithful effort of officers in state and auxiliary societies to give the several National Societies the first claim upon their benevolence and to pledge regular annual contributions.

Forty-four missionaries were assigned during the year as special representatives of the state organizations, to whose support in the mission fields of the Association these Unions were pledged. All assignments were made in response to pledges at the beginning of the year, and in most cases the promise of support was fulfilled. The forty-four missionaries have represented all parts of the A. M. A. field from Alaska to Porto Rico, from which frequent letters have come revealing the experiences of missionary life. One hundred and thirty letters have been written, and more than twenty thousand copies of them have been circulated among the auxiliaries through the Bureau of Woman's Work. The literature of the Association has also been circulated freely. It is partly the activity in Women's Societies that has brought the new and varied leaflets of the Association, requests having come frequently for description of special schools and for leaflets adapted to children. In some cases large supplies of literature have been furnished to the state officers at their request, and they have taken great pains to send copies to every auxiliary in the state. We have also sent the Magazine, The American Missionary (Quarterly), to every contributing auxiliary requesting it.

The work has been presented personally by the Secretary and other A. M. A. speakers, officers of the state organizations not only welcoming the speakers, but themselves planning campaigns that should use the time to the best advantage in reaching the auxiliary societies. In all the work of the year we acknowledge gratefully the assistance thus given by women and their cordial co-operation in all plans for widening missionary intelligence and interest. Likewise, we have endeavored to aid in carrying out plans inaugurated by the state committee for the furtherance of the work.

In view of this close of the nineteenth century, it may be interesting to note the contrast between the early years of women's organized work and the present time, in relation to the American Missionary Association. There were local women's societies that contributed, but it was a welcome movement to the A. M. A. when women's societies began to federate into State Home Missionary Unions, so planned as to include all the National Societies in their benevolence. Women's Work for Foreign Missions had been organized since 1868, fifteen years, but limited to foreign fields, and Home Missionary appeal for money could not be made in that direction. There were in existence a very few Women's State Organizations, but they were limited to the field and work of the Home Missionary Society, and there was no entrance for the American Missionary Association there. But women throughout the country were warmly interested in the work for the Freedmen; their aid was needed, and when the Association proposed that the women of a single state should take the support of a missionary to the Freedmen, the plan was quickly adopted and a State Committee appointed to raise the funds. Other states followed with the same plan, and then, in 1883, came the unification of state work under the name of "Unions"—one woman's organization in a state—open to the Home Missionary Society, the American Missionary Association and all other home work. The ideal plan seemed to have been reached, and it was easy to draw up the specifications. But to build the structure was another matter. Those who have toiled summers and winters year after year, under trials of patience, tests of courage and perseverance, understand what really has been accomplished, and that much good work has been done that cannot be classed under "organization" or summed up in any report.

At the beginning of the movement, only seven States were contributing to the American Missionary Association upon any regular plan; now, thirty-four. Maine, Vermont, Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa then gave from $250 to $500 each; they now contribute from $1,500 to $2,000 each. The New York Union, beginning with about $300 to the American Missionary Association now has reached over $2,300. Aid from Massachusetts and Rhode Island, at first but little over $1,500 is now over $5,000. The total amount from Women's Societies to the American Missionary Association in the seventeen years since 1883 is over $335,000. Thus women in this organized work for the Kingdom have shown themselves good workmen needing not to be ashamed. Doubtless the missionary impulse in the churches during the closing years of the nineteenth century has been increased by this faithful service of women in obtaining and imparting missionary information and soliciting missionary funds.

What may be the requirements of the twentieth century we do not know, except that, as in the past, missionary work to be truly successful requires not simply workers but the best workers, not only in mission fields, but in the churches at home, and upon a well defined and systematized plan.

There have been changes in Women's methods of work, since first organized. They have developed closer union with the national societies, wiser apportionment of funds, better plans in conducting auxiliary meetings, more appreciation of the perplexities in co-operative work, hence more forbearance and sympathy. "We know more though we know little, we grow stronger though still weak."

The work of the American Missionary Association needs more money. It needs more from Women's Societies as well as from other sources. The Indian, the Chinese and Porto Rican fields, the mission fields of the South—among both colored and white—all are waiting for reapers. Waiting? We do not know; perhaps wasting without harvest. Great opportunity makes great responsibility. There is especially great opportunity in this field for work among women and children that will purify the home life.

Are we yet able to devise liberal things for the work of the Lord? As we enter the twentieth century, somewhat equipped for service, and look forward into the unknown new year, let us each stand in our place, not merely glad to serve, but glad to serve in the best way, carefully holding fast to that which is good, ever seeking a way that shall increase personal devotion, enlarge liberality, and thus more rapidly extend the Kingdom of Christ.

NOTE BY THE TREASURER.

At a recent conference of the Treasurers of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and the American Missionary Association, a plan was arranged by which the annual reports of receipts and expenditures of the three societies should be made uniform, so far as the conditions in each of the three societies permit.

REPORT OF AUDITORS.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1900, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all Bonds and other securities held by the Association, and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of the same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
JOHN E. LEECH,
Auditors.

New York, Oct. 16th, 1900.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER,
MR. JOHN E. LEECH, } AUDITORS.

New York, October 15th, 1900.

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with your instructions, I have made an audit of the accounts of the Treasurer of the American Missionary Association for the year ending September 30th, 1900, and hereby report that I have found the same correct and properly vouched; the same system and methods in every part of the wotk, which were commended in the report I made in detail to the Auditors last year, are still employed.

I proved the footings of the Cash Book, both sides, compared the canceled checks with the entries in the books, using them as vouchers for the payments; I compared the totals in the Cash Book with the entries in the monthly reports, including those of the receipts as published in the American Missionary.

I have obtained, from the several banks and trust companies, certificates of balances to the credit of the Association, and found the same, in each instance, to agree with the books of the Treasurer.

I verified the postings in the general ledger and the amounts in the trial balance sheet; I assisted in the examination of the securities of the Association, verifying the statement of the resources appearing in the general balance sheet.

I find the balance of $730.76, which represents the excess of current receipts over the payments during the year, and added to the balance of the previous year, $871.14, makes a total of $1,601.90 to the credit of this account.

Respectfully submitted,
FREDERICK C. MANVEL.
Auditor,
Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT.

J. E. ROY, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

ITS BOUNDARY.

It is the same as for the last several years—from Chicago to San Francisco, north of Mason and Dixon's Line. It embraces sixteen states and three territories, with 2,477 churches reported in the Year Book, while those beyond two thousand are practically ineffective.

ITS OFFICE.

In the Y. M. C. A., Building, the office, with its library and current literature, is ever a seed repository and a seed sower, a place for receiving friends in the fellowship of the work.

ITS TOURING.

A notable tour was one made by the District Secretary, Mrs. Ida Vose Woodbury, the assistant of the Boston office, and Rev. G. W. Moore, Field Missionary at the South. It took in five weeks of April and May, with forty-six churches on the itinerary, with Sabbath field-days at Dubuque, Sioux City, Kansas City, Mo., Kansas City, Kan., St. Louis and Chicago, and with four State Associations visited, those of Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Illinois. The A. M. A. was on the program of all these bodies; two of them each using two of us to speak and two calling for three. On the tour seventy-one addresses were made.

Chicago gave us a signal round-up. It had a Sunday field-day with ten addresses received in eight churches. Then on the following Monday night the Chicago Congregational Club entertaining the members of the General Association of Illinois at a banquet in the Second church of Oak Park, made the American Missionary Association its special guest—the Hon. Thos. C. MacMillan making an address of welcome and then introducing our speakers. These were, besides Mrs. Woodbury and Mr. Moore, Dr. C. J. Ryder, Corresponding Secretary and Editor, of New York, and Rev. Mary C. Collins, of the Grand River District of the Dakota Mission, both of whom had come on to aid in the grand occasion of Sunday and of Monday night. The Jubilee Singers were also present to add to the spiritual uplift by their testimonies as well as by their marvelous songs. After the close of this series, Mrs. Woodbury went on under the direction of Mrs. Sydney Strong, President of the Illinois W. H. M. U., to address churches and ladies societies in the central part of the state, enough to make up a total of 98 appointments within the seventy-eight days of her double tour. What politician on the stump could go ahead of that? And Miss Collins went on to Ohio, by whose ladies she is supported, with a similar series of her impressive and fruit-bearing addresses.

ITS FIELD WORK.

During the year the District Secretary has attended and spoken before eight Associations and has delivered eighty sermons and addresses, one of which was at the Commencement of the Ladies' College of Rockford, Ill.

ITS MISCELLANIES.

The District Secretary has himself used the lantern but a few times during the year; yet his four A. M. A. sets of slides for circulation held at the office, have been used a great deal by pastors who have the possession or use of a lantern outfit; and the two sets kept in Northern California by Rev. W. W. Scudder, of Alameda, and the two in Southern California kept by Rev. J. H. Williams, of Redlands, have done good service at the hands of pastors. For this year seventy-nine pastors had accepted service as representatives of the A. M. A., in as many of the District Associations. Some have written letters to their churches; some have secured exchanges to effect the representation of the work; some have come upon the program of their respective bodies—all such enhancing the intelligence of the brethren upon the work and so increasing interest and contributions. The Lincoln Birthday Memorial was exploited by furnishing a thousand Sunday-schools with Lincoln Day Exercise, the circular letter and other literature, as well as Lincoln subscription cards. The income from that day was somewhat reduced by the bringing in of another special day service immediately before it. The process of federation, so much now looked to, will probably adjust matters so as to avoid such collisions in the future. Toward the close of the Chicago Seminary year the secretary of its Missionary Society made a call to request that twenty-one packages of our literature containing each a dozen or more pieces of the same should be put up for that number of seniors who would take them out with them to be used as ammunition in their work. The lady helper as a part of her regular service made the selections with great carefulness and the seminary secretary called to take them away in three or four armfuls. That was good seed-sowing—a grand idea of the young men who are going forth upon the gospel campaign.

ITS PORTO RICO WORK.

The District Secretary through the year has kept this new field to the front, reporting its progress and making appeal for its advancement. Within the year one gentleman within this district has paid $600.00 to carry the salaries of two of the Porto Rico teachers, not including transportation, board and incidentals; and a lady in Illinois has paid the same amount for two other teachers. The man is Mr. Geo. M. Kellogg, of Missouri, who lives in a town where there is no Congregational church and makes his living as a florist, giving this in honor of the memory of a beloved daughter deceased; and the lady, Mrs. Harriet E. Baughman, is a widow. What more beautiful memorial of a daughter or of a husband?

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT.

G. H. GUTTERSON, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

During the year ending September 30, 1900, considerably more work in all the departments having to do with the diffusing of information and the collecting of money was accomplished in the Eastern District than during the preceding year.

More money was received at this office. 6,659 letters were sent out, of which 3,118 were personal ones.

49,153 pieces of literature were distributed, this being an increase over last year of 3,600.

4,545 persons called at the office to transact business connected with the office and to make inquiries respecting the work. The records indicate that 792 more people came in for these purposes than last year.

47 Conferences, State Associations and other conventions have been attended, and addresses on the work of the Association delivered. This is a very important department, showing that 16 more such meetings were visited this year than last.

139 different churches in the district have been visited by invitation of the pastors, 35 more than during the preceding year. 351 public addresses have been made by those who represent the Association in the Eastern District, which is an increase of 35 over last year. There is a steady and increasing demand for the literature issued by the Association, also a constant use of the stereopticon slides illustrating the work. This is encouraging in view of the fact that all regular giving must be based upon the information as to what the Association is doing in its various fields.

Jesus Christ and Social Progress.

SERMON

BY

NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS,

TEXT.—"Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom," "Preach the Gospel to every creature." "At His name every knee shall bow."

Those scholars who have reviewed for us the achievements of the nineteenth century have characterized our era as an era of invention, tools and an increase of wealth. In tracing the progress of the common people, the historian exclaims: What engines! What ships! What factories! What reapers and looms! What comfort and conveniences! By way of pre-eminence, they speak of our century as a century of happiness and prosperity for the common people. But the material gains of the century are the least of our achievements. When long time has past, this century will be spoken of as the century of missionary enthusiasm, when for the first time Christianity took on world-wide relations and the knights of the new Christian chivalry organized a new crusade against ignorance, vice and sin, journeying into every island and continent for the promotion of the holiness and happiness of society. Indeed the most striking fact of our era is the waxing name and fame of Jesus Christ and the growing influence of Christianity among the peoples of the earth. As never before, the great men and movements of the world are hastening to do Christ reverence. All the modern reforms and philanthropies seem but attempts to realize Christ's teaching and example in outer institutions. Because He exhibited childhood as having infinite worth, men are making schools and colleges attractive for all young feet. Because he loved the poor, men are climbing the tenement house steps and in many a Whitechapel region are found social settlements for those for whom Christ died. Because he included all races, white and black, red and yellow, in a love that embraced every creature, His disciples have united in a world-wide movement for the human race. Society feels that we can scarcely paint in colors too rich the worth of this divine being, made in God's image and for whom Christ died.

In the interest of the happiness of God's earthly child, therefore, schools are made wise, laws are made just, governments are made gentle, homes are made beautiful and happy and the principles of life eternal are brought unto those who sit in the region and shadow of death. Indeed all the great forces of the time, literature, art, science, reform, commerce and wealth, are captives in Christ's triumphal procession walking up the hills of time. If, twenty years ago, it seemed as if the tides of faith were ebbing away to leave the Church stranded on the beach, now the tides are returning in a flood, whose volume and depth man's plummet may not sound. Gone the era of criticism and destruction. Gone the era of analysis that pulled in pieces the old poems, old histories, old creeds. But if the new astronomy has come, men are warmed by the same old sun. The psychology is new, but reason, memory and judgment are what they were when Plato thought and David dreamed. Now that the creeds are being changed, men see that the obligations of conscience and duty and man's relation to Christ and God remain unaltered. Moreover, men now feel that the era of criticism was an era of mediocrity and second-rate intellect. Of necessity, the age of Pope analyzes, annotates and comments. Conscious of slender intellectual gifts, it dissects, criticises and pulls in pieces the work of greater minds. Later came the era of Robert Burns and Wordsworth, when the tides of genius rose to the flood, and the creative era was manifest, not in analysis, but in outburst of immortal song. And there are the best of reasons for believing that the critical age is now passing into the creative. There is a new spirit in letters, in arts and philosophy and religion. The pendulum that worked far toward doubt, is now swinging back toward faith. There is a growing interest in the permanent elements and great simplicities of Christianity. Men have discovered that he who picks a flower to pieces, loses it. And they have also found out that God made the lily and the daisy to mean, not a mass of petals, torn part from part, but rather types that interpret His love and care and also hours of rapturous delight. And with the new faith has come a new enthusiasm. Men perceive that the hour is strategic for the Christian Church. The old prejudices of races, black, yellow and red, have given way. The old walls and barriers built by heathen hands have fallen down. Races in the Arctics and races in the tropics alike stretch out eager hands toward the Christian teachers, and the young men and women of our colleges and schools, recognizing the open door of opportunity, have come forward in regiments to unite in this new crusade, against every form of fear and ignorance and sin. And as one regiment in this great forward movement, the American Missionary Association is now assembled to emphasize the universal need of mankind, and to lift up those evangelical truths that do not separate the Church into denominations, but unite the denominations into a single Church—the fatherhood and providence of God, the one Saviour—Jesus Christ, the one law—the law of love, the one book—God's word, the one faith—God's unfailing mercy, the only symbol of redemption—

the cross of Jesus Christ, the one destiny—immortality; and with universal accord we recognize the schoolhouse, the printing press and the home and church, the lecture hall and library as the springs of social progress. We believe that the hope of our eager and commanding society is diffusion of manhood. We seek to enrich the reason that men may write books to refine the tastes, that men may paint pictures to develop the sense of justice, that men may write noble laws and then obey them; to quicken the spirit of invention and industry that men may create tools and increase wealth for the people. We believe that there is no stimulant toward civilization without, like the truths of Christianity that nourish and strengthen manhood for the soul within.

In view of the triumphs of these heroes of the new civilization, thoughtful men look forward to the world-wide triumph of Christianity, and mark the universal elements in the Christian religion. Before our thought Jesus Christ stands forth the only teacher whose heart was large enough to include a race and a world. When a reformer or teacher enters the scene, the listeners always ask the man what ends and methods he proposes. It is a singular fact that every other religious teacher is exclusive and limits his plans to his own race. Those old centers of wisdom named Thebes or Athens or Rome never exchanged a single psalm or hymn of prophecy. Indeed, in the circles of Athens, in which Plato moved, it was a matter of boast with the patrician that he had never polluted his feet by visiting a foreign city, or conversed with a foreign tribe. Even the wisest of the philosophers were men of the grove and the porch. They withdrew themselves from the rude herd. They made strong the barriers of exclusiveness. They held their talents and truth in the interests of the elect and wealthy few. Not one burst through the barriers of racial exclusiveness and became a messenger to the world. Even the sibyls of the Imperial City hid themselves in caves, to which only kings, warriors, and senators might come. To the far East dwelt a race blessed with one of the earth's wisest teachers—Confucius. But his people built their historic wall, prided themselves upon the title of the Celestial Empire, and looking over their wall either in hatred or covetousness they counted those who dwelt beyond dogs and pariahs. The people of India are Aryan, and yet their civilization seemed to have as a single aim the building a wall of race that was so impregnable and unyielding as to forever exclude all outsiders. Even in Jerusalem, where had dwelt such a lawmaker as Moses, such a poet as David and such prophets as Elijah and Isaiah, the exclusiveness narrowed more and more until the hatred of foreign races was organized into the temple that fenced off the foreigner in an outer court, and by a system of successive walls held at bay any Gentile who might desire to pry into and wrest away the precious treasures of the Jewish faith.

And so the nations went forward, building high the barriers of division and enlarging racial hatreds and jealousies, while the centuries came and went again. The Buddhist devotees stood on the banks of the Ganges, but the great river sweeping toward the sea carried no message to the islands that lay beyond. The trade winds that blessed Palestine carried northward to Damascus the rich perfumes of the citron and the olive groves, but carried no law and no litany and comfort and instruction. Even Plato's city flung forth no poem or philosophy that should inspire and enlighten a world. At last Jesus Christ entered the earthly scene. Before His vision all horizons fell away and all barriers dissolved. The race was one, for His message was to all nations. His teaching had to do with universal elements, the everlasting gospel. Too long had wise men withheld their wisdom from the multitudes floundering for want of a leader. Too long had the oracle been reserved for the generals alone. Too long had priests loved solitude and hated universal service. And over against this social, political and religious exclusiveness, Christ proclaimed a universal religion, generous, democratic, for empire and republic alike, prince and pauper, for rich and poor, for every clime and shore.

One of our scholars has called Christianity a "beautiful civilization," and our historians with one accord confess that the life and teachings of Jesus Christ represent the most powerful intellectual stimulant that has ever entered into human society. The cross of Christ is the dynamic of social progress. With that cradle at Bethlehem and the ascent at Olivet began a new era for mankind. As the forest children in the sixth century floundered through the snowdrifts and over the glaciers of the northern slopes of the Alps, to find themselves upon the sharp peaks from which they descended into the sunshine, the vineyards and the rich cities of Italy, so the historian struggles through the coldness and barrenness of those frigid centuries that led up to Bethlehem, and looks forward to the long centuries enriched by new sympathies, new laws, new reforms, new forms of justice, beauty, goodness and government. Certain changes have taken place in society. How shall we explain those changes? Standing upon the seashore when the tides come in and the waves pile up, arching in masses of crystal splendor, we explain the billowy hosts by the grip and pull of the vast orb of night. When our earth in its flight is hurried forth in an orbit measured only by millions of miles, and rushing forward as if to leave the sun forever, feels a gentle restraint, checks its flight, slowly turns and wheels like a well-trained steed, we explain the sublime event by the great central orb that controls the planets as a charioteer his steeds of the desert. And in the miracles now being accomplished in the fields by those wonder workers named sunbeams, we look for a philosophical explanation. Here is a clod that but a little time ago was a mass of frost and ice, that has been dissolved into a small heap of rich alluvial foods. And in the soil there is a root that stirs after its long sleep, pushes forth a feeble life and lifts up the stalk and flower. When other forces of light and heat embroider the land from sea to sea with those rich textures named violets, pastures, harvests, forests, we explain that vegetable miracle by sunbeams that spring from this great orb of day, whose source of heat and light seems immeasurable and whose splendor consumes man's senses like a moth. And if, for the astronomer, the sunbeam is a solar bridge on which he walks into the orb from which the warm beam streamed, so are the laws, reforms, knowledges, arts of the last nineteen centuries trackways along which the historian moves to find all the paths converging toward that majestic figure who stands on Olivet, bidding his followers go forth and disciple the world. And as the sun is more than all earth's harvests, the living Christ is more than all the effects wrought in society. What majesty and massiveness in Christ's character! What splendor and beauty of life! What wonder words He speaks! What miracles in His brief career, accounting for the miracles that He hath wrought over tribes and peoples. What all-pitying, all redeeming-love! What tenderness to childhood! What pardon for publican and prodigal! What tranquillity in the face of death! He blessed childhood, and gave the babe into the arms of the teacher, who founded schools for the child's instruction. He unveiled youth as made in the image of God, and for such a one libraries and lecture halls were established. He was an almoner of universal bounty toward the lame, the halt and the blind, and from His followers received the hospitals and asylums for the children of misfortune. His gentle justice made harsh government humane. His just gentleness lent righteousness to rulers and governors. He portrayed the immortal life as a paradise, indeed. For His worship no songs could be too sweet; for His face no art could be too high; for His temples no cathedrals could be too lofty. To describe His saints and seraphs no ceilings could be too lustrous and no colors rich enough to paint His glorious figure. The philosopher said the secret of man is the secret of the Messiah. But the historian goes further and affirms that the springs of all progress and civilization have been in the life of Jesus Christ, with His universal sympathy, revealed in the command to disciple all nations, and His emphasis of the permanent elements in giving to His followers an "everlasting gospel."

In the hour when Christ approached the end of His career, He assembled His disciples and committed into their hands all those interests that were most precious to Him. In His sublime forecast He outlined His ideal for a redeemed race and a transformed world, and that ideal leaped over all racial walls, swept in all peoples, journeyed across land and sea until it included all islands and continents. Like an advancing summer it swept on beyond the hills of Palestine, and included that city of art and culture, with its narrow racial ideals for Grecians alone. It moved on, and included that imperial city of law, that hitherto had known an ideal for only Roman citizens. Journeying ever forward, it included all individuals, white or black, all interests, social, political, spiritual, and staid not until it secured a transformed world. For Christ's ideal is under all the races and civilizations, as the solid foundations of our earth underlie and support all physical towns and cities. Christ's ideal of a unified race was over all men like the blue sky that arches all islands and continents. Going away, He emptied an ocean of love and hope upon the world, and caused our earth to roll out of darkness into light. And the response of His disciples to this movement, that was to be world-wide, was immediate and unconditional. With matchless enthusiasm these young knights of the new chivalry leaped into the arena. Beginning at Jerusalem, they scattered in every direction, marching forth like columns of light. When twenty years had passed, Matthew was 2,000 miles to the southwest, and, standing in the public square of a city in Abyssinia, the mob pressed in upon him, and he "fell on death." At the same time, Jude was 2,000 miles to the northeast, where a white-skinned mob crucified him, and later wept beside his tomb. James the Less journeyed east into Judea, and there met his executioner, as Paul did, journeying to the west. When two score years had passed, all the disciples save one had achieved a violent death, and blazed out paths in the dark, tangled forests. And when the torch fell from the hands of these heroes, their disciples snatched up the light and rushed on to new victories.

Now that long time has passed, history has summarized the influence of those early missionaries. If we ask who destroyed the great social evils of Rome, Lecky answers, "the Christian missionaries." Asking when the rude tribes of the northern forests began to be nations, Hallam answers: "When Boniface crossed the Alps on his Christian mission." Asked for the beginning of England's greatness, Green tells us the story of the two Christian teachers who, one winter's night, entered the rude banqueting hall of King Ethelbert. English literature begins with two monks, Gaedmon and Bede, John Morley affirms; while, if we journey to the west, we hear our minister to China, Mr. Denby, saying: "We owe the new commerce and the 'open door' in China, not to our diplomats, and not to the influence of such a man as Lord Beresford, but to the missionaries." For savage races are poor traders. A single group of islands near Australia last year exported $25,000,000 to England—a group of islands that two generations ago were savage, and without any trade whatsoever. When by education a hundred new wants are opened up in each of China's 300,000,000, then the commercial value of their trade will be multiplied a hundred-fold. The true commercial travelers, therefore, are Christian educators, publishers, physicians and moral teachers. And the present missionary campaigns in Africa and Asia are the two most important commercial events in the century. But all this is only a secondary and incidental result of missions—the primary aim is to unify our race, to transform all individuals and to carry all peoples up toward wisdom, and righteousness and love, until the kingdom of heaven comes upon earth.

It has been said that nothing fascinates listeners like the tales of eloquence and heroism. Men are charmed by the story of some orator who faces the hostile mob, rebukes his enemies, inspires, chastises and conquers them. Men love to hear of the soldiers who leap into the breach, and the martyrs who die that another may live, and the generations weave wreaths for the hero's tomb. But the history of heroes and of heroism knows nothing that surpasses the fortitude, the endurance and the self-sacrifice of these knights of the new chivalry. What book of warriors can surpass certain chapters in the life of Francis Xavier, the missionary to Asia? He was the heir to castle and estate; a brilliant scholar in the University of Paris; he was pierced by the word of Christ, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He went forth, resigning to others his castle and lands. He took passage on a ship bound for India, and there toiled, subsisting upon the scraps and crusts given to him by others, as nurse for the sick soldiers and sailors. Entering the villages of India, he rang a little bell and called the people together. His face was gentleness and benignity; his life, service; his eloquence, simplicity, holiness and love. When the plague broke out, he went from hut to hut, a physician who prescribed remedies, a nurse who washed their garments, a friend fulfilling every sad office, a consoler, pointing the dying to the cross of Christ. Imprisoned oft by rulers, beaten and kicked about by mobs, always in danger of eating poisoned food, he went forward amidst incredible dangers. He helped a rajah save his city in time of hostile invasion; he reformed the guilty city of Malacca; amid squalor, disease, worn by fever, he preached until his voice became a whisper, and baptized until his hand dropped with weariness. And, having journeyed through China, he looked eagerly toward Japan. Attacked by fever, he was laid upon his blanket upon China's seashore, and, lying there, under the rain, on a cold winter's day, saw the signals of release and, dying, whispered, "In thee, O God, have I trusted; I shall never be confounded."

And here is Patteson, the brave, pure Eton College boy, refusing ease and high honors in England's university to go to the South Sea Islands. One day he leaves his servants in the boat, swims through the surf toward a group of painted savages, who meet him with war clubs, and put him to death. And here is Dr. Paton, the hero of the New Hebrides, who saw his companions murdered, who lay upon the ground with his hands bound, looking up at the war clubs of cannibals, and by sheer fortitude conquered his murderers. And he has transformed twenty of those great islands, until each has its homes, one great central school, one church, with the beginning of all those instruments that make for our civilization. And what shall we say more of Livingstone, dying in the heart of Africa; of the brave commodore, slain by savages in Madagascar; of Mackay in Uganda. They have been in perils of the sea, in perils of the wilderness, in perils of poisoned arrows, in perils of war clubs, in perils of wild beasts, in perils of dungeon and fetter. And out of all these dangers they have found deliverence and victory. The astronomer points to the single star in the sky, with awful spaces of millions of miles to the next star. But the sky of our century is sown with these shining orbs named heroes and heroines. The old knights marched forth in the name of the imaginary wrongs of some woman, but these new knights journey forth to destroy injustice that is real and degrading, and in the name of universal liberty. Oh, wondrous spirit, the spirit of the Christian missionary, whose greatness dwarfs all our deeds into petty littleness, of whose characters and achievements our world is not worthy.

Of Christianity we may say, the past at least is secure. Some there are, however, who question what is its future. Is Christianity declining, or is it waxing? Has it the seeds of universal progress, or has it exhausted itself by former labors, and become old and decrepit? Plainly, that religion alone will survive that is aggressive, full of youth and enthusiasm, and that every day plans new campaigns. Confessedly, there are only three systems of religion that can, in any sense, be termed competitors of Christianity. Here is Confucianism. But this religion itself declares that its golden day is in the far away past, and that it only remains for the Chinese people to look backward to Confucius, to cherish no faculty save memory, and have no worship save their dead ancestors. The old Confucianism is big with destruction, and totters toward its fall. Here is the religion of India, with its untold millions of gods and idols. But, having tested democratic institutions for a century, the world's best thinkers now feel that the caste system, emphasizing class distinctions, is false in philosophy and false in fact, and ruinous in progress. Therefore it has been said that every Christian college in India smashes a million mud idols, and the religion of harems, child marriages and caste, is doomed. Mohammedanism remains—but Mohammedanism unveils God's throne as iron, and His arm as blood. Its method of conquest is the sword. Its missionaries are warriors, and its heaven is a vast harem, where each soldier is to have a hundred wives. The bald savagery of Mohammedanism is revolting to the races that believe in law, liberty, tools and progress. But Christianity alone has the golden age before it. It is said that it is nineteen centuries old, and will soon be outgrown. But all abiding and permanent things are old. Gravity is old, as old as that hour when swirling fire-mist broke away from its central sun. The sun is old, antedating even the hour when the morning stars sang together for joy. Our earth is old. Millions of years have passed since with ice-plow and fire-roller God began to prepare our earth-house as a home for His children. Right and wrong are old; as old as the throne of God. Love is old; as old as that Eden in which affection between the first father and mother made the wilderness to be a paradise. We have journeyed away from our ox-carts to the palace car, but man still hungers for bread. We have exchanged the mud hut for the beautiful house, but the home and love remain. We have outgrown old books, old theologies, old creeds, just as we have outgrown old astronomers, old medicines, old tents. But God abides, as everlasting as the summer sun, and Christ's love is as eternal as the summer; and the Christian religion hath foundations that are permanent, that nothing can overthrow. And the new enthusiasm represented by ten thousand eager students in our colleges and universities, now ready to start to Africa and India and China and South America, the wealth flowing like a golden river to support these Christian heroes, the hospitals, the schools, the colleges, the printing presses, the churches, the manual training schools, the exhibits in these dark centers of all that makes for an American and Christian community, means the transformation of heathen lands and the bringing in of a new era when there shall be a federation of the world, based upon the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man, the divine book, God's word, one Saviour, one Redeemer and Teacher and Master, Jesus Christ; one law—the law of love and sympathy; one method—education, through the schoolhouse and press and church, and one end, to bring the kingdom of God back to our sinning and troubled earth.

Who shall tell the story of Christ's transformation of society?

Among the pictures in the Tate gallery, in London, is a series of etchings by Dante Gabriel Rossetti. In a rich oriental banqueting hall are assembled the revelers. The walls are hung with tapestries, the floors are glorious with marbles, a fountain plays in the court. But the center of the group is Magdalen, crowned with her glorious beauty, her golden hair flowing in waves of sunshine over her shoulders. Her hair is garlanded with flowers and she exhales a radiant beauty. But in the moment when her laughter and song are at their highest, Christ stands in the door and lifts His large eyes upon the girl in the moment of her radiant pleasure. He looks at her with eyes that pierce not, that do not burn as if searching her out; He looks as one who knows all and understands all and still can pity. And His look sets her pulses fluttering with strange excitement and mysterious feeling. Suddenly the contrast stands out. With eyes big with wonder the beautiful girl rises from her couch, beholds the Christ, calm, collected, majestic, divinely pure; and around her men, passionful, leering as they look. And while, like a wounded bird, she looks from those who compass her destruction to one who would become her Saviour, the mists pass from before her eyes. In that hour the palace becomes a hovel. She tears the wreaths from her hair and grinds them beneath her feet. She flings away those rings of ruby as though the jewels were red drops of blood. She tears away the silken garments. When another day has come and night hath followed, she has exchanged her soft, perfumed palace for a garret, and for silken robes hath put on coarse, black cloth. Weeping, she creeps in the shadow of the night into Simon's house and, stooping, kisses the hem of Christ's garment, while He pities and pardons, and her tears dissolve her woe. O, beautiful etching and story divine, telling us how Christ, with majestic form, hath stepped from city to city and continent to continent. Standing in the market place, cities have put away their vices and crimes; harems have become homes; while He looks, the king hath put away his cruelty and become a father. Looking toward the legislative hall, the jurist hath softened his heart and become gentle and humane. Standing at the door of the prison and lazar house, men have put away falsehood and squalor and comforted those for whom Christ hath died. He hath touched marriage and it has become a sacrament; He hath touched the book and it has become wise; He hath touched the laws and they have become just; He hath touched art and music and they have become high and pure; He hath touched wealth and made riches splendid; He hath touched the library and lent it refinement; He hath touched eloquence and made it high and exalted; He hath touched religion and made it full of love and sympathy; He hath touched the cradle and the babe has become God's child; He hath tonched the grave and it has become the door into life immortal. His love is universal; His truth is everlasting, and His kingdom shall have no end!

BRIEF HISTORY.

Organization. The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854, its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees and in North America among the Indians.

The home department embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave states and in Kansas.

The missions in the slave states gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

Among the Negroes. The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of Negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk, the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo.; and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri and Kansas.

Close of the War. Freedmen's Bureau. Boston Council. The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the Northern states. It also sol cited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861, to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,769 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

Permanent Educational Institutions. It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains as higher institutions Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana, and Tillotson College, Texas, together with forty-three normal and graded schools and twenty-nine common schools scattered over the South and among the mountains, five schools among the Indians, twenty-one among the Chinese on the Pacific Coast, one in Alaska and two in Porto Rico.

Theological departments also have been established in Howard University, Fisk University, Talladega College and Straight University. Industrial instruction first began in Southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools, and has been constantly extended. Talladega College and Tougaloo University have large farms. In all the larger institutions and normal schools, mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

Church Planting. Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions, the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 243, located in nearly all the states of the South, among the Negroes, the mountaineers and the Indians, with most fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor Societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Conferences or associations have been formed, and of these there are now nine, designated as the Conferences of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Mountain Work. The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations or schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and sweeping nearly across both states; in Kentucky, at Williamsburg, Pleasant View, Corbin, Grey Hawk, Combs, and Campton; in Tennessee, at Jellico, Pomona, Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Bon Air and Mill Creek; in North Carolina, at Saluda, Whittier and Blowing Rock; in Alabama, at Nat (Bending Oaks) and Joppa. The Sunday-school work in these districts renders most efficient service in laying the foundation for churches and day-schools, and in promoting the cause of temperance.

The Indians. Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions at S'kokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White Rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D., the Crow Agency, Mont., and the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Agency, Oklahoma. The churches number twenty-one, with a membership of 1,303. Schools number six, with 311 pupils. The out-stations number thirty-four.

Alaska. Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It is now entirely supported by the special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of the missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

Chinese in America. The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of workers is forty-three, and schools twenty-one, located at Berkeley, Fresno, Fruitland, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Petaluma, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Vernondale, two at Santa Cruz, and three in San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

Porto Rico. The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessings of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth, and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island.

Two schools have been established; one is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work; the other is at Lares, in the western portion of the island. The evangelist holds a large circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island, where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field.

Bureau of Woman's Work. Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of women's aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

Publications. The American Missionary magazine is the quarterly issued by this Association. It is published during the first month of each quarter. It contains fresh information from the mission fields, the reports of importance of various committees and other matters of value to those studying these great mission fields. The magazine is published at fifty cents per year. It is generously illustrated, and presents in new form fresh material in each issue.

Large numbers of interesting leaflets are also published by this Association. These leaflets bring the most recent information obtainable and must stir missionary enthusiasm. They are issued for general use, and are distributed as desired among the constituents and those interested in the great national and religious problems. Communications should be directed to the editor.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of this Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting five members shall be elected for the full term of three years, and such others as shall be required to fill vacancies.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of this Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment shall be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting at an Annual Meeting, notice of the amendment having been given at a preceding Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-eight of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-two of the Laws of 1886 and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple, and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the City of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and in other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and are hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled: An Act relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meetings on the second Tuesday of each month, at 3.30 o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular meeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Com-

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

mittees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum:

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Missions.
3. A Committee on Support.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his disability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires, direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Missions to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to it desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the missionary and educational work of the Association. It shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to it, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON SUPPORT.—It shall be the duty of this Committee to meet at least once in two months to consider methods of promoting a missionary spirit throughout the churches, and of securing from the churches and friends of missions by addresses and publications, and through the various district offices and agencies and otherwise, the amounts required for the support and constant enlargement of the work, and to report to the Executive Committee such recommendations as shall seem desirable.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the appropriate Committee according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient work of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.
5. Reading the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Missions. (3.) Support. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

FIFTY-FIFTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-Fifth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the house of worship of the First Congregational Church, Oak Park, Illinois, October 22, 1901, at 2.45 o'clock in the afternoon, and in the absence of the President, Rev. Frederick A. Noble, was called to order by Vice-President Rev. Washington Gladden, of Ohio.

The Fisk Jubilee Singers sang, and devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. Lewellyn Pratt, of Connecticut.

Organization.

Because of the absence of members of the Nominating Committee, Rev. Henry T. Sell, of Illinois, and Mr. Ralph Emerson, of Illinois, were added to that committee.

Program Adopted.

Upon motion, it was voted to adopt the program as printed.

Business Committee.

The Nominating Committee named the following persons for the Business Committee and they were elected:

Rev. William E. Barton, Hon. T. C. MacMillan, Rev. Sydney Strong, Prof. William B. Chamberlain and Mr. G. M. Kellogg.

Address of Welcome and Response.

The address of welcome was delivered by the Rev. William E. Barton, to which a response was made for the Association by Vice-President Gladden.

The Jubilee Singers sang.

The Treasurer's Report.

Treasurer H. W. Hubbard, of New York, read the treasurer's report, which, with the certificate of auditors, as read by the Recording Secretary, was accepted and ordered printed with the report of the meeting.

Report of the Executive Committee.

The annual report of the Executive Committee, giving a General Survey of the work of the Association, was read by Mr. Charles A. Hull, of New York, Chairman. The report was accepted, and the Nominating Committee authorized to name committees who should consider the reports from the various fields of the Association, and report on them at a later time.

Enrollment.

Article III. of the Constitution was read defining membership in the Association, and cards for enrollment of delegates and life members were passed around by Rev. S. C. Talmage and Rev. H. Jay Withington, who were appointed tellers. Total enrollment, 500, viz.: visitors, 275; church delegates, 146; life members, 63; State conferences, 4; local, 1; speakers and missionaries, 11.

Assistant Recording Secretary.

Rev. H. Jay Withington, of Illinois, was elected Assistant Recording Secretary.

Business Assigned for Action.

Upon motion, it was voted that the amendment to Articles V and VI of the Constitution, with reference to the election of the salaried officers of the Association, be considered at the business session on Thursday morning.

Upon motion, it was voted that the subject of the re-arrangement of the reserve legacy fund be considered on Thursday morning.

Resolutions with reference to the report of the Committee of Fifteen made at the National Council held in Portland, Maine, October 12 to 17, presented by Mr. Charles A. Hull, were referred to the Business Committee.

Concert of Prayer.

A service of prayer and praise, led by Secretary Woodbury, was opened with a prayer by President J. G. Merrill and a response by the Jubilee Singers, and participated in by several delegates and others.

The Jubilee Singers sang again.

The Lord's Supper.

The Nominating Committee presented the following names of persons for the celebration of the Lord's Supper, and they were chosen:

Officiating Clergymen: Rev. Joseph E. Roy and Rev. President J. H. George.

Officiating Deacons: E. W. Lyman, J. L. Pearson, E. H. Duff, Charles A. Hull, R. B. Currier, George C. Hill, H. W. Hubbard, George M. Kellogg.

Adjourned.

TUESDAY EVENING.

At half-past seven o'clock the Association assembled, Vice-President Gladden in the chair.

The choir of the church rendered "The Festival Te Deum," by Dudley Buck.

The Committee on Nominations made the following nominations, and the persons so named were elected:

Committee on Chinese Missions.

Rev. James W. Bixler, of Connecticut; Rev. Charles H. Rogers, of Iowa; Rev. Frank N. Greely, of California; Rev. Henry Willard, of Illinois; Rev. W. H. Baker, of Ohio.

Committee on Indian and Alaskan Missions.

Rev. George E. Hall, of New Hampshire; Rev. James Chalmers, of Illinois; Rev. W. T. Walton, of Missouri; Rev. President T. McClelland, of Illinois; Deacon George C. Hill, of Wisconsin.

Resolution Commending President Roosevelt.

The following resolution, presented by Hon. T. C. MacMillan, was unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

The American Missionary Association of Congregational Churches, at its Fifty-fifth Annual Meeting, held in Oak Park, Ill., Tuesday evening, October 22, 1901, desires to express its cordial approval of the act of President Roosevelt in entertaining, recently, at the White House Booker T. Washington, a justly honored representative of his people, thus fearlessly ignoring race prejudice, publicly and officially reaffirming the equal rights of American citizenship, and emphasizing the principles of brotherhood revealed by our great Exemplar and Master, even Christ.

Upon motion of Secretary Ryder, it was voted that a rising vote be taken, and that a copy of the resolution, signed by the President and by the member of the Business Committee who presented it, be sent to President Roosevelt.

The choir then rendered the Sanctus from the "St. Cecilia," by Gounod, after which the Rev. A. R. Thain read the 72d Psalm and offered prayer.

Annual Sermon.

The annual sermon was preached by Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., from the text: "And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them and rose again. Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh; yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more."—2 Cor., 5: 15,16.

At the close of the sermon, and after a solo, "The Ninety-and-Nine," by Mrs. Sue Harrington Furbeck, of the First Church Choir, the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. Joseph E. Roy, and, in the absence of President George, Rev. William E. Barton, and during the passing of the cup the Jubilee Singers sang "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?"

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. Roy, and the meeting adjourned until Wednesday morning.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Devotional meeting at 8.40 o'clock was led by District Secretary Rev. George H. Gutterson.

The Business Committee announced an invitation from the President and Faculty of the Chicago Theological Seminary to visit the Seminary.

The program of the morning was then carried out as follows:

Report of Committee on Chinese Missions.

The report of the Committee on Chinese Missions was read by Secretary Ryder on behalf of Rev. James W. Bixler, of Connecticut. After his address, read by Sec. Ryder, and the singing of a hymn the report was adopted.

Report on Indian and Alaskan Missions.

This report, with address, was given by Rev. David Beaton, of Illinois. The report was adopted.

Music by the Fisk Jubilee Singers.

The Recording Secretary, Rev. Eugene C. Webster, of Massachusetts, being summoned home by a telegram, Rev. Homer W. Carter, of Wisconsin, was appointed as substitute.

Report on Missions in Porto Rico.

Report and address by Rev. F. E. Ramsdell, of New York. Report adopted.

Songs by the Jubilee Singers.

A paper by Rev. F. G. Woodworth, of Mississippi, "Industrial Training—Its place and Mission in Race Elevation," was then read.

Free Discussion.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, a free discussion, with speeches limited to three minutes each, was participated in by Miss Mary C. Collins, of North Dakota; Prof. W. E. C. Wright, of Michigan; Pres. Albert Salisbury, of Whitewater, Wis., State Normal School; and the leader of the Fisk Jubilee Singers, a teacher in Fisk University, where he was educated, Mr. J. W. Work.

Singing by the Jubilee Singers.

Further discussion by Secretary Homer W. Carter, of Wisconsin, and Rev. W. H. Baker, of Ohio.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, five minutes were taken by Rev. S. M. Johnson, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Austin, to present and advocate the use of the patriotic and religious emblem of the linking of the two flags (the one our national emblem and the other one with a cross and the motto, "By this sign conquer") as they appear in the decoration and in button badges furnished delegates. The design was suggested by the memorial services for President McKinley.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, Mr. Charles A. Hull, of the Executive Committee, presented resolutions concerning Dr. Noble, as follows:

WHEREAS, The Rev. Frederick A. Noble, for the past three years the President of this Association and for many years its staunch friend and supporter, having retired from the active pastorate, has sent a letter to the Executive Committee of this Association, in which he expresses his continued love for, and interest in, the great work of the Association and his desire that he shall not be a candidate for re-election; therefore,

Resolved, That in acceding to Dr. Noble's request to be relieved of the care and responsibility involved in the Presidency, the Association desires to put on record this expression of its appreciation of his valuable and distinguished services, and its full confidence that he will continue to be always the true friend and supporter of the Association.

Resolved, That we extend to him our best wishes for a continued useful and happy life along the lines of service in which he has so successfully labored during his long and honored career.

The resolutions were adopted.

An invitation was presented by the Business Committee, and accepted with thanks, for the next annual meeting to be held with the Second Church of New London, Conn., provided arrangements are not made for a joint meeting of the societies. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee with power to act.

The invitation of the President and Faculty of Chicago Theological Seminary for the Association and friends to visit the seminary was accepted for Friday morning at 10 o'clock, and the officers of the Association were requested to convey to the seminary the greetings of this Association.

Order of Business.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, the following was adopted as the order of the business of Thursday forenoon, viz.:

1. Report of Committee of Five.
2. Amendments to the Constitution.
3. Amendment laid on the table approved at Concord and tabled at Binghamton and Springfield.
4. Resolution of Mr. C. A. Hull referred from Tuesday P.M.

Announcement was repeated that lunch would be served by the young people of the Second Church.

Recess from 12 to 2 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

At 2 o'clock P.M., Vice-President Gladden in the chair, the meeting was called to order and the Jubilee Singers rendered a song.

Prayer, led by Rev. F. E. Ramsdell, of New York.

The Secretarial Paper.

This paper, on "The Work of the Association in Relation to its History," was presented by Secretary F. P. Woodbury, and was adopted by vote of the Association.

The veterans of the old guard, those who were active in the first year of the history of the American Missionary Association and were present at this fifty-fifth annual gathering, were asked by the Chairman to stand up, that the great convention might look into their faces. Twelve silver-haired men and women rose to their feet in various parts of the house. It was an impressive scene. Secretary C. J. Ryder, as editor of the AMERICAN MISSIONARY, requested these veterans of the early struggle to gather in a group that their pictures might be taken for the pages of THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY. This was readily acceded to, and a picture was taken which will appear in the next issue of that publication.

The list of these veterans is as follows: Secretary J. E. Roy, Oak Park, Ill.; Rev. William E. Holyoke, Chicago, Ill.; Orson Z. Olin, Wheaton, Ill.; Rev. Stephen Dennison Peet, Chicago, Ill.; Lemuel N. Stratton, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. Moses Smith, Chicago, Ill.; William Ripley, Chicago, Ill.; Deacon B. A. Bailey, Chicago, Ill.; Samuel D. Hastings, Green Bay, Wis.; Mrs. A. E. Hagar, Plainfield, Ill.; Mrs. H. M. Blake, Chicago, Ill.; Rev. S. N. Millard, Milwaukee, Wis.

Two interesting bits of history associated with the veterans in the struggle for human freedom and the elevation of these depressed races were presented as follows. Rev. L. N. Stratton handed the following note, which was read from the platform:

"Deacon Philo Carpenter sent a list-book to our house when I was a youth, asking contributions for the American Missionary Association. We all signed and sent it over to Owen Lovejoy, pastor at Princeton."

Another interesting fact was brought out in a note presented by Rev. S. D. Peet. He wrote:

"I secured from Deacon Malis, of Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1876, $40,000 for the American Missionary Association."

Rev. S. D. Peet added:

"Rev. M. E. Strieby was present with me in this effort, and was a large factor in securing this noble result."

The American Missionary Association expressed its appreciation of these noble veterans, whose heroism and devotion in the earlier years had made possible the splendid results of the present.

Report of Church Work in the South.

This report, with address, was given by Rev. F. S. Fitch, of New York. Adopted.

Mr. Charles A. Hull, of the Executive Committee, by request of the Chairman, took the chair temporarily.

Report of Educational Work in the South.

Report and address by Rev. George E. Hall, of New Hampshire. Adopted after changing, by request, the name "Mountain Whites" to "American Highlanders," as preferred by the people themselves.

Two songs and an encore were then sung by the Jubilee Singers as an introduction to the President of Fisk University, their school home.

A paper by President J. G. Merrill, of Fisk University, "Cities the Strategic Centers for our Missionary Work," was then read.

Financial Report and Address.

These were given by Gen. William A. Aiken, of Connecticut. Adopted.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, through Rev. Wm. E. Barton, the invitation of the Kewanee (Ill.) Association was accepted, and President F. G. Woodworth was appointed to visit and address the Association, his place at the Christian Endeavor rally to be filled by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton.

The following recommendations of the Business Committee were then carried out, viz.:

Singing by the Jubilee Singers.

A half hour of three-minute volunteer addresses, preference being given to members of the "old guard," participated in by Hon. S. D. Hastings of Wisconsin; Rev. S. D. Peet, of Illinois; William E. Holyoke, of Illinois, and Gen. Charles Howard.

A closing ten-minute address, by President W. G. Frost, Berea College, Kentucky.

Notices followed, including the call by the Illinois ladies for a ladies' meeting at Scoville Institute to-morrow morning, at 10.30, during our business session.

The Fisk Singers closed the session with the singing of "America" and a benediction song.

Recess 5 to 7.30 o'clock P. M.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Session opened at 7.30 o'clock P.M. with a hymn, Vice-President Gladden presiding. Prayer was led by Rev. S. V. S. Fisher, of Minnesota, Superintendent of the Scandinavian Department C. H. M. S., and was followed by the singing of a hymn.

The following program was carried out:

An address on the Porto Ricans, by Miss Jennie L. Blowers, of Porto Rico.

Two songs by the Jubilee Singers.

An address on the Indians, by Rev. Thomas L. Riggs, of South Dakota.

An address on the Negroes, by Rev. L. A. Planving, of Louisiana.

An address on the Highlanders, by Rev. Gilbert Walton, of Tennessee.

Two songs by the Jubilee Singers.

"Enlarged Fields and Increased Responsibilities Demand Increased Sympathy and Support." Address by Rev. J. W. Bradshaw, of Ohio.

After the singing of the Doxology, the meeting adjourned till Thursday morning.

On Wednesday evening the American Missionary Association Christian Endeavor Missionary Rally was held in the Second Congregational Church of Oak Park at the same hour as the meeting in the First Church. This meeting was opened with songs from the Fisk Jubilee Singers, followed by a responsive reading of the 72d Psalm, led by Chairman Sydney Strong, and a prayer, led by President George, of the Chicago Theological Seminary. The following addresses were made: Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Detroit, on "Means, Method and Motive;" Miss La Grange, of La Follette, Tenn., on her work among the Highlanders of Tennessee; Mrs. I. V. Woodbury, of Boston, on "Incidents of a Visit Among the Mountain People;" Miss Jennie L. Blowers, of Porto Rico, on the mission work in Porto Rico, and Secretary J. Willis Baer, of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, on "America." The meeting closed with a season of prayer, followed by hymn and benediction.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Opening of devotional meeting at 8.30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. W. H. Baker.

At 9 o'clock the Association was called to order by Chairman Hull.

The Minutes of the preceding sessions were read, corrected and approved. Scripture and prayer by Rev. R. R. Meredith.

Vice-President Gladden took the chair.

Song by the Jubilee Singers.

The business of the day was then taken up.

On motion of Mr. C. A. Hull, the order of business adopted for the day was reconsidered, and it was voted so to change the order as to consider first the unfinished business, thus bringing up, first, the amendment to Article V of the Constitution, at two annual meetings laid upon the table. This proposed amendment, as recorded upon page 8 of the published Fifty-second Annual Report, is as follows:

> At each annual meeting after the adoption of this article of the Constitution, three members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of five years, and such other members as shall be required to fill vacancies. No member of the Executive Committee who has served one full term of five years shall be eligible for re-election till one year has passed.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, it was voted that after carrying out the order of the morning already adopted, the next order be the consideration of the Reserve Legacy Fund.

The proposed amendment to Article V. was then taken from the table and considered and the amendment fully discussed.

The vote on the amendment was then taken, showing the requisite two-thirds majority in its favor. It was therefore declared carried

On motion of Rev. R. R. Meredith, President Blanchard, Mr. C. A. Hull and Rev. F. S. Fitch were appointed as a committee to prepare and present to this body a statement interpreting the amendment just passed, and preparing a plan for carrying it out.

This Committee subsequently reported as follows:

Report of Committee on Electing Executive Committee.

Your committee appointed to present a plan for making the change from the old method of electing the Executive Committee to the one just ordered by the Association, hereby respectfully report as follows:

1. We advise that three members of the Executive Committee be next year elected for the full term of five years.

2. That two members be elected for the partial term of four years to fill the vacancy which results from the election of three members for five years instead of five members for three years.

3. That at subsequent meetings the same order of election be suggested until the new plan is fully inaugurated.

The next order of business was taken up, being the constitutional amendments to Articles V and VI, by Mr. Charles A. Hull, referred from Tuesday P.M., concerning the election of salaried officers by the Executive Committee instead of by the Association, as follows:

Proposed amendment to the Constitution of the American Missionary Association, Articles V and VI, to be amended to read as follows:

ARTICLE V.

The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot as hereinafter provided.

The President, Vice-Presidents, Recording Secretary and Auditors shall be elected each year by the Association at its annual meeting.

The members of the Executive Committee shall be elected in accordance with the following plan: At each annual meeting of the Association five members shall be elected for a full term of three years, and such additional members as may be required to fill vacancies for the shorter terms of two years and one year.

The Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries and the Treasurer shall be elected each year by the Executive Committee at the first meeting of the Committee after the annual meeting of the Association.

ARTICLE VI.

To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of salaried officers, missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in their own membership or in the officers of the Association occurring between the annual meetings until the next annual meeting; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision, when necessary, for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the annual meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

After discussion, and the proposal of several amendments, on motion the whole matter was referred to a special committee of five to be appointed by the Nominating Committee, and to report to this body next year.

The following committee of five was subsequently appointed to report at the next meeting upon this whole matter of the Executive Committee, including the manner of electing them on the method of rotation just adopted: Rev. Washington Gladden, Rev. R. R. Meredith, Charles A. Hull, Esq., Hon. Thos. C. MacMillan, Rev. J. M. Sturtevant.

Mr. Emerson gave notice of the following amendment to the Constitution: That a new article be inserted in the Constitution to the effect that "The President and Vice-Presidents of the Association shall be ex-officio members of its Executive Committee."

As the next order of business, Rev. J. G. Johnson made the report of the Committee of Five, as follows:

The American Missionary Association, at its annual meeting in Springfield, October 23d, 1900, adopted the following resolution, which was the sixth section of the report of the Committee on Federation appointed at the preceding annual meeting:

Resolved, That, in accordance with the above recommendations, a committee of five be appointed to make overtures to the other five societies, and to offer such amendments to the Constitution and By-laws of this Association as may be necessary to effect the changes herein proposed.

The undersigned were appointed such committee. To them was also referred the report of the Committee of Nine on the "Plan of closer union of the six missionary societies of the Congregational churches," upon which they were "to report, after consultation with the Executive Committee, at the annual meeting of the Association next year."

The Committee met in New York on April 9th. As the Executive Committee of the Association was that day in session, this Committee consulted with them on the subject of this report, and found them in substantial accord with the recommendations herein made.

1. Your Committee reaffirm the conviction that there should be a joint annual meeting of the six societies of the Congregational churches in October in each year.

2. We also reaffirm the desirableness of a single monthly magazine, in the maintenance of which each society shall bear its appropriate share.

3. We advise the appointment of but one Secretary for the American Missionary Association, who shall have the assistance of competent associates. We do this on the clear understanding that we neither advise nor desire any change in the present secretarial force.

4. We recommend that this Association unite with the Congregational Home Missionary Society and the Congregational Church-Building Society in the choice of a single Treasurer, who shall serve, in that capacity, the three societies.

5. We recommend the appointment of a committee by the six societies, to be composed of two members each from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and the American Missionary Association, and one each from the Congregational Church-Building Society, the Congregational Education Society, and the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society, whose duties shall be to suggest to the societies plans by which there may be harmony and co-operation in the raising of funds for the work of these societies. They shall also suggest methods by which all funds and properties which have been given, or which shall be given, for the benefit of churches or schools (in case of the extinction of such aided church or school, or in case of the diversion of, or any attempt to divert, the property of such aided church or school from the uses for which it was originally designed and given), shall revert to the Congregational society or societies by which such funds or properties were given.

6. We recommend that the American Missionary Association, on its part, accept the proposition of the Committee of Nine, namely: "That, whenever necessary, there shall be such a readjustment of the work or territory of the societies as will secure greater economy and prevent two societies from doing similar work upon the same field. If any two or more societies fail to agree upon the adjustment of work or territory, the Committee of Nine, above provided for, shall be a committee of arbitration to which the matter shall be submitted, and the vote of seven members of said committee shall be binding upon the societies concerned. Said committee shall also have power to decide when the need of such readjustment exists."

7. We recommend that the suggestion be made to the proper persons by this Association, that, whenever the National Council meet, it shall meet in connection with the single meeting of these societies.

8. Your Committee have considered the proposition of both your Committee on Federation and of the Committee of Nine, that the secretaries and treasurer shall be chosen by the Executive Committee, and are not able to unite on any recommendation.

Overtures have been made, in accordance with our instructions, to the other five societies, asking their co-operation with this Association in the single annual meeting and the single magazine.

Occasion does not yet seem to have come for proposing any changes in our Constitution or By-laws.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES GIBSON JOHNSON, AMORY H. BRADFORD,
DE WITT S. CLARK, H. CLARK FORD.

Mr. Henry A. Wilder joins in this report with the exception of the recommendation of a single annual meeting. He prefers two annual meetings—one for home and one for foreign work.

The report of Dr. Johnson for the committee was accepted.

On motion the recommendations were taken up seriatim.

The first recommendation, concerning number of annual meetings, was taken up, as follows:

1. Your Committee reaffirm the conviction that there should be a joint annual meeting of the six societies of the Congregational churches in October in each year.

The following substitute, proposed by Mr. Hull, was adopted, viz.:

Resolved, That while the Association regrets that the National Council did not recommend one great united annual meeting for all our societies, it desires heartily to acquiesce in the recommendation of the Council for a union meeting of all the home societies, and it hereby directs and instructs its Executive Committee to communicate with the officers and Executive Committees of the other four home societies, and to endeavor to arrange for such a united annual meeting in October, 1902.

At this point the Nominating Committee reported the following as the Special Committee called for this morning: Rev. Washington Gladden, Rev. R. R. Meredith, Chas. A. Hull, Esq., Hon. Thos. C. MacMillan and Rev. J. M. Sturtevant.

The Nominating Committee reported the following persons, who were elected as members of the Finance Committee for the ensuing year: Mr. Henry K. Hyde, Mass.; Mr. Chas. A. Denny, Mass.; General Wm. A. Aiken, Conn.; Mr. Silas H. Paine, New York; Mr. James E. Brown, New York.

With other announcements, the Business Committee reported a telegram of greeting from Rev. H. H. Proctor, of the First Church of Atlanta. Thanks, with return greetings, were voted.

On recommendation of the Business Committee, it was voted that Secretary Roy be asked to give a closing summary as to the impressions of the meeting, to be followed with a farewell address by the Moderator, Vice-President Gladden, or, in his absence, by Mr. C. A. Hull, with a response by Rev. Sydney Strong, of the Second Church of Oak Park.

After singing by the Jubilee Singers, the meeting adjourned at 12.15 o'clock to meet at the Second Church at 1.30 o'clock P.M.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

At 1.30 o'clock the Association was called to order by Moderator Gladden. After a hymn, the Association was led in prayer by Rev. W. W. McLane.

The following Nominating Committee for next year was reported by the Moderator and approved by the body: Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, Rev. E. C. Moore, Rev. F. E. Ramsdell, Ralph Emerson, Esq., and Rev. F. S. Fitch.

The recommendations of the Committee of Five were again taken up and fully discussed.

The substitute for recommendation No. 1, as adopted this morning, was, on motion, reconsidered. Upon the reconsideration, it was voted to adopt the following substitute, viz.:

Resolved, The American Missionary Association reaffirms its conviction that there should be a joint annual meeting of the six societies of the Congregational Churches in October in each year; and it hereby directs and instructs its Executive Committee to communicate with the officers and Executive Committees of the other four home societies, and to endeavor to arrange for such a United Annual Meeting in October, 1902, and expresses the hope that the said meeting may lead to a united annual meeting of all the Congregational societies, home and foreign.

The second recommendation was adopted as follows:

2. We also reaffirm the desirableness of a single monthly magazine, in the maintenance of which each society shall bear its appropriate share.

The following supplement was adopted as an amendment to recommendation No. 2:

And that the Executive Committee be and it is hereby requested to co-operate with the other five societies in the publication of such a united magazine.

The third recommendation was discussed at unusual length, among other things showing absolute harmony of the three secretaries among themselves and with the Executive Committee. It was:

3. We advise the appointment of but one secretary for the American Missionary Association, who shall have the assistance of competent associates. We do this on the clear understanding that we neither advise nor desire any change in the present secretarial force.

The recommendation for but one secretary ultimately was lost.

The fourth recommendation, as to one treasurer, was considered and adopted, as follows:

4. We recommend that this Association unite with the Congregational Home Missionary Society and the Congregational Church-Building Society in the choice of a single treasurer, who shall serve, in that capacity, the three societies.

The fifth recommendation, relating to a committee by the Six Societies, was adopted, as follows:

5. We recommend the appointment of a committee by the six societies, to be composed of two members each from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and the American Missionary Association, and one each from the Congregational Church Building Society, the Congregational Education Society and the Congregational Sunday-school and Publishing Society, whose duties shall be to suggest to the societies plans by which there may be harmony and co-operation in the raising of funds for the work of these societies. They shall also suggest methods by which all funds and properties which have been given or which shall be given for the benefit of churches or schools (in case of the extinction of such aided church or school, or in case of the diversion of, or any attempt to divert, the property of such aided church or school from the uses for which it was originally designed and given), shall revert to the Congregational society or societies by which such funds or properties were given.

The sixth recommendation, relating to the proposition of the Committee of Nine as to the overlapping of fields, was discussed and lost. It was as follows:

6. We recommend that the American Missionary Association, on its part, accept the proposition of the Committee of Nine, namely: "That, whenever necessary, there shall be such a readjustment of the work or territory of the societies as will secure greater economy and prevent two societies from doing similar work upon the same field. If any two or more societies fail to agree upon the adjustment of work or territory, the Committee of Nine, above provided for, shall be a committee of arbitration to which the matter shall be submitted, and the vote of seven members of said committee shall be binding upon the societies concerned. Said committee shall also have power to decide when the need of such readjustment exists."

The seventh recommendation, relating to the meeting of the National Council with a proposed single meeting of the societies, was laid on the table.

7. We recommend that the suggestion be made to the proper persons by this Association, that, whenever the National Council meet, it shall meet in connection with the single meeting of these societies.

Mr. C. A. Hull, on behalf of the National Council, reported the following two recommendations, which were adopted as follows, viz.:

Resolved, 1. That the Executive Committee be and they are hereby instructed to consider the recommendation of the National Council for a "limited representative governing membership," and that the Executive Committee employ competent legal counsel to secure this end in conformity to law and our Constitution, and report the result of their deliberations to the next annual meeting, making due provision for the rights and privileges of all life members.

Resolved, 2. That the American Missionary Association greatly regrets that no plan of a distinct separation of the fields of the Association and of the Congregational Home Missionary Society has yet been adopted, and recommends to the Executive Committee of the Association that steps be immediately taken to secure an agreement with the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and to this important matter we earnestly invite the prompt attention of the Executive Committee of the Congregational Home Missionary Society.

The committee's recommendation on the "Reserve Legacy Fund" was adopted as follows:

First. At the close of the present fiscal year, two-thirds of the Reserve Legacy Fund shall be appropriated to current expenses for the fiscal year ending in 1903, and the remaining one-third for the fiscal year ending in 1904.

Second. Beginning with the fiscal year, 1902–1903, all receipts from legacies not designated shall be divided into three equal portions; one third to be appropriated to the expenses of the current fiscal year, one-third to the expenses of the second fiscal year, and the remaining third to the third fiscal year.

Third. In case of the receipt of any one legacy of $25,000 or more, the Executive Committee may, at its discretion, distribute the payments over a longer period, or may appropriate the whole, or any part of the amount, to such special objects as they shall deem of greatest advantage to the Association.

Rev. W. B. Thorp gave notice of the following amendment to Article IV of the Constitution, to be presented at the next annual meeting, viz.:

"The annual meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of May or June," etc.

On motion, it was voted to proceed to the election of officers.

Moderator Gladden withdrew, calling Mr. C. A. Hull to the chair.

The Nominating Committee reported the following list of officers, who were balloted for, resulting in the election of President.

REV. WASHINGTON GLADDEN, D.D., LL.D., of Ohio.

Vice-Presidents.

REV. ALEXANDER MCKENZIE, D.D., of Massachusetts.
REV. HENRY A. STIMSON, D.D., of New York.

REV. ELIJAH HORR, D.D.
JAMES H. OLIPHANT, ESQ.
THOMAS E. STILLMAN, ESQ.
JOHN M. HOLCOMBE, ESQ.

For One Year (to fill Vacancy).

REV. GEO. E. HALL, D.D.

President Gladden was called to the chair, and in a felicitous speech accepted the presidency of the Association.

The Recording Secretary was instructed to acknowledge the receipt of greeting from Secretary Beard, to express the joy of the Association that he could attend the Yale Bi-centennial, and regret that he could not be present at this anniversary of the Association.

The minutes of the day were read and were approved.

Voted, that when this meeting adjourns it adjourn to the First Church, to join in the public session there convened.

Voted, that the Secretary complete the minutes, which from this point on shall be read and approved by the Executive Committee.

Adjourned at 4.30 o'clock.

At the close of the "Field addresses of the Women's Meeting," a paper was presented by Rev. W. L. Tenney, of Massachusetts, on "The Training of Leadership." After notices and prayer and benediction by Rev. Homer W. Carter, the meeting adjourned at 5.00 o'clock till the evening session.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The Association was called to order by Mr. Charles A. Hull.

Singing by the Jubilee Singers.

Scripture was read and prayer offered by Secretary A. N. Hitchcock, Western Secretary American Board.

The Lord's Prayer was chanted by the Jubilee Singers and a song rendered by them.

An address was delivered by Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, followed by the singing of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," after which Rev. R. R. Meredith addressed the meeting.

Mr. Charles A. Hull spoke words of farewell congratulations, and gratitude for Dr. Gladden's service and election, and for Rev. W. E. Barton and all entertainers.

Rev. Lewellyn Pratt presented the formal resolution of appreciation and thanks of the Association, as follows:

The American Missionary Association in closing its fifty-fifth annual meeting wishes to return hearty thanks to the churches and people of Oak Park for the courtesy and hospitality its members and delegates have received during the three days' sojourn in this town.

Greeted at the first by warm words of welcome, carefully provided for by the committees having the arrangements in charge, entertained by royal hospitality in the homes so generously opened to us—nothing has seemed to be omitted to make the meetings successful and our stay agreeable, to further the interest of the great missionary cause that we represent, and to make the meeting at Oak Park memorable in the history of our Association.

On motion the resolution was adopted.

Rev. Sydney Strong acknowledged these thanks with gracious thanks in return.

After announcements, including the statement that the total enrollment was 500, the veteran Secretary J. E. Roy was enthusiastically greeted for the closing address. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," was sung by the Jubilee Singers. Benediction was pronounced by Secretary C. J. Ryder, and the meeting was adjourned at 10 o'clock P.M.

Certified copy of Minutes.

Attest: HOMER W. CARTER,
Acting Recording Secretary.

FIFTY-FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT.

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1901.

GENERAL SURVEY.

The glory of Christian churches is in their missionary spirit and work. Our commission includes in it almost every form of Christian service. In whatever form, the aim is nothing less than to be bearers of a saving grace and a transforming power to those to whom we are sent. This purpose not only directs but also qualifies every feature of our varied work both as to our principles and our methods. In common with all missionary societies our supreme purpose is to bring the divine life into human life in all its relationships. It is in the light of this constant mission—in seeking first the kingdom of God and His righteousness—that we make our annual report.

We have closed a year of uncommon prosperity. With a slight increase in the number of our schools, in which the standards are higher than ever before and more thoroughly maintained, and with nearly fifteen hundred more pupils than in the previous year; with a record also of enlarged and hopeful church work, and with many pleasing evidences of sympathetic interest and confidence on the part of our constituency, we have abundant reason for special gratitude and congratulation.

Since "religion cannot hold its own in any form other than that of education," we begin with education. Our common schools in the South are chiefly parochial, and for the most part are located in rural places where no public schools meet the urgent necessities. They are in close relationship with churches which are under the care of the pastors who have been educated in our higher schools, and they are taught by those who have been prepared in our normal institutions. The graduates of our graded and normal schools are also teaching year by year in hundreds of schools which are not under our watch and care. In this way we are continually passing on the influence of our schools to many thousands. The common schools for which we stand immediately responsible are thirty-two in number and are in the States of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee. The reports which come from them are often pathetic as they relate the struggles of parents to pay the trifling tuition which makes for their self-dependence and self-reliance, and in the unabated interest of both parents and children to get away from the thraldom of ignorance and the helplessness which goes with it.

NORMAL AND GRADED SCHOOLS.

Our larger interest, however, has been and continues to be chiefly to prepare Christian teachers to meet the increasing demands of the public schools both in rural communities and in towns. Our normal and graded schools are in Southern States as follows: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Arkansas—in number forty-three.

It is with satisfaction that we acknowledge the growing sympathy and expressed appreciation of the communities in which our normal and graded schools are located, not only with the methods of our instruction but also with the realized results. More and more the sincere students of social and religious conditions in the South are adopting the sentiments of one of their own representative Christian philanthropists who in his plea for the education of the enfranchised Negro used the following words: "The Negro must be educated. The uneducated Negro is unfitted for the new order. It is absolutely necessary to both races that his education shall go on. As a rule, the criminals among Southern negroes are not only products of post bellum life; they are uneducated. It is the rarest thing that an educated Negro commits crimes against virtue and life. There is among their leaders a growing sense of the duty of teaching their people that crimes against society must cease. Let their Northern friends and helpers and guides encourage and exhort them to follow these good impressions and impulses. In our extremity we look to the wise and just people in the Northern States to help us, to help both races. Without Northern co-operation things will go from bad to worse. Let our northern friends more earnestly (well I know how earnestly many of them have done their duty in their day in all these matters) help them to see that their education puts them under moral obligation to teach, to exhort and to warn their people." We put these thoughtful words of a Southern educator as the true judgment of our work, its necessity and its effectiveness, against the prejudiced blindness which sees no advantage in light above darkness, which asserts that Christian education of the Negro is a failure, and only tends to complicate the problem of two distinct races living together in Christian relations. Those who have heard the honored secretary of the Slater and Peabody Funds impress like sentiments upon Southern communities with all the fervor of his large knowledge and wide experience, will place small value upon the shallow reiterations that the Christian schools in the South have failed to see their mission or are not quite as imperatively needed now as ever. Notwithstanding the recent legislation in the South affecting the constitutional and civil rights of the Negro, and notwithstanding the fearful lynchings of black men upon rumor or suspicion and without trial, we yet believe that the number of those who are truly advised as to what the Negro has attempted for the betterment of his own life and conditions is enlarging, and that those who have been and are cruelly unjust to the negro possibilities and character on the part of a large and increasing proportion of the race will have decreasing influence upon sound public opinion. Probably there is no locality in the South where this is more wisely understood than in the city of Atlanta, nor where more is being done to displace Negro ignorance with intelligence than in this self-same city with its one hundred thousand people, and yet the Atlanta Journal in a ringing editorial used these words: "There are more than five hundred white children and more than three thousand colored children knocking in vain at the doors of our public schools, and yet we hold them responsible for the vices and crimes to which ignorance makes them easy victims. Our schools are far below the needs of the children of Atlanta. We write these words in sorrow but we state facts which no one would dare to deny." We may add that the people of the South certainly deserve our sympathy in the remarkable progress which they have made in their system of public school instruction, and which none will appreciate more truly than those who are working by their side and bringing into emphasis the positive Christian element in education and who are counting their work only successful when their pupils are fortified with Christian character and Christian motives and are sent out with a sense of Christian duty to carry the torch of Christian light to those who have been less favored than themselves. We are encouraged by the growing appreciation of this at least among the wise and unprejudiced people of the South who have come to see with clear vision what our Christian work is in the intelligent and moral uplifting of an undeveloped people.

As an illustration of this work a single incident may be mentioned. Two officers of this Association on a tour of inspection in the South during the past year visited the State Normal Industrial College for the education of colored youth in North Carolina at Greensboro. The president of the institution received them with a cordial welcome, the more expressive because, as he informed them, his early education was begun and continued in one of our normal schools. He could not speak too generously of the impulse given to his aspirations for education and for his higher life in the instructions of an educated Christian lady teacher who had long been in the service of the Association. Passing to the next room the teacher who had charge of the domestic science in the industrial education of the girls, informed them that she also was a product of one of the American Missionary Association schools. Her gratitude was spoken in no measured terms. They next went into the mechanical department for the young men. At the head of this department was an able director who renewedly gratified his visitors by saying that he likewise had received his start in life and his entire preparatory education in one of the rural schools of the American Missionary Association, and that he should ever hold in grateful memory the teachers still in our service who had taught him not only from books but the lessons of self-reliance and Christian obligation. Thus three of the heads of the departments, including the president of this excellent State college, were passing on the work of this Association to others, one instance among hundreds in Southern institutions. If ever the duty of doing our part in saving ten millions of people—the children of two hundred and forty years of bondage—has called for our courage and patience, such facts may now help our purpose and hopefulness.

The details of our normal schools have not changed since our last statement. Those who have examined our various schools report them to be meritorious in their work and in excellent condition with faithful and able Christian teachers.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

The mountain schools are twelve in number with sixty-seven instructors and 2,190 pupils. All of these are among the white people of the hills and are attended by their children, who are no less eager to rise above their past meager conditions than are the colored youth of the plains. Entire sections of country have been quite transformed by these schools.

HIGHER INSTITUTIONS.

These are as follows: Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Talladega College, Talladega, Ala.; Tougaloo University, Tougaloo, Miss.; Straight University, New Orleans, La.; Tillotson College, Austin, Tex., and the J. S. Green College, Demorest, Ga.

Fisk University is now under its new president, who was called to this position by the trustees from a professorship in the same institution after a year's experience as acting president. The administration of the past year gives us confidence that the noble record of the institution will be worthily maintained.

Talladega College has added during the year a fine industrial building and home for girls which is now ready for occupancy. Under the present acting presidency the college has attained the largest number of pupils in its history. Talladega College is flourishing and is happy in its work. A college chapel, long needed, will be erected during the next school year with funds sufficiently provided to warrant the beginning of the work. The agricultural department of this institution receives the most favorable comment of the planters and agriculturists of this part of the State, and every feature of the college, from the lowest departments to that of the liberal arts and theological school, is deserving of the cordial support of the constituency of the Association. The work is sincere and thorough, the pupils are earnest and self-respecting, and the influence of the college is actively Christian.

Tougaloo University, in the black belt of Mississippi, maintains not only a high standard of academic education, preparing students well furnished for teachers with solid attainments and high ideals, but also adds a collegiate department and a Bible-school. This most interesting institution has the deserved esteem of the white people of the State. The eminent bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Bishop Galloway, joins with the distinguished Rev. J. L. M. Curry, LL.D. and others in personal endorsement, and the people of the North should know more about this worthy and influential institution.

Straight University in New Orleans, with its thorough course of study, its excellent manual training and its theological school, maintains the high standard for which it is well known. Its students and graduates are doing much, and doing it well, to stem the tide of ignorance in the remote South.

Tillotson College, at Austin, Texas, is known in that great State as an institution which insists upon thoroughness and accuracy in every department.

To the list of institutions which may rightly be classified among our higher institutions is the J. S. Green College at Demorest, Georgia. It is in the foothills of the Cumberland range of mountains and has a wide district of country which will naturally be dependent upon it for educational privileges. Yielding to the urgency of its appeal to come under the direction of the American Missionary Association, we have taken it under our watch and care by a purchase of the property and by provision for the salary of the president. We welcome this institution into the Association and have good hopes of its great usefulness.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

We are sometimes asked why we do not do more in the way of industrial training. It is right to reply that we are doing more, far more, than has yet seemed to receive public recognition. In every boarding-school and institution the invariable rule is one hour each day in some form of industry for every student. Added to this are the regular classes in technological instruction and architectural drawing with manual training in wood and iron, the making of furniture, harness-making, upholstery, printing, book-binding, agriculture in theory and practice, and practical instruction in the raising of cattle, horses, swine and poultry and in the dairy produce of milk and butter. The industries for the girls are in the domestic sciences, household economics, in caring for the products of the farm, in dressmaking, tailoring, millinery and nursing.

The fact that our institutions offer opportunities for higher intellectual attainments should not divert the attention of our constituency from the great contribution to the skilled workers which we are constantly sending out to engage in this form of race welfare. Those who think that we are seeking to engraft upon the Negro the traditional culture of the Anglo-Saxon without regard to his condition or environment or more immediate necessities should correct this mistake, if by personal examination they would see that the mistake is in their misapprehension and not in our practice. Industrial training forms a part of our instruction in more than forty different institutions. Our new normal, industrial and agricultural school at Enfield, North Carolina, under the direction of graduates from our own institutions, is attracting wide attention in that State for the character and quality of its work.

PORTO RICO.

Number of schools	2
Number of instructors	8
Number of pupils	306

Our new work in Porto Rico was visited during the year by one of the Secretaries and by a member of the Executive Committee with him. Both reported the location of our school at Lares and its hopefulness beyond their expectation. In the mountain region by itself, remote from outside influences, the devotion of principal and teachers to these needy people was rewarded by the confidence of the people and the eagerness of pupils to prepare themselves for a more intelligent and worthy life. This station has now been cheered by the arrival of a Christian pastor and his wife who will take to this people the teachings and privileges of such a Christian church as they have never known. That this feature of our work will require much faith and patience is evident, but it is "through faith and patience" that we inherit the promises.

At Santurce our school has outgrown its temporary accommodations. Its success has been recognized by the Spanish church sufficiently to quicken an heretofore dormant zeal to establish a rival and well furnished church-school by the side of our own. This, however, has not succeeded in reducing the regular attendance upon our school, where in addition to other studies the Bible is a daily text book. The report from this school has brought it very generous contributions from a giver in the West. This has enabled us to purchase at his request a handsome property upon which permanent school buildings are to be erected.

The religious needs of Porto Rico are indescribable, but churches of many communions are working in harmony and wisely in a common effort to save this people and with a unity that promises gracious results. The new public school system under the direction of United States Commissioner Brumbaugh is wisely administered and must prove to be a great regenerating power among the ignorant Porto Rican population.

The evangelizing work in Porto Rico is now largely reinforced by the services of Rev. Francisco Castro and family who take up work in and about Humacao—and as has been mentioned—by Rev. Sebastian Hernandez and his wife, who are at Lares. All of these have the Spanish language and have large experience in missionary service.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of churches	229
Ministers and missionaries	140
Church members	12,068
Total additions	1,687
Added on profession	1,472
Benevolent contributions	$2,706.98
Raised for church purposes	$48,859.33

Our records show an enrollment of twenty-nine new churches during the year, a larger number than for any single year since 1895. There is also a noteworthy advance in the amount which the churches have raised towards the support of their own work. This is $48,800 this year as against only $32,500 last year. The year chronicles the largest sum ever raised by our mission churches for carrying on their own work.

On the other hand, the fluctuations of Negro population, especially in the turpentine forests of Georgia, have resulted in our dropping an unusual number of churches (twenty-two) from our rolls. These excisions do not signify that churches have fallen apart and ceased to exist while their members have remained in the community, but that large numbers of the laboring people who were formerly employed and had their residence in places where the churches were organized, have been dispersed to other localities by change of employment. In some cases it has been found that numbers of these people have united with other churches in other neighborhoods.

Our Southern church work has suffered this year as in past years from oppression. Though we have had no single instance like the Wilmington mob violence and murders which drove so many of our church families out from the city, there has been a good deal of unrest; and very many removals of families have taken place in the effort to find neighborhoods where they might educate their children and pursue their industrial occupations under conditions of comparative freedom, The political crimes against the colored people are by no means as serious as the widespread industrial persecutions and the attempts to reduce their opportunities for education and for the acquiring of property. Within a few days one of our largest churches in the South found itself much crippled by a public movement for the exclusive use of white labor by which all colored labor was thrown out of certain occupations in that city. This entirely took away the earnings from quite a number of families, and they will doubtless have to remove to other neighborhoods. While in some parts of the South there is a good understanding between the races, and the colored people are doing well both in point of earning a livelihood and of supporting their schools and churches, in other wider areas there is much discouragement and sometimes despair.

We quote as follows from the report of the Committee on Conference and the subsequent Association vote at our annual meeting in 1891:

"We heartily believe in the value of church work as an educating force among the freedmen. This work has not been carried on as vigorously as it might have been, and the results are discouraging. It is high time to press forward in the hope of developing self-sustaining churches. We think the time has fully come when a large effort should be made to plant churches and to entrust them in some degree with the management of their own affairs.

Voted, That while we are aware of the great difficulty of planting our churches at the South we still believe in Congregationalism as an educating force; and would recommend a stronger effort to extend its influence and to awaken an enthusiasm for self-government as well as for self-support."

In compliance with these instructions a larger effort has been made to plant churches and constant endeavors have been used to awaken in them an enthusiasm for self-government as well as self-support. We have gained ninety churches during the last decade, which is double the gain of the previous decade; and it has been our constant purpose to bring the people forward into a more independent management of their own work. It would have been far easier to leave the churches simply to receive pastoral appointments made by the Association. This, in many instances, was the course which the churches at first preferred. Very many of the members supposed that their leaving entirely to the Association the choice of a pastor would be taken as an evidence of loyalty to the Association. It has been an arduous task to make the churches understand that the Association means that they take the responsibility of calling ministers and that they are expected to extend the call before the Association commissions a minister. In a few cases the liberty thus urged upon them has been taken advantage of to call utterly irresponsible preachers who had not the intellectual attainments nor the moral character that would fit them for the care of a church. In such cases the Association, while not invading the liberty of the church as to its own pastorate, declined to aid the church in the support of any minister not properly vouched for as to character and attainments. It has now come to be well understood in our churches that they should exercise their own discretion in the choice of a pastor; and at the same time satisfactory evidence must be presented to the Association as to the moral character and intellectual qualifications of the minister as a condition of aid in his support from the treasury of the Association. The plan pursued is working admirably in its educational uplift among the churches. On the one hand they are exercising much more caution about their invitations, and on the other hand there is a much wider range of freedom and responsibility in the local church. The old subserviency has given way to the new independence. We do all we can to foster this spirit. We continually emphasize the freedom and the duty of the churches to choose their own pastors; and we find that this freedom conduces to a larger sense of responsibility for the support of the minister. The endeavor has demanded sympathy, care and tact and a great deal of labor in the personal visitation of the churches. But its immense importance has justified all the work; and it is a gratification to find that so many of our churches have now come to understand the primary principle of our Congregational fellowship, the freedom of the local church from external government and control.

This year the Executive Committee sent out a deputation of visitation to the Indian mission fields similar to that made last year in the South. The work of this deputation has covered nearly all the Indian Missions in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Montana and Oklahoma, and its conclusions comprise substantially this report.

The general impression brought back by the visiting committee is one of confidence and admiration for the good work done. At Oahe, the school (consisting of some forty Indian boys and girls) is admirably and economically carried on under the praiseworthy conduct of the principal, Mrs. Riggs. Rev. T. L. Riggs has the school under general supervision but is chiefly occupied with attending to his mission stations on the Cheyenne River Agency, receiving members, administering church services and directing the native helpers.

At Elkhorn, on Grand River, Rev. Mary C. Collins is in charge of four or five stations at a distance of from six to sixty miles, her most immediately important work being in connection with the government school near her church and house. This school is under excellent Christian control and Miss Collins is doing a noble work. She feels that the work is growing beyond her, and without doubt she ought to be reinforced by the aid of an additional missionary with his family.

From Elkhorn the committee went to Fort Yates District which is in charge of Rev. George W. Reed. A great council of all the Indians of the agency was held there in reference to a proposition for leasing the Indian lands, which was rejected. The council gave a good impression of the forethought and wisdom of those who were the real leaders of the Indians. This district has several out-stations, one nearly sixty miles distant on the Cannon Ball River. Some of these stations were visited and the condition of things was found to be fairly hopeful as there were a good number of adherents and members.

In the Rosebud Reservation, where our mission work is in charge of the Rev. J. Frank Cross, there are some twenty-three day schools carrying on their work in the Indian communities and in the homes of the people. These day schools, through the ministry of family life, accomplish great good in protecting the returned Government pupils from a deluge of unrestrained heathenism and crime, in caring for the sick and the children and in creating a better class of home among the Indians. The judgment of our missionary at Rosebud is at one with that of Mr. Burgess, our missionary in Montana, that the home day school, rightly manned, is the most important factor for the regeneration of Indian life. Both at the Crow Agency and at Rosebud our missionaries have not only the confidence of the Indians but also the confidence and co-operation of the Government employés.

The committee found the same condition of work as that at Elkhorn going on in the neighborhood of the Government schools among the Cheyennes and Arapahoes in Oklahoma and among the Crows in Montana. In all these schools Christian workers have expressed themselves as being in the warmest personal sympathy with all efforts for the moral and religious improvement of the Indian, and they are in active co-operation with the endeavors of our missionaries for the upliftment of young and old.

The committee found at Santee the equipment for a very fine school. The present attendance is about one hundred, of whom the greater part are in the lower grades. The work done is the important one of Christian training, especially the training of Christian workers. The Santee school is decidedly superior to any of the government schools, carrying its pupils several years further along in instruction. The committee was impressed with the need of providing for the instruction of boys older than those who can be kept at Oahe; and arrangements are now made for opening the unused boys' hall. The important question of the expense of the school, amounting to more than one-third of all our Indian work, was considered. No immediate way seems to be open for reducing expenses in this school, but one will come with the rapidly changing conditions. The Indians about Santee no longer receive rations; they must care for themselves more like white people, and the pupils there can have neither school support nor rations. This will be the case before long in all these fields. As the allotments are made and rations cease, and the Indians come under civilized conditions and unallotted lands are given to the white man, the control of the State will take the place of the agency system. Then our mission schools will either pass under State management or will become general academies. Meanwhile it is important that we should put our work into the closest possible relations with the government schools. Good Christian work can be done by having one of our missionaries stationed by a school, with chapel for services, with helping in the Sunday-school, which Government requires to be held. A still more important way of influencing the Government schools is by securing Christian teachers in them. This is not impossible, and young women in our Bible colleges and Christian men everywhere who might be at the head of such schools, ought to be sought out to take the competitive examinations and become teachers.

The committee was deeply impressed by the extent to which the adult Indians have been reached by the Gospel. The proportion of church members among the Indian tribes of the Dakotas is quite as great as that of the average rural population of the East. They seem to be devout, sincere and faithful, according to the light which they have. They are all dressed in the clothing of the civilized man and nearly all can read in their native language, though very few can speak English. Their standard of Christian living is not as high as that of old established communities, but would compare favorably with that of the early churches which Paul established. It was felt that the native preacher is the most important factor in Christianizing and upbuilding the native church. Through him nearly all the conversions have been made. He lives with the people, speaks their language and is in a position to influence and lead them. The future strength and influence of Christianity among the Indians must rest upon the native churches and the native pastors. The expense of the native evangelistic work is small. The native preachers receive about $200 or $300 a year; for the Indian churches, which give liberally for buildings, do not yet see reason why they should pay their pastors. As they now begin to choose their pastors this will change.

The most pressing need of the Indian seems to be the development of his economic nature. He is naturally unthrifty and not very industrious. He is still receiving rations from the Government; and it is difficult under such circumstances for him to learn economy. The gospel of thrift will need to be preached in every possible way. The Government is trusting almost wholly to the education of the child to elevate the Indian. This alone will not accomplish the result. It is much easier to teach him to read and write than to earn and save; or than it is to make him a moral and Christian man. The permanent work among the Indians must be church work. The great need is character building. The goal to be reached is self-supporting churches; but this will require careful supervision for more than one generation.

ALASKAN MISSIONS.

The mission work in Alaska has been continued throughout the year on much the same lines as in former years. The reindeer herd, taken for Government service in the rescue of the whalers, has now been restored by the Government and is constantly increasing. This removes many of the dangers of want and starvation which confronted the natives in former times.

The Government school during the year has been held in the mission building, and the work is closely associated with that of our missionaries. The present teacher is the brother of Mrs. Lopp. The school opened with an enrollment on the first day of over sixty pupils. Our missionaries report that some of the settlements along the coast have been almost depopulated by measles. Sixty died at Cape Prince of Wales alone. They express their gratitude at the aid afforded by Captain Tuttle, of the Government service, in procuring supplies to take the place of some of those lost by shipwreck.

It is a significant fact that our Sunday-school at Cape Prince of Wales raised seventeen dollars last winter to contribute toward the mission work at Porto Rico.

The service carried on at Cape Prince of Wales is one not only for the moral and religious welfare of the natives, but also for their physical well-being and upliftment into civilization.

CHINESE MISSIONS.

STATISTICS.

Number of missions	21
Number of Chinese workers	15
Whole number of workers, including Superintendent	46
Number of pupils in schools	1,385
Number giving evidence of having been converted	107

The last annual report of these missions chronicled a total enrollment of 1,446 pupils. The educational work, while essential and indispensable, is by no means the whole work. There is much preaching of the Word both in our chapels and in the street. There is much individual service in seeking and saving those as yet unbelievers. Indeed, everything that belongs to the work of an earnest church goes on in larger or smaller measure in all these Chinese missions. During the year covered by the annual report, one hundred and eleven were added to the membership of the Congregational Association of Christian Chinese. The indispensable condition of membership in this Association is a credible evidence of conversion. It is the largest number ever added in one year's work. It carries up the total number of those offering good evidence of Christian conversion to nearly two thousand.

There is a deep feeling in our Chinese mission that we ought to do more in evangelizing the numerous little isolated villages of the Chinese where Chinese laborers congregate, and that we ought particularly to be doing our part in bringing to Christ the rapidly increasing Japanese population. Very successful Japanese work has already been begun in Los Angeles and in Fresno. The Japanese are entering our country in constantly increasing numbers.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

All the Woman's State Unions and a great number of local missionary societies have been brought into close touch with the missionary work through this department. Correspondence has been had with over three thousand local societies. Programs and literature have been furnished upon request, and missionary letters from the field have been sent regularly to contributing societies. The department has served also as a "question box," to which Women's and Young People's Societies have applied freely for information and direction in special lines of help. The work has been represented personally by the Secretary and other speakers at state, county and local meetings.

Women's societies have responded heartily with expressions of interest, sewing aid, and cash contributions to the amount of $24,733.71, which are included in the report of the Treasurer of the Association. This aid, so valuable, we rely upon as part of the regular resources in the support of A. M. A. missions, and we greatly appreciate the faithful co-operation of the women of the churches.

FINANCIAL.

RECEIPTS AND PAYMENTS.

The receipts of the Association for the fiscal year ending September 30th, were as follows:

Balance on hand at beginning of year		$1,601.90
From Donations	$163,881.43
" Estates (for current work)	118,705.71
Income Sundry Funds	10,960.15
" Talladega College, Erwin Fund	4,000.00
Tuition	49,202.91
Slater Fund, paid to institutions	5,000.00	351,750.20
Total, Including Balance		353,352.10
The Expenditures were		352,572.36
Balance on hand		$779.74

The receipts were $15,970.57 more, and the expenditures were $17,523.49 more than last year.

This is the fourth year that the Association has reported all obligations met and no debt at the close of the year, and it is the seventh year since the Association created any new debt.

In addition to the above, there was received on the mission fields for board and incidental expenses and church support about $125,000.

DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND.

INCOME ACCOUNT.

Balance on hand at beginning of year	$11,793.96
Income received during year	66,611.74
Total	$78,405.70
Expended during year	74,987.10
Balance in hand and appropriated	$3,418.60

The far-sighted plan of Mr. Daniel Hand in creating this trust is more and more appreciated as the educational work for the colored people is maintained and developed under the conditions of the trust. Thousands of pupils have thus had an opportunity for an education which will fit them to be worthy citizens and leaders among the colored people in the South.

ENDOWMENT FUND.

There has been received from the estate of Seymour Straight, Hudson, Ohio, the sum of $1,694.23 as endowment fund for Straight University, New Orleans, La.

SUMMARY OF RECEIPTS FOR THE YEAR.

For Current Work	$351,750.20
Income from Dan'l Hand Educational Fund,	66,611.74

RESERVE LEGACY ACCOUNT.

The members of the Association will remember that at the Annual Meeting in Binghamton, N. Y., October, 1899, your Executive Committee reported that it "had given careful attention to some plan which would aid in the equalization of current receipts from legacies from year to year." During these three years the plan then reported has been followed, and the amount standing to the credit of this account, September 30th, 1901, is $59,006.75.

Your committee has adopted a modification of the present plan, to take effect at the close of the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1902, as follows:

First. At the close of the present fiscal year, two-thirds of the Reserve Legacy Fund shall be appropriated to current expenses for the fiscal year ending in 1903, and the remaining one-third for the fiscal year ending in 1904.

Second. Beginning with the fiscal year 1902–1903, all receipts from legacies not designated shall be divided into three equal portions; one-third to be appropriated to the expenses of the current fiscal year, one-third to the expenses of the second fiscal year, and the remaining third to the third fiscal year.

Third. In case of the receipt of any one legacy of $25,000 or more, the Executive Committee may, at its discretion, distribute the payments over a longer period, or may appropriate the whole, or any part of the amount, to such special objects as they shall deem of greatest advantage to the Association.

SPECIAL ACTION.

During the year there have been three resignations from the membership of the Executive Committee. Two of these places thus made vacant have been filled for the year by the action of the committee.

Special committees, one to visit the missions of Porto Rico and one the Indian field, were appointed during the year. Both these special committees visited the fields as authorized by the Executive Committee, and their reports were of great value in the administration of the work.

Your committee deemed it wise to continue the Committee of Nine another year. They appointed as the representatives of the Association upon this committee the Chairman and Vice-Chairman of the Executive Committee.

The sub-committee on conference with the Congregational Home Missionary Society has been continued through the year. Conferences have been held with a similar committee from that Society at various times. Effort has been made to adjust fields of mission service so as to avoid all conflict and duality in the occupancy of the same field by the two societies.

We also inaugurated correspondence with the other societies in reference to holding a joint meeting in October of this year. This correspondence, as is evident, did not result in any definite arrangement for such a meeting.

Correspondence has been held with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions concerning the observance of Lincoln Memorial Sabbath. The American Missionary Association inaugurated the keeping of this day nine years ago. A large number of Sunday-school scholars and members of our Endeavor Societies have observed the day in the interests especially of Christian patriotism. A special day recently appointed by the American Board, for presenting the interests of foreign work to the young people of our Congregational churches, almost synchronized with Lincoln Memorial Sabbath. This arrangement seemed unfortunate for both societies. As Lincoln Memorial Day had been observed for so long a time, and had a fixed place in the calendar of many Sunday-schools, it was suggested that the day recently established by the American Board be changed. Cordial response was received from the Prudential Committee, and confusion will doubtless be avoided in the future.

Communication was received from the Prudential Committee of the American Board, stating that that society was planning to open mission work in the Philippine Islands. These islands having become a part of the territory of the United States, the Executive Committee of the A. M. A. was probably consulted in regard to entering the field. In response to this communication, we expressed hearty appreciation of this movement on the part of the American Board.

The Special Committee of Five, appointed at the last annual meeting of the American Missionary Association, met with the Executive Committee to confer with them concerning the report to be submitted at the Fifty-fifth Annual Meeting.

The action of the committee concerning modifications in the treatment of the Reserve Legacy Fund is recorded under the financial heading in another part of this report.

CONCLUSIONS.

In closing the report of last year we made the following hopeful prediction: "With an increasing sense of the responsibility on the part of the churches for the development of this great work, with a systematic and careful study of the fields by the young people in our Endeavor Societies and Sunday-schools, your committee enters upon the future with every confidence that these important and varied mission fields, which are constantly enlarging, will receive the cordial and hearty support they deserve. The divine favor so evident in the past is a pledge to our faith of the same guidance until this great work shall be accomplished." The facts of the year have warranted this prediction and have proved a reasonable fulfilment of the prophecy. In the mission fields there has been abundant evidence of God's presence and guiding providence. Among the constituent churches supporting this large work there has been increasing interest. This interest has manifested itself along several radical lines.

In the individual churches the efforts and success of the "Missionary Committee" have been evident. A larger body of missionary literature, covering the field of the American Missionary Association, has been distributed on requests from the churches than ever before. The Missionary Committee has also, in many instances, co-operated with pastors, visiting secretary or missionary, in spreading information and stirring a deeper enthusiasm in the work. We desire to express our appreciation for this work, and to urge that this systematic method be adopted by all our churches.

Many Local Conferences and State Associations have also given an important place to the consideration of the organized missionary movements of the churches. The work of this Association has been presented by secretaries or missionaries at 36 State Associations during the year. In many of these bodies a special representative is chosen. This representative, chosen by the churches themselves, keeping himself in touch with the officers of the Association, has proved of great value. The growing recognition on the part of the churches of this work as their work, and their responsibility for its increased support and development, is one of the hopeful features of the times. We gladly recognize this widening interest, and would acknowledge this valuable co-operation. This steady and constant work among the churches is what brings the satisfactory results.

The plan suggested by the Committee of Fifteen has also proved, to some degree, a helpful method. Several State Associations and Local Conferences have systematized their benevolent work along the plan proposed by that committee. The peculiar needs and conditions of each mission field, however, require to be presented, although the interests have been to some degree confederated.

General Campaigns of much interest, conducted by secretaries and missionaries, have brought valuable results. In the Interior District, at the opening of a special campaign in the interests of the A. M. A., the Congregational Club of Cleveland held a special Platform Meeting. The President of the Club and representatives of the Association occupied the platform. The value of the meeting was manifest in all the churches represented in this body. Our Congregational Clubs are more and more giving a considerable place to the consideration of their organized missionary efforts, as we confidently believe, to the advantage of the Club, as well as to the interests of the missionary work.

At the Pan-American Exposition a unique series of meetings was held. The Tent "Evangelist," a large canvas tent, seating, perhaps, a thousand people, was erected near the Exposition grounds. The development of missionary effort and the progress of Christian and educational movements in the Americas of the western continent was presented by speakers especially familiar with these various movements. The American Missionary Association furnished the program for one of these sessions. A large audience gathered and listened with manifest interest to the history and development of the work among the various races where missions are planted by this Association.

The Twentieth International Convention of the Christian Endeavor Society, which met in Cincinnati, invited to its platform representatives of this Association. The close connection and sympathy of this great body of young people with the work carried on by this Association among the children and youth of the land we greatly appreciate. It has been a feature of our Annual Meetings for some years to hold a convention of Christian Endeavor societies in connection with this meeting. Dr. Francis E. Clark, Secretary John Willis Baer and Treasurer William Shaw, and other representatives of the National Endeavor Society, have cordially co-operated in these American Missionary Association conventions, presenting interesting addresses on different occasions. We are hoping that during the coming year the Y. P. S. C. E. of our Congregational churches will join special efforts in the development of the work in Porto Rico. Much interest among the Endeavorers is manifested in this work, and plans are being made looking toward a large future help.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY has held its place among our missionary publications. We have many evidences that the magazine is acceptable to our constituents, and are grateful for the cordial words which have come to us recognizing its value. Articles illustrating the different fields of missions, prepared by the missionaries and others thoroughly familiar with the work, have had a large place in the magazine during the year. These articles are usually issued in leaflet form and have gained a wide circulation. Three hundred and fifty thousand leaflets, of various kinds, relating to our work have been distributed during the year. These have been almost entirely sent out in response to special requests, and have not been carelessly scattered. We may gather the interest in different fields among our constituent churches as indicated by their requests for literature. The following table indicates this:

General	69,000
Mountain	12,500
Negro	62,000
Indian	17,000
Alaska	3,000
Porto Rico	6,000
Chinese	15,000
Christian Endeavor	13,000

This table refers simply to the leaflets which have been issued during the year, and not to the magazine or Congregational work. It will be noted that the Negro problem is still the great problem pressing itself upon the care and thought of Christian philanthropy. The larger number of leaflets demanded from our office relate to the work among the blacks. It is a hopeful sign, indicating that in this hour of special need the Negroes are not being deserted by the people of our Congregational churches. There is this evidence of careful study of the conditions in the South and the desire to meet those conditions in the Christian education and development of the Negro, so as to conserve the largest interests of the South and the nation as a whole.

Your committee would recognize with hearty appreciation all these evidences of cordial support and sympathetic and powerful co-operation on the part of the constituent churches. The field occupied by our missions is a rapidly enlarging field. The demands for increased support from the churches is evident and pressing. The blessing of God has rested upon the work during the year in every department, and we go forward into the new year and the untrod future with every confidence that His blessing will abide to the end.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

REV. GEORGE E. HALL, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

The report of the Executive Committee on educational work in the South during the past year shows not only a steady ongoing such as must characterize all such substantial growth, but also remarkable gain. The indications of progress are in the line of results most to be desired, and which evidence the greatest efficiency of the means employed. One more chartered institution has been added to the five reported last year. The number of pupils in all the schools included in this report has increased nearly twelve per cent. The gain is especially marked in the collegiate schools, being here nearly three hundred and fifty per cent. It is highly encouraging to contemplate this fruitage of the patient seed-sowing in the ways of rudimentary education which the Association has so faithfully prosecuted since the beginning. This notable enlargement of higher education in the schools of the American Missionary Association is a significant fact full of promise respecting an educated leadership for the Negro race.

The most difficult problems confronting the Negro, and this nation as well, in relation to that once enslaved race, are to be solved largely through the influence of Christian leaders raised up from among themselves. Liberty for the Negro people, already given in name yet long delayed in actual experience, shall be realized when the moral force of educated men and women of their own race shall compel the unprejudiced regard of white people. Intelligence, combined with moral excellence and spiritual insight, will surely win the conflict with ignorance and prejudice, irrespective of the different colors of the faces of the contending hosts. The President of the United States, if he is worthy to serve in that large office, will welcome to full social equality in the hospitality of the White House the Negro who can meet him on his own plane of intellectual energy and moral purpose. There is a compelling force in an enlightened Christian soul, be the face of the person white or black or red or yellow, which tends to break down the barriers of race prejudice and to obliterate the distinctions of caste. The American Missionary Association understands the secret of human brotherhood. The preachers sent forth and supported by this Association have aimed to give the love of Christ an opportunity to reveal its divine beneficence by educating the mind and informing the whole man respecting the laws of God, and thus providing channels for such manifestations of the divine love as never can come where human life is sodden in ignorance. There is a single sentence in the report of the Executive Committee which indicates the noble faith which finds expression in this work of Christian education: "Religion cannot hold its own in any form other than that of education." The religion of the founders of this Association and of the men and women who have labored in it, is a religion which inspires a quenchless desire for knowledge and for the mastery and usefulness of trained faculties, and which impels one truly educated to seek to lead others to similar attainments. There is no finer, nobler, grander manifestation of Pilgrim and Puritan characters combined than is afforded by this growing enterprise of our Congregational churches looking to the religious and intellectual redemption of the Negro, the Indian, the Chinaman and the Highlander. We hail with especial joy the fact that the higher education is relatively on the increase in the schools of this Association. This is to be expected in view of the work which has been done and which is still going on in all lower schools, beginning with the very rudiments of education.

The work of this Association through its normal and graded schools in training teachers cannot be too highly commended. Those trained in these schools are equipped not only to impart knowledge and stimulate mental activity, but also to give moral and spiritual quickening to those whom they teach. The young men and women who go forth as teachers from the schools of this Association are especially instructed in the principles of the Cross of Christ and become missionaries of that Cross wherever they go.

Industrial training has a commanding place in the schools of this Association. This Committee could do no better, speaking briefly on this point, than to repeat the statement of the Executive Committee: "We are sometimes asked why we do not do more in the way of industrial training. It is right to reply that we are doing more, far more, than has yet seemed to receive public recognition. In every boarding-school and institution, the invariable rule is one hour each day in some form of industry for every student. Added to this are the regular classes in technological instruction and architectural drawing, with manual training in wood and iron, the making of furniture, harness-making, upholstery, printing, book-binding, agriculture in theory and practice, and practical instruction in the raising of cattle, horses, swine and poultry and in the dairy produce of milk and butter. The industries for girls are in the domestic sciences, household economics, in caring for the products of the farm, in dressmaking, tailoring, millinery and nursing. The fact that our institutions offer opportunities for higher intellectual attainments should not divert the attention of our constituency from the great contribution to the skilled workers which we are constantly sending out to engage in this form of race welfare. Those who think that we are seeking to engraft upon the Negro the traditional culture of the Anglo-Saxon without regard to his condition or environment or more immediate necessities, should correct this mistake, if by personal examination they would see that the mistake is in their misapprehension and not in our practice. Industrial training forms a part of our instruction in more than forty different institutions."

The broad mission of this Association includes a great work among that virile and loyal people, the Highlanders of our Southland. More than two thousand pupils among this people are receiving instruction by the agency of this Society. It is a fact for devout thanksgiving that our work extends upon broad lines, and that the American Missionary Association does not recognize any color line. While it is true that the mission of this Association appears to be more largely to the colored people of the South, it is no small part of our work that we have been permitted to help pay the nation's debt to the brave and trusty mountaineers who embody elements of noblest character, and who did so much in the dark days of the Civil War to save the Union. No doubt the time will come when we, or those who shall come after us, shall see most clearly the wonderful divine providence which has led this Association to blend the destinies of these two races through the mighty regenerating influence of Christian education.

The more fully one is informed of the real spirit and purpose of this Association and the more clearly he sees the results already attained the less inclined will he be to utter any word of criticism or sound any note of discouragement. This work of Christian education in the South is a great work, gaining momentum from year to year, carried on lovingly, patiently, earnestly, unostentatiously.

In his noble address at the close of the last annual meeting, Dr. Noble, the honored President of this Association, said: "Magnificent things remain to be accomplished. What note shall be sounded? What shall be the watchword of the hour? This, just this, and nothing other than this: Keeping at it."

It is evident that the American Missionary Association has nobly fulfilled that watchword since its note was sounded forth at Springfield one year ago. It is for us to thank God and renew our faith and courage, and "keep at it."

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

REV. FRANK S. FITCH, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

Your committee has examined with care and interest the report of Dr. Woodbury on church work in the South. An increase of twenty-nine churches and $16,300 in receipts is most encouraging. We note also the difficulties.

First.—A fluctuating population in many localities, due to transient industries. This would seem to call for preaching and pastoral work in such communities. A definite organization and a permanent building are not always desirable, in order that as the people go elsewhere in quest of labor they may be followed by the preacher and his associates.

Second.—A second discouragement noted is that of political disturbance. This must be most distressing and harmful to church life. The awakening of race and party feeling, leading sometimes to acts of violence, must be a sad interruption to the orderly and devout Sabbath services. Men under such excitement are led to various excesses which harm the soul and interfere with good order in the community. Industry is suspended, homes are neglected, and the sanctuary forgotten.

Third.—A somewhat new difficulty, or an organized form of an old antipathy, is the attitude of organized labor toward the colored artisan. There seems to be a growing unwillingness to admit him to any of the skilled trades. While the work in industrial education at Hampton, Tuskegee, and elsewhere, has been much praised even by Southern officials, the trained artisan is made to feel most keenly the old race prejudice.

This increasing difficulty of retaining one's trade and its opportunities has fostered a migratory habit which is unfavorable to home and church life. Yet Dr. Woodbury finds encouragement in the response to effort made to increase self-support and self-direction in the case of churches. Your committee welcomes this note of hopefulness with joy. That a dependent race should learn to care for interests so important and so delicate as those of the churches gives great promise for the future.

A free church in a free State is the consummate flower of Anglo-Saxon civilization. That the children of the sunny South, imaginative, impulsive, and by nature improvident, should acquire in a generation the power to care for their own church is most gratifying.

To those who question the need among the freedmen and their children of anything more than educational work, we commend this part of the report. It is plainly our duty to give them a training in life as broad as life itself, to discipline the whole man. To make the colored man skilled as a mechanic, or learned in secular knowledge, and leave his religious nature to the superstitions, eccentricities, and immorality of his African inheritance, or ante-bellum ideas of church life, would be to do him a serious wrong, and to neglect our plain duty.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AND ALASKAN WORK.

REV. DAVID BEATON, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

Reports in cold type with statistics are the despair of secretaries and reporting committees. They are specially so in the case of work done among people so diverse from our intellectual and civic habits of life, and so widely scattered over this continent as the Indians are, from the barren tundras of the Arctic to the sunny prairies of the Dakotas.

Concerning the Alaskan Mission the figures are—one school, four missionaries and one hundred pupils. But when you look beneath them you see a lone outpost of spiritual power and civilization, with a heroic man and his wife grappling with all the difficulties of the industrial, social and religious problems of our time. Here is a "kindergarten for children surrounded and hampered by poverty, filth, ignorance, superstition and drunkenness;" also a workshop for making sleds, canoes and ice-drills; again a reindeer herd to keep at bay the grim wolf—famine; and, above all, a private medical practice which providence has forced upon the missionary without the consent of directors or contributing churches. What rude realities! What grim conditions! What life and death battles with disease and hunger!

The fact is, we deal with our missionaries pretty much as boys deal with puppies—throw them into the water to sink or swim. Think of the awful famine time in those lone lands under the Arctic darkness and the snow! The missionary goes his rounds visiting, but carrying his own provisions with him, and the hungry host watches every mouthful the missionary eats. What agony to a cultured Christian man, to have to struggle between the cravings of his own hunger and the feelings of pity in his heart for his starving flock! But, in addition to all this, sickness comes in its most violent forms. Measles are brought in a ship, and young and old die off like flies. School and services are suspended, the lives of himself and his helpless children are imperiled. Is it a wonder that for such a field the missionary says: "All this sickness has shown us more plainly than ever that we need a rude hospital here." And they ought to have it. It is almost inhuman to send our own flesh and blood into such a field without that hospital.

The Alaskan Mission is so near Siberia that these Eskimos whose hearts are being purified by the love of Jesus, and whose minds are being enlightened by the knowledge of God, may yet carry the gospel to the Siberian tribes beyond. If any work shows the power of the Holy Spirit, it is what is done in this poor, lone outpost of seal blubber, driftwood, snow and kind Christian hearts under the Arctics.

Coming to the Indian work proper, we note two items of encouragement—the increase in membership from 1,303 to 1,414, with benevolent contributions amounting to $2,988.14, more than two dollars per member.

The mission settlements in Santee, Neb., and in North and South Dakota comprise the field of operations. The Indian is open to the appeals of the gospel, and the missionaries, both male and female, cover a large tract of country in the way of evangelistic service. The native preachers do a large share of the work of evangelization, and are men of character and eloquence; and their Indian congregations get all this for $200 or $300 a year. In the payment of their native pastors they are evidently as thrifty as the Scotch deacon who prayed God to keep their young pastor humble and he would keep him poor.

Between the lines of this report one can easily see that the newly accepted policy of the Government as to Indian citizenship and education, as well as the new ideals of the Indian which our missionary efforts have created, are creating for our workers the tremendous difficulties incident to a transition period. There is evidence here that these workers are men and women of clear vision and progressive methods, and it is gratifying that the special deputation which visited the fields last year supports the judgment of the missionaries in the strong emphasis laid on the work of education. As they say, "The home day-school, rightly manned, is the most important factor for the regeneration of Indian life."

This transition period, with its reconstruction problems, involves the economic, the educational, and the religious needs both of the Indians as a people, and as a field of Christian missions. But these problems are neither accidental nor unexpected; they are along the very lines of service long acted upon by the far-seeing founders of this Society. That service, as we all know, has included the things that minister to and create the body, the intellect and the spirit; not only evangelistic work, but industrial and literary education, the special training of teachers and ministers, and the moulding of the family and civic life by providing intelligent leaders moved by the aspirations of the gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

In the presence of these trying questions the Society and the churches have great reason for hopefulness and assurance of final success, in the fact that their workers are so many of them tried, experienced and resourceful. Indeed, there is a permanency in the staff, a hereditary character, son following father in a noble spiritual dynasty of work. The cause of the Indian is safe in such hands. They speak their language, have shared their sufferings, assimilated their mental aspirations, and are intellectually and spiritually at home with their necessities and ideals.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHINESE WORK.

REV. JAMES W. BIXLER, CHAIRMAN.

The portion of the Executive Committee's report which is devoted to Chinese missions affords substantial ground for encouragement and hope. If it contains little that is distinctly new, it renders the better service of showing a satisfactory growth and enlargement in the work. Several items in the report have been viewed with special satisfaction by your committee. The first is the continued employment of native Chinese helpers in the work. We commend the wisdom of this practice because of our firm belief that the evangelization of a people can be carried on successfully only by converts from their own number, even when impulse and guidance in the right direction must be furnished by persons of maturer Christian experience and knowledge. We are also gratified by the report that "that there is much preaching of the Word both in our chapels and in the street," and "much of individual service in seeking and saving those as yet unbelievers." In our judgment nothing is more important than straightforward preaching of the Gospel and hand-to-hand work in the effort to bring the unconverted to a knowledge of salvation in their own experience. If confirmation of our opinion regarding the importance of this work is needed, it may be found in the statement of the report that high-water mark has been reached during the year in the matter of conversions. One hundred and eleven were added to the membership of the Congregational Association of Christian Chinese, the indispensable condition of membership in which is credible evidence of conversion. "It is," says the report of the Executive Committee, "the largest number ever added in one year's work. It carries the total number of those offering good evidence of Christian conversion to nearly two thousand." We are not unmindful of the great value of the educational work which is being carried on in all the twenty-one missions, and the last thing we would desire to see is any curtailment of that work, but at the same time we would not have it forgotten that all the instruction in language and in other branches of knowledge given in the mission classes is auxiliary to the work of evangelization. The teaching is excellent bait for the Gospel hook, but it is only bait.

The members of your committee are delighted to know that the burden of bringing to Christ the rapidly increasing Japanese population of our country is weighing upon the hearts of the workers in the Chinese missions. The same motives which prompt to efforts for the evangelization of the Chinese among us operate with equal force for the evangelization of the Japanese, and we trust that means will be forthcoming for the enlargement of this branch of the work to a degree commensurate with its needs and the opportunity opening before our churches. Not less earnestly would we call the attention of the churches to the need of sustaining the general work more liberally. It is poor economy which requires Superintendent Pond to meet one-third of the expense of the Chinese missions by his own solicitations among friends and individual churches. We are glad to know that an additional grant of $1,000 is this year made to the missions, but why should the superintendent not have the entire $7,500 or $8,000 for which he asks? The sum is small enough, looked at from any point of view; and it would be of inestimable benefit to the missions if he could devote all his time to caring for them, without wrestling for a considerable portion of each year with the financial problem. That the American Missionary Association will gladly do everything that the churches will permit them to do in this direction, we are well aware. The thing that we hope for is an awakening of the churches themselves to the practical wisdom and importance of our recommendation. It would not only result in the better oversight and increased fruitfulness of the work already organized, but also permit of doing more for the evangelization of those neglected Chinese who are now without the gospel in isolated villages and in little communities where Chinese laborers congregate. For less cooperation from us than that which is seen in our readily supplying necessary funds for the work, we may not expect the workers to look.

We cannot bring our report to a close without calling special attention to the work for mothers and children. It is difficult work. It requires a vast amount of faith, patience, tact and energy. How well the consecrated women who are engaged in the work meet its varied requirements is shown abundantly in the quarterly letters of the superintendent. The Christian visitors are not welcome in Chinese homes till they first win their way by love into the hearts of the mothers and children; and sometimes the obstacles in their path are worse than those occasioned by narrow stairways, foul alleys, dark rooms and a polluted atmosphere. But they labor on, spending and being spent without the joy of large visible results to sustain them, and frequently waiting long for evidence that the truth of the gospel has entered into a single heart. Blessed are they in sowing beside all waters, and in patiently waiting for the fulfilment of the promise that they shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing their sheaves with them. They are true heroines of the gospel, and richly deserve our prayers and sympathy in their arduous labors. No labor of love brings greater comfort than theirs does to darkened hearts and homes, and none goes deeper in laying the foundations of the divine kingdom in the world.

The steady growth of the American Missionary Association's work from year to year among the Chinese sojourning in our land is matter for profound gratitude and rejoicing, both for the sake of the converts themselves and the missionary labors which they undertake and support in their native land, and we trust that its present rate of increase may be more than maintained in years to come.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PORTO RICO.

REV. F. E. RAMSDELL, CHAIRMAN.

The report on our work in Porto Rico must be necessarily brief, for we are hardly beyond the threshold of that field. At present our denomination is represented by two schools, eight instructors, 306 pupils, two evangelists, two mission stations and two churches in process of formation. Some of the details and special features of the work will be brought out in an instructive and helpful way by Miss Blowers, one of our most efficient workers. The schools have been wisely located at Lares and Santurce. This is already demonstrated by their immediate prosperity and the hearty response of the communities to the efforts in their behalf. The work of education is being followed up by an equally earnest and promising work of evangelization. A real demand for the Gospel exists, and when the truth as it is in Christ is presented, its inherent power of conviction and conversion speedily manifests itself. Viewed as a beginning—and for the present we have no other view—there is substantial success and the promise of a constantly enlarging and gratifying evangelical influence. The dawn of a brighter day is already illuminating Porto Rican life.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

WILLIAM A. AIKEN, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Finance, elected at the annual meeting of the Association, held at Springfield, Mass., October 23d to 25th, 1900, beg to report: That they understand their duties call for an investigation of the affairs of the American Missionary Association from the financial standpoint, especially with reference to the fiscal year just closed.

In passing, they would call the attention of the Association to the fact that they are a committee unrecognized specifically by its constitution and by-laws, and must consider themselves a kind of fifth wheel to an already well-equipped coach. Yet that appendage may have its uses.

This committee passes, in a general way, not only on the work of the treasurer, but upon that of the Finance Committee, which is appointed by the Executive Committee, the chairman of the latter being, ex-officio, a member of the Finance Committee. It also reviews the work of the auditors, allusion to whom will again be made.

Your committee met at the rooms of the treasurer and received information as to the routine of business during the year. They found a very thorough and systematic order of things.

All the affairs of the Association are under the direct charge of an Executive Committee of fifteen members, and these are divided into four sub-committees, viz.: on Finance, Missions, Support, and Appropriations, and all matters to be considered by the Executive Committee are first prepared by the treasurer or secretaries, and referred to the various sub-committees for thorough investigation, and report in writing to the Executive Committee to be discussed and acted upon at their regular monthly meetings.

The treasurer's books were also examined, and the manner of keeping the accounts of the various funds; also the daily records of the condition of expenditures and appropriations. These records were so kept as to indicate clearly the current condition of affairs.

Your committee desire to emphasize the allusion made by their predecessors of last year, to the method of auditing the accounts.

A professional accountant of high reputation is employed to assist the auditors. He affixes his certificate monthly to the several accounts, after going through them and their vouchers in the fullest detail. This relieves the audit from the perfunctoriness which so often marks accounts of this nature, places the Association in line with well-managed business corporations, and gives to your constituency additional grounds for their confidence and support.

Your committee deem it unnecessary in this report to present statements, even in a condensed form, of your income and expenditures, as they consider the treasurer's statement a model of concise presentation, and figures exhibited here would be mere repetitions of what he submits in his report.

Although our examination of the books and accounts was necessarily of a general character, we found the treasurer more than willing to answer all questions (and they were many) to verify all the items of his accounts, and to submit to our inspection anything we asked for.

We heartily endorse the remarks of our predecessors in commendation of the manner in which the accounts of the Daniel Hand Fund are separately kept.

We congratulate the Association upon closing still another year free from debt. This is in itself a testimonial of prudent and harmonious management of its general affairs.

We cannot commend too strongly the methods of making appropriations, and the strict adherence of the management to the rule of keeping current expenditures within the appropriations.

Your committee approve the revised plan for the care and disposal of the Reserve Fund for legacies, as reported by the Executive Committee. It should be said, however, that experience can be the only guide to the best eventual results.

On the whole, your committee strongly commend the business methods employed in the management of affairs. They are entitled to high confidence.

Obituaries.

REV. R. D. JENNINGS.

Rev. Richard Dawson Jennings, our minister at Raleigh, N. C., died at that place on Sunday, February 17th, in the thirty-seventh year of his age. He was a graduate of Talladega College and the Theological Department of Fisk University. His first pastorate was at Knoxville, Tenn., where he served for three years, when he was called to the First Congregational Church of Raleigh, N. C. He was entering his third year of service at Raleigh at the time of his death.

He was an able and faithful minister of the gospel, being held in high esteem, and was greatly beloved by his church and congregation and his brethren in the community. He married Miss Mary E. White, a graduate of Fisk University, in 1896, who survives him with one child.

A memorial service was held by his church Sunday evening, February 24th, when the Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor Society and all departments of the church were represented.

MISS EDNA JENKS.

Miss Edna Jenks died in the hospital at Savannah, Ga., from typhoid fever, March 7th. Miss Jenks had her home in Remus, Mich. She was a teacher in Dorchester Academy, McIntosh, Ga. She was taken ill at the beginning of the year and was tenderly cared for at the school. Recovering somewhat, she was removed to the hospital at Savannah, where every possible attention was given to her. Miss Jenks was a beautiful young woman, lovable and warm-hearted. She was an earnest and devoted Christian worker. She had entered the missionary service from missionary motives, and had deliberately given her life to it. She always spoke peacefully of dying, and her heroic and uncomplaining submission to God's will during these weeks of suffering greatly endeared her to the people to whom her life was a ministry.

REV. HENRY J. JONES.

Rev. Henry J. Jones died suddenly at Oaks, N. C., Saturday, March 9th. He was pastor of the churches at Oaks, Melville and Cedar Cliff. He had been only a year in the active pastorate of these churches, but had already gained the esteem and love of his people. He came from the Theological Department of Howard University, at Washington, D. C., and was an earnest, studious man. The churches of North Carolina will miss his counsel and fellowship. Mr. Jones left a wife and two children.

MISS FANNIE R. RAGLAND.

Miss Fannie R. Ragland died suddenly in her home at Wilmington, N. C. She was only twenty-one years of age, a young woman of education, refinement and Christian devotion. She was educated in Emerson Institute, Mobile, Ala., and Talladega College. She had taught in the State Normal School, but preferred the larger opportunities of missionary work in the American Missionary Association, and took a position in the school at Troy, N. C. She was an efficient teacher, especially interested in the musical development of her people. Just before her death, with feeble voice, she softly sang the hymn beginning "Consecrate Me Now to Thy Service, Lord."

OF

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

The province of the Bureau of Woman's Work of the American Missionary Association is to bring the missionary workers into communication with the women of the churches and to provide for the support of as many of them as possible. In this we have the assistance of women in their State organizations, through the organizing and maintaining of women's societies in the churches and the encouraging of annual contributions.

The total receipts for the past year from Women's Societies are $24,733.71, which amount is included in the report of the Treasurer of the Association. This is a slight advance over the contributions of the previous year. We rejoice in this measure of support from Women's Societies to the large range of missions in the A. M. A. field.

In quite an unusual way the Bureau has served this year as a "question box" or bureau of information to Women's and Young People's Societies. There are no questions so difficult but they may be passed on to some source of reply, and we welcome the spirit of thoughtful inquiry. It is one of the most hopeful signs in the progress of the work. The numerous requests for literature, not simply for anything on missions, but for information on definite subjects, are encouraging. Hundreds of such requisitions have been filled for special meetings besides supplies of leaflets furnished to state officers for their distribution. About ten thousand free copies of pamphlets have thus been sent out. We appreciate the thoughtfulness of those who enclose postage with the requests. It is but little cost to the receiving society and relieves what would otherwise be a considerable draft on the A. M. A. treasury. Requests for speakers have been met by the Secretary and others who represent the work.

Thirty-four missionary letter-writers have corresponded regularly with supporting societies and many thousands of their letters have been circulated. These epistles vary in interest, but fresh items of information are gathered from them and many words of appreciation are written about them. They are to be continued during this new year and may be had of the A. M. A. Bureau of Woman's Work by all contributing societies or those pledging contributions.

Twenty-two State Unions have supported assigned work in the field of the Association, in some cases supporting teachers, in others contributing toward the support of a school. Interest fixed on a particular mission station is more likely to be permanent, and the personal element is found in correspondence with the various missionaries at the station.

The work of the American Missionary Association appeals and should appeal strongly to women. There is a natural, sympathetic bond to the people in our country who are undeveloped, uneducated, despised, wronged, and even in heathenism. We think of the homes, of the mothers and children. We remember that these, numbering about thirteen millions, are a part of our national life, and that a nation does not rise higher than its mothers. We remember the tremendous load of ignorance to be overcome. A strong attraction to this field is found also in the large proportion of women missionaries required in the schools through which these people are reached for their physical, mental and spiritual improvement.

The field work spread on the printed page in the list of missions and missionaries looks like an ordinary system of schools combined with churches. The field work as it really exists is the heart and brain touch of carefully trained, cultured, consecrated followers of Jesus Christ, with the ignorant, sin-marked and often sore-hearted, who have shown that they are capable of better life by their aspiration for it. These missionary teachers are a "voice" preparing the way for a right conception of righteousness that will make the character necessary to exalt the family life and the nation.

Four hundred and fifty-one women have been in this missionary service during the past year; thirty among the Chinese, fifty-five among the Indians and Eskimos, seven in Porto Rico, fifty-one among the Mountain people, and three hundred and eight among the colored people of the South. Seventeen of the graded and Normal schools have been conducted wholly by women, and the principal of one has become the pastor of the church. It is the rule, and not exception, that a church results from the missionary work of an A. M. A. school.

While every year a good proportion of new teachers is introduced to the field, it is, perhaps, not well known that a large number have been in continuous work ten years—many for twenty and a few for thirty years. This degree of permanency secures the value of experience, and knowledge of conditions to be met, while all the newest and best approved methods of school and church work are introduced.

So distributed are these women workers that their influence reaches the entire school enrolment of more than 16,500 pupils. No one can measure the value of this work upon the young in the formation of character and influence in the homes, where opportunity is limited only by time and strength of the teacher. It is a precious missionary privilege, therefore, to pledge the support or even part of the support of a school or A. M. A. missionary in this dark part of America.

The tabulated statement of contributions reveals that seven of the State Unions contribute from $1,000 to $5,000; five contribute from $500 to $1,000; six contribute from $100 to $500; and sixteen contribute less than $100. Every dollar is precious in so urgent a work as this and is used to its full value. The very evenness of the receipts from year to year testify to interest and giving ability. We are thankful indeed that the steady giving is maintained—that the stream flows. But would that the full need could be so understood as to resolve itself into a summons to put the gifts to this American Missionary Association from the women of the churches upon a larger scale. If only the American Missionary Association through the Women's State Unions, could have the active co-operation of every auxiliary there would surely be a marked increase of support. An annual contribution from every woman's society to this particular line of missions is our aim.

It is not for this country alone that we seek this aid, but for "the world," through those who may be reached and saved here. America and China. Let us bear in mind the Chinese in our own land, brought to Christ, giving liberally of their earnings, and returning to their native shores to tell their countrymen of this Saviour. America and Africa. Let us bear in mind the influence a great race of more than 8,800,000 may yet have in the Christianizing of Africa. As a race they are unselfish and kind. No suffering poor are turned away empty if there is even "a handful of meal" or one little potato to share. Many a home of our colored people, kept from distressing poverty by hard labor, is shared with homeless orphans. Even the Indians of this country, Christianized, are ready to work and sacrifice that the good news of redemption in Christ may be sent to their heathen tribes. The missionary impulse following the work of the American Missionary Association is already discernible.

Light up the darkness here by the Light of the World and that light will be carried not only to China and Africa, but with widening sympathy and Christian love, colored people and white of the South, Porto Ricans, Chinese and Indians, as intelligent, faithful followers of the Lord Jesus, will understand that "the field is the world," will read their own commission in the message, and in turn do their part to bring all the nations of the earth to a saving knowledge of God.

REPORT OF AUDITORS.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1901, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all Bonds and other securities held by the Association and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
JOHN E. LEECH,
Auditors.

New York, October 15th, 1901.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER,
MR. JOHN E. LEECH, } AUDITORS.

New York, October 14th, 1901.

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with your instructions, I have made an audit of the accounts of the Treasurer of the American Missionary Association for the year ending September 30th, 1901, and am able to report that I have found entire arithmetical accuracy in the entries, proper vouchers for the payments, and a commendable system of book-keeping, in which the accounts present a clear record of the facts arranged so as to be a check upon each other and practically self-balancing, enabling the result of the operations to be readily obtained, proved by the totals and grouped in detailed reports in a clear and concise manner.

I proved the totals of the receipts and payments entered in the Cash Book, compared the cancelled checks with the entries in the books, using them as vouchers; I compared the totals in the Cash Book with the entries in the monthly reports, including those of the receipts as published in the American Missionary. I have obtained from the several banks and trust companies certificates of the balances to the credit of the Association, and found the same in each instance to agree with the books of the Treasurer. I verified the postings in the General Ledger and the amounts in the Trial Balance Sheet; I assisted in the examination of the securities of the Association, verifying the statement of the Resources entered in the General Balance Sheet.

I found the current payments exceeded the receipts during the year by the amount of $822.16, which, deducted from the balance brought over from last year, leaves a total of $779.74 to the credit of this account.

Respectfully submitted,

FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant of State of New York.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT.

1900-1901.

JOSEPH E. ROY, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

That greatest of all our A. M. A. anniversaries I was permitted to enjoy, assisting in its movement as detailed for this and that. On the Sabbath preceding the "Field Day" in the city, among the thirteen outside speakers, by assignment, I preached upon the work of the Association at the morning service in the venerated First Church, and at night in one of the suburbs I addressed the united congregations of the First and Second Churches upon the "Duty of Keeping the Extension of the Kingdom Up with the Expansion of the Nation."

Springfield Annual Meeting.

During the year the Association was on the program of ten State Associations, viz: those of Indiana, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, South Dakota, Minnesota, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Nebraska, Colorado. For all of them addresses were made by the District Secretary, except those of Colorado and Nebraska, where Rev. Geo. V. Clark, pastor of the Plymouth Church, Charleston, S. C., stood as the A. M. A. representative, making also the leading presentation in the Minnesota body at the First Congregational Church of Minneapolis, and of the state upon occasion of its fiftieth anniversary.

State Associations.

Of Local Associations during the year the local secretary has attended sixteen. In these local bodies, as well as in those of the several states, your representative has been treated in the most courteous and generous way out of the high regard for the exalted work of this Association.

Local Associations.

The number of churches visited by the District Secretary alone, in the states of his district east of the Rocky Mountains, was sixty-four. The number visited by himself attended by Miss D. E. Emerson, the secretary of our Woman's Bureau, was twenty-six. The number visited by him in connection with a delegation from the Republican Valley Association of Nebraska, was eighteen. And the number visited by himself or Rev. Geo. V. Clark in the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska was thirty-four, within the closing month of the fiscal year. Besides these a dozen other churches of the district had the pleasure of hearing from some of our missionary teachers home on their vacation. This makes a total of one hundred and fifty-four of our churches in this district which have heard the work detailed by the living voice of those who are in direct connection with our work.

Local Churches Visited.

Within the year thirty Sunday-schools have been addressed and sixteen Endeavor Societies; annual leaflets circulated, 2,800; other leaflets, 10,000; collection envelopes, 8,000. The literature of the Lincoln Birthday Memorial was duly sent out. A goodly number of Sunday-schools accepted and used the help; the occurrence of another special Sunday-school service and collection interfered with the fullest result of the movement. With this hindrance removed we hope this year to gain a generous response to the proposed celebration of that birthday.

Receipts.

Contributions from the district	$27,473.30
Estates	11,930.36
Total	$39,403.66

Representatives in Local Associations.

Of the ninety-two local associations within the district, sixty-eight have had each a representative to care for the interests of the A. M. A. at their meetings and within their bounds. These representatives deserve the grateful recognition of this Association. They are often put upon the program for their specialty. They keep an eye out for collections in the churches. They stir up other pastors to preach upon the subject and to procure offerings from their own churches. It is an indication of enlarging interest in this mode of promoting the cause of the A. M. A. that these bodies are some of them moving to select such representatives for the position, thus showing their regard for this as a part of their own business as ecclesiastical bodies.

Lantern Slides.

Besides the continued use of this style of delineating our work by myself, I have four sets of fifty slides each over on the Pacific coast upon the four distinctive departments of our service. Two are in the care of Rev. W. H. G. Temple, D.D., of Seattle, Washington, and two are in the custody of Rev. John H. Williams, of Redlands, for Southern California. Then at the Chicago office I have four other sets for gratuitous circulation, provided a collection is taken. Two new sets upon Porto Rico have been provided, one for this interior and one for California. The eye helps the ear to take in the facts of such missionary work.

Touring.

This was an apostolic and primitive Christian style of mission-ating. Our foreign missionaries use it abundantly. Miss D. E. Emerson, the secretary of our Woman's Bureau, after a month in the South, gave April and the half of May to my district, attending and addressing four local associations in Illinois, and the state bodies of Missouri and Kansas, besides speaking to a goodly number of individual churches, among them the First and Central of Topeka, the annual rally of the ladies of the Kansas City churches, the students, of a Sunday afternoon, at Washburn College Chapel. Every where she was much enjoyed, putting the fresh things picked up on her recent tour of the South. Rev. Geo. V. Clark spent two months upon my field, going out with me half of the time and alone the remainder, following an itinerary provided for him without a failure as to an appointment, addressing state associations and local and individual churches, everywhere delighting the people by his logical and eloquent addresses and by his soulful rendering of the slave-songs which he had learned in his own days of captivity. He will always be welcomed within this district or any other.

I am glad to close this report by stating that our friend, Mr. Geo. M. Kellogg, of Missouri, who, the year before, had given six hundred dollars toward the support of the teachers in Porto Rico, has this year made such provision that the Executive Committee have been able to go forward and make a purchase at Santurce of a property for five thousand dollars, which will suffice for a teachers' home and school-room uses. He does this as a memorial of a beloved daughter, deceased.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT.

G. H. GUTTERSON, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

Letters written in year, October 1900 to 1901	6,093
Leaflets sent out	20,214
Collection Envelopes	20,955
Callers received in office	4,515
Requests for speakers	409

For the purpose of administration and for diffusing information and collecting money, the country is divided into several Districts.

The Eastern District embraces the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. There are 1,276 Congregational churches in this District, Massachusetts having the largest number, namely, 600.

The Congregational Year Book for 1901 gives the total contribution from these to the A. M. A. as $53,927. As there are 152,565 resident members in these churches this means an average contribution of about thirty-one cents from each member annually. It is probable, however, that not twenty-five per cent. of this total contribute anything to the missionary work of this Association, or in fact to any missionary work whatever.

Those best acquainted with the facts claim that the giving is done by a very few, that from seventy-five to eighty per cent of our church members, for one reason or another, escape all burden-bearing of missionary work.

The State of Maine increased in home expenses over $25,000 last year, and in benevolences about $5,000.

The office of the A. M. A. in the Eastern District is located on Beacon Street, in the Congregational House, Boston. From this office last year 20,214 leaflets were sent out, 20,955 collection envelopes were distributed among the churches. The business of the Association called for the writing of 6,093 letters, and 4,515 callers were entertained in the rooms.

The direct work among the churches done from this office during the year was as follows:

We have spoken at three State Associations, thirty Conferences of churches, in 183 churches and at one State Convention of the Y. P. S. C. E.; at one Congregational Club, one Ministers' Meeting, the Annual Meeting of the W. H. M. A., and at the Annual Meeting of the A. M. A.; at six clubs and G. A. R. Reunions, 224 times at ladies' meetings, prayer meetings, C. E. and S. S. and children's Societies.

In the performance of these duties we have made 392 addresses and have traveled at least 18,000 miles.

The Delusions of Fleshly Visions Abolished by the Cross.

SERMON

BY

S. PARKES CADMAN.

TEXT.—2 Corinthians, 5th Chapter, 15th and 16th verses.

15th. "And He died for all, that they which live should no longer live unto themselves, but unto Him who for their sakes died and rose again."

16th. "Wherefore we henceforth know no man after the flesh, even though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now we know Him so no more."

St. Paul is here dealing with the question of his apostleship, and his equipment for that high office. He rises to great heights as he shows the motives, the credentials and the grandeur of his calling in Jesus Christ. His hope of immortality and his embassy of the Cross are alike marshalled, in his imagination, before the judgment seat of God, and he calls upon the awe of that supreme hour of assize to fasten upon and solemnize his inmost purpose.

In the light which cannot err, he exercises his ministry as one who must give an account, and in this spirit, "knowing the fear of the Lord," he persuades men.

A motive so high in maintenance, so unsullied by compromise, so sternly purifying, cannot be dispensed with by any servant of the Master. All superficial estimates and fleshly reckonings are here discarded. The hostility of some at Corinth, both to him and to his office, but provokes the Apostle to a superlative utterance which the Church in every age will be wise to recall.

He knew how he stood at the bar of their prejudice and caprice, and in so far as their criticisms were irrelevant, for these he cared nothing. What he was solicitous for, with the yearning he had toward them in Christ, lay in such an appeal to their consciences that later he could appeal to God, to whom all things were open, that in the discharge of his functions he had been simple and sincere.

There were Judaizing teachers at Corinth, dread foes of Catholicity, full of pride concerning outward and visible distinctions. They claimed recognition above others because of their Hebrew descent, with its covenanted glory, their knowledge of the Scriptures, their acquaintance with the earliest Apostles, their gifts of speech, and beyond anything, that they had seen Jesus Himself.

St. Paul removes the ground of boasting from mere appearances and traditional beliefs, placing his claim to apostleship and the knowledge of the gospel in a far higher and more divine region than that of his adversaries.

In so doing, his pent-up feelings burst forth. His heroic personality is moved to its abysmal depths and he shows the difficulty and danger, the rapture and the sanctity of the life he lived as the agent of redemption. Behind all sorrow and joy, or height and depth, or achievement and disaster, abides the motive power explanatory of his revolutionized career, "the love of Christ."

But the personal element is lost the instant he touches that central theme. He becomes inclusive, the passionate intensity accumulates, so that now and here one may feel the beat of St. Paul's heart on every line of this letter. So vividly does he realize the unlimited love and justice and moral compulsion of the Cross, that he declares that it has changed the entire fabric of the universe, and brought about the pivotal fact of "a man in Christ," to be the center of the new creation.

Whatever may be the interpretation of such marvelous language, one bows before the grandeur of this giant soul. His was a mind which could not brook a little plea; there shone in his bosom an unearthly flame, and it made his life radiant with the light as of another world.

There is reason to believe he turns back to the mysterious processes of ecstasy and vision which gave him what he fondly calls "My Gospel" The road to Damascus and the deserts of Arabia were the sacred tarrying times, in which he received heavenly wisdom and a spiritual revelation, derided by his opponents truly, but to him tokens of blessing here and bliss hereafter.

Small wonder is it that he was misunderstood, not only by the age of riot, excess and ethnical selfishness in which he lived, but bitterest of all, by the converts for whom he labored.

Some whispered maliciously of his "outstanding for himself," and "sacred madness" to which he was loth to allude. "Such a lot I have known," he tells them; "but it was an experience between God and my solitary life, and you have no right to speak about it." He mentions these rapt conditions with the reluctance of a reverent soul, and because he knows their value is largely personal and that they are liable to misinterpretation.

I suspect he stands in goodly company as touching this charge. St. Bernard and St. Francis, Luther and Wesley, Henry Martyn and David Brainerd have belonged to it, and a further suspicion is that if the tooth of such madness could bite deeply into the church of to-day, the American Missionary Association would rejoice in the virus it imparted.

If any prophet of God had run athwart the dearest instincts of our race and nation, as did St. Paul, we should have been no better interpreters than were his accusers.

But some things in him could not be denied. He lived a life of fastidious purity, his self-conquest was so great and rare that in enthusiasm and sobriety alike, the one thing that never troubles him is the thought of private ends.

Zeal to-day, and with it a paradisaical vision, sobriety to-morrow, set forth by a grave discourse. Thus the moods and methods vary, but he is always and everywhere abandoned to the will of God and the service of his fellows. The truths he held, held him with unfaltering tenacity, the complacent maxims of the world around were rebuked by his intense earnestness.

What care he for the contemptuous leer of materialistic cliques? They glanced harmlessly off this veteran of the Cross, this man whose attitudes and thinkings and utter scorn of consequence were so sore a problem to those who knew not his secret.

Can we to-day gain any insight, such as will invest our life with any dignity and due proportion and power, by meditating upon these words in which St. Paul defends his course and sustains his ministry?

My brethren, it appears reasonable to believe we may. But like him, our eyes must catch the larger outlook, our heart and brain can move yonder, where our affections should be set, though our feet stay here, busy in duty's appointed pathways.

I am keenly aware it is hazardous to attempt definitions when one is dealing with words which leap from St. Paul's heart, as a river out of a cliff. We feel somewhat what he deeply felt, how impossible is the boundary of the widest thought when it seeks to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge.

But in the fifteenth and sixteenth verses of this fifth chapter, there is for us, for all men, and to the end of time,

THE CHRISTIAN INTERPRETATION OF LIFE

as St. Paul understood it.

He tells us that Jesus our Lord both died and rose again in order that our living may be subordinated to the sacrifice of the Cross and its infinite meanings. And what that sacrifice meant for St. Paul, he claims for the world. No limitations are to be imposed upon its sway, its virtues are a universal property, the doom it broke was broken for the race, the enfranchisement it secured was for the guiltiest soul of man. Its constraints and raptures and evidences were offered to the simple as to the wise. The moral ambitions it bred, the typical virtues it sustained, the spiritual offices it inspired, were for Cæsar as for Cæsar's slave. He tolerates no sullying exclusiveness, but calls upon men everywhere to pour out their devotion and worship for the One who died in our stead and rose again to accept our homage.

SECTION A—THE ORIGINAL GOSPEL.

Lying behind these glowing words is an irreducible belief which forms a large part of the gospel as held by St. Paul and his fellow apostles. The fearless proclamation of this truth drew vast numbers of men in the course of two generations from heathenism to the true God, and from gross and flagrant vice to the purity inculcated by the Sermon on the Mount. It cannot be set aside that this preaching of the Cross, this unqualified statement of the death of Jesus in behalf of all men, is the organic as it is the organizing statement of the New Testament. It is the earliest form of missionary effort upon the doctrinal and practical sides. It was never reserved as a sacred mystery for the philosopher and the theologian. "I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures." This is the word St. Paul hastens to affirm in his magnificent argument for the resurrection. The unity of this view in the minds of the first disciples has given it a place and an authority in Christian thought which have never been dislodged from that day to this.

Conflicting explanations of the fact there have been, modifications induced by temperament and circumstances, unwarrantable and useless computations which sadden the historic theology of the Church universal. But the death of Christ has ever remained, despite the offense of the Cross, and the besetment of beggarly elements of this world, the cardinal factor in creating a new moral order. And a crying need of the opening century is a resetting forth of this unconquerable tenet by which the world is to be subdued unto Christ.

Mark well what the Apostle says, "Christ died for us." It has been acutely observed that St. Paul does not emphasize the fact that Christ lived for us, hungered for us, thirsted for us, was weary for us, was tempted for us. These he did, and for that life which > "Wrought with human hands the creed of creeds,

> In loveliness of perfect deeds
> More strong than all poetic thought" we are adoringly grateful.

Yet St. Paul never mentions the early life until He who was the Prince of all existence, adventured Himself within the precincts of death. Then in Christ's death all died. There seems at first no suggestion of advantage, for one might have expected he would say, hence all remain alive—he says exactly the opposite. The only conclusion is that in some vital sense the death of Christ is ours. He filled our place, He died our death. Out of this mysterious and awful relation, out of the infinitude of suffering and passion which the Cross sets forth, there arose the constraining, uplifting, projecting power of the love of Christ, producing in the spiritual experiences of the believer a similitude of the historic events of the life of Jesus. Such is the Apostle's profoundest word on the soul's appropriation of the gospel.

This is the underlying, interpenetrating thought of the text. It depends for its value upon the Divine Incarnation; it receives sanction from the witness of the great creeds of the Church. It would be perilous to the loftiest interests of Christian truth if ominous silence were maintained as to the unique force and inexpressible significance of what the Son of God accomplished for the human race in His exceeding bitter cry, in His sufferings and travail, in His transcendent victory. If Christ be what He said He was, what we gladly believe Him to be forever more, then the agony and bloody sweat, the cross and passion, the precious death and glorious resurrection, have an import for us no other event in the world can claim.

Surely much of the bleached phraseology which has supplanted the mystical utterance of the Apostle, and which attempts to reduce the force and meaning of this happening, is out of place in Christian thinking. No man can follow Christ who halts at Gethsemane. If there be here no rational basis for pardon, no life-bestowing power, but merely the revelation of transcendent beauty and patience under intolerable wrong, how exasperating are the risks of goodness, and alas! how shall we comfort them that await our message in sin and sorrow and darkness.

Brethren, who go forth to deal with the races which throng our shores and fill the city slum, who speak to the stoical Indian on the plains, to the sanguine black children of the South, to the sagacious Chinaman on the eastern coast, to the waiting inhabitants of the newly acquired islands of the sea, I appeal to you. For you deeply understand that nothing can be wrought unto edification among the ruined conditions of life, such as you daily encounter, save by constant fidelity to the heart and center of the gospel; life in Christ by death to sin with Christ. It was a vehement anti-Christian who wrote—

> "The moon of Mahomet
> Arose, and it shall set;
> While, blazoned as on heaven's immortal noon,
> The Cross leads generations on."

"I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me," said the Master, and this implies much no theology has yet explored and offers to its researches virgin territories such as Dr. Dale used to forecast. In the Cross there are depths which the human heart cannot fathom, deep as it reaches; there are breadths which weary the amplest scope of human life. And this great repository of mercy and love and enduement takes in all ages, all crimes, all thoughts, all aspirations, all sins, all tragedies, all triumphs, all service and all sacrifice, attuning in harmony all the strings of our many-sided human nature, silencing the discords and drawing from all the richest, deepest music of which they are capable. "Christ thus proclaimed is Christ enthroned."

One of the chosen princes of Israel has reminded us, quoting St. John, that "Whoever goeth onward"—with a flash of irony as he quotes the advanced thinker's watchword—"and abideth not in the teaching of Christ, hath not God." He continues, "The modern successors of these proud old incipient gnostics would do well to be advised here."

"To lead minds to see the profound and far-reaching truths that underlie the gospel, what its facts presuppose of God and man, of the Father and the Eternal Word, what they reveal of the heart of things, and of the heart at the heart of them; to lead to the recognition and still more, to the application to individual and social and national life, of the principles that flow from the facts, to disclose to the minds and lay on the hearts of men the Incarnation and sacrifice and reign of Jesus as the world-redeeming power, as the revelation of the perfect life for men and nations, to find and exhibit in Jesus the answer to all the questions of the intellect, the satisfaction of all the needs of the heart, the source and the standard of ethics, the fountain of all wisdom, the renovator of humanity, the purifier of society, the King of men—and to keep fast by the Cross and Passion of that Lord while he is following out the issues of his work to their remotest consequences, these are the sacred tasks of the Christian teacher and prophet. All knowledge may come within his sphere. There is room for the widest culture. But the further the sweep of the circle the stronger must be its center and the center of the universe is none other than the Cross of Jesus." (Maclaren.)

FURTHER. SECTION B—THE EVANGELICAL SPIRIT.

Such a doctrine needs a charisma, it must be accompanied by the evangelical spirit, and any divorce between them is thick with mishap to the holy cause.

That evangelical temper is the atmosphere of the new life which Christ imparts in the Holy Spirit to every humble believing heart. It arises out of this living union, this vital embrace by which we share the glory and power of Christ himself, and are enabled to say, "I live no longer, but Christ liveth in me." The Church of the Living God must participate in His life, for God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. She lacks not scholarship, nor philosophy, nor criticism; she lacks not the accent of conviction, nor the discipline of toil. But we cannot maintain these in their worth and order, we cannot overcome the hostile forces arrayed against the Church and her mission, unless we cling to the plainly spoken promise of Christ that He imparts to us His very life, by the indwelling of the Blessed Comforter and Paraclete.

We live not unto ourselves, but unto Him who for our sakes died and rose again, that we may "fill up that which is lacking of the afflictions of Christ in our flesh for his body's sake which is the church" (Colossians, 1st ch. 24th v.). When St. Paul sees the full extent of God's mercy, when he ponders over the mighty work of reconciliation, when he speaks of the universal peace which reigns, through the offering of the Cross, his heart rejoices that even he is permitted, in the power of regenerate life, to supplement the afflictions of Christ. It is as though he had said, my flesh is privileged to suffer for His spiritual body, even the Church. Upon my shoulder He places the unutterable dignity of cross bearing, and upon my service He stamps the print of the nails.

Have we vainly imagined that such transcendent teaching is peculiar to the New Testament? Then let me forewarn you that you shall find hints and suggestions and enforcements concerning it in the primitive religious ideas of the world. Christ is the desire of all nations, because there are preparations of the heart and mind of man for the gospel of Christianity.

The blessed life of faith, the spiritual condition, the habitual state of the mind, in which the Christian finds distinction from all other religions, is borne witness unto by the past ages.

The Greek tragedians continually teach that sacrifices must be freely offered if the institutions of the state are to be made permanent. The word "to bless," in Anglo-Saxon, is derived from the word blood. There is no halo around the head of any saint which does not show a scarlet hue, and what is the universal law of sacrifice but the way of approach to that solemn altar of the universe where the victor-victim died that He, suffering the just for the unjust, might bring us to God? Diplomacy and ironclads and Krupp guns must not be allowed to rob us of divine favor and apostolic example in the right to suffer, to prove our life by its outflowing sources freely shed when necessary. We must realize the intent somewhat of the words, "I will show him what great things he must suffer for My name's sake."

Dr. Nicoll has told us, with beauty of style and spiritual emphasis, that "Gethsemane is the rose garden of God." The burden of the world's desolation must utterly afflict us, until we mingle our grief with our meat, and through the mist of blinding tears we see the hill of Calvary afresh.

Our records as a nation, especially upon the Puritan side, reveal the sequence of death and resurrection in the believer. Your glorious forerunner, the Apostle Eliot, missionary to the Indians, found in abandonment his joy, and discovered his crown in the grave of a buried self. He had his bitter sorrows, as Cotton Mather quaintly tells us. His sons were desirable preachers of the gospel, but they died before him. He was nailed to the cross of his Master, the grandeur of the world became a very little thing, and as he drew near in great age to make an ending, he was "the more heavenly, the more savoury, the more divine, and scented more of the spicy country at which he was ready to put ashore."

So it remains for us to do who follow in his steps, who seek fresh fields opened up by crimson battle, battle which has decreed and sealed political estate and substantial social gain to the helpless and the far-away. If four hundred thousand men died to save the state, and push forward the best designs of man's unconquerable mind, woe unto us should we falter.

We can send the Bible and teach every man to read it in his own speech, we can hasten forth, crudely to evangelize the world in a single generation. In the black death of apathy, too prevalent now, I would not hinder any good man who is on the errands of the Cross. But be assured that the flowers of God will not grow save where life has been given, life lived out to the full, facing the darkest issue fearlessly, realizing the peace and strength which comes only to those who surrender themselves alive unto God, whose reward increaseth, whose path becomes brighter and brighter until the dawning of the day.

St. Paul gives a graphic recital of the entail of such an offering in this letter, both in its light and shade. (2 Corinthians, 6th ch., 4th to 10th v.).

"But in all things approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses,

"In stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings,

"By pureness, by knowledge, by long suffering, by kindness, by the Holy Ghost, by love unfeigned,

"By the word of truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousnsss on the right hand and on the left,

"By honor and dishonor, by evil report and good report; as deceivers, and yet true;

"As unknown, and yet well known; as dying, and behold, we live; as chastened, and not killed;

"As sorrowful, yet alway rejoicing; as poor, yet making many rich; as having nothing, yet possessing all things."

Yes, death thus worked in him that life may work in the Gentiles. He uses language which would verge on blasphemy did not his heroisms and actual conflicts support it. "I am crucified with Christ, I die daily." He gloried in the cross, not that he did not know Him who hung thereon as God incarnate and the framer of the worlds, casting them from His creating hands into the abyss of space.

But the daily life of the Apostle had thrust him forth into the shame and contempt of the gibbet. Men cast him out, they despoiled him of home, and nation, and kinship and affection. "These things I counted as refuse, that I may obtain Christ," he declares.

His brethren forewarned him of his death, the Spirit moving him forward testified of bonds and imprisonment. He contended with men as wild beasts in a wilderness. He cries out that Demas hath forsaken him and broods over the churches he founded with womanly tenderness and grief, yet he also declares he shall finish his course with joy.

His spotless life appeals to the elders at Ephesus, but does not save him from stonings thrice outside the cities' gates. He staggers onward in his great career, to receive upon his bleeding and almost diaphanous body forty stripes save one. He comes up from the inhospitable sea drenched and shivering. At the world's capital the bestial Emperor awaits this strangest of prisoners. But the fierce exultation of conscious victory surges through his soul. Listen to his inspiring shout as he urges onward, chief of the martyr band: "None of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might complete this ministry and testify the gospel of the grace of God."

The last scene at Rome recalls the first visions at Arabia. While he awaited trial he could reflect for a space upon the spiritual development he had undergone. From the throne of God to the dungeon of Cæsar were a wide interval, but he has measured it all. He began on the hills of the Eternal City, the New Jerusalem, when he gazed upon the ramparts of celestial light where dwell the saints of God. Thus had he entered through the gate, into that habitation, and heard the sounds it was not lawful he should utter. Down from the chorus of the seraphim he came and sank to the deepest grounds of earthly sympathy and constant labor. But each stage of that descent was an expansion; the blessedness and the triumph overwhelmed the lament and the tragedy. The end is near now. He is writing a farewell message to Timothy, whose gentle spirit is so grateful to his fiery soul. He knows that the axe is at the door, but he knows more, that Christ has won and Babylon has fallen, and uplifted in that great moment his swan song reverberates beyond the death-chamber and echoes down the corridors of time: "I am now ready to complete the sacrifice, and the time of my departure is at hand. Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown of righteousness."—"Thanks be unto God, who ever leadeth His servants to triumph in Christ."

SECTION C—THE FLESHLY VISION.

One theme remains to be mentioned.

The words of the text and context cannot be overlooked in their application to men and the old ways of estimating men. It is evident that St. Paul holds that to those who put faith in Christ and who yield themselves to the controlling and moulding influence of His love, the world has altogether changed. Its complicated forces and influences, at whose mercy we seem at times to be, are the servants of this great conception. This discovery has broken the material and social fetters which formerly held in bondage the thought and life of men, and we now know that all things are ours, because they subserve the great purpose of God in Jesus Christ. The Christian Church has great need to lay these words upon its heart. We have been too obedient to the worldly spirit in maintaining distinctions which are without any ground in Christ—wealth, learning, social position, the barriers of race and creed. These are very real in the outer circle of worldly estimate, but they are meaningless in the new life in Christ and ought never to be made by its professors. Nothing is more narrowing or impoverishes the soul more certainly than when we allow the catholic estimate to be reduced and limit ourselves to a very small area of the possessions which Christ claims in their entirety.

These varying and conflicting estimates exhaust much of theological and ecclesiastical history for the past twenty centuries.

It is unnecessary for me to recall them to minds more familiar with them than I am myself; but our own history as a nation is, to my thinking, a large interference with those customs which segregated mankind, and it was by the distinct providence of God that, to use Mr. Canning's fine phrase, "we turned to the new world in order that we might redress the balance of the old." The main trend of our life as a people, steadily persistent, has gone to show that carnal distinctions perished on the Cross. The nails which tore the flesh of Christ pierced the heart of tribal factions and international feuds. The lofty scorn of intellectual cults, the esoteric pretensions of the initiated, the barbarism of nations brutalized by the lust of power, the endorsement of mammonism as a supreme concern, these were doomed in the death of Jesus. So says the Apostle; and he further declares that we also died unto them there.

The Church must bear her faithful witness to these things if the missionary spirit is to be maintained. She must lift up her eyes and look upon the fields already white unto the harvest. But no such vision is hers until she views every man in his direct relation to Jesus Christ, the Redeemer and Lord of all, and knows him thus not on the surface but in the heart. There can be no healthy religious or sociological progress until the spiritual root of it is thus stimulated.

Nor is it safe for us to think that the men who are intellectually proficient, and who devote their lives to thought and science and poetry can be intrusted with this task. In so far as they have contributed unto it we honor them, and we cannot honor them too freely or too heartily. They have often done their best for us in the seclusion of their libraries; but the number of them who, like John Ruskin, made any effort to form such a life as they imagined for others is very small. It is becoming larger, thanks to the spread of the spirit of Christ; but when you look over the list of those among the learned and the wise who have forsaken all to give practical lessons to a fellow-man, or founded any association for mutual love and enlightenment, it is, I repeat, surprisingly scanty. A photograph of an iceberg and one of the sun are exactly the same temperature as pictures, but how different the reality. So is it with the race in its sin and dissipation; it calls for personal redeeming efficacy. This cannot be met with urbanities and felicitations and great literatures. The grace and high thinking of the schools and academies have far less power here than we sometimes imagine. What such drastic needs demand is the frank recognition of brotherhood and common redemption and sonship in the Kingdom of God, and personal service face to face and hand to hand and heart to heart. They will not be contented with the image of these things reflected in literature, however great.

Ruskin writes to Charles Eliot Norton, when he has retired to the Alps broken by his campaign against the self-complacent indisturbable British conservatism: "I am still tormented between the longing for rest and lonely life and the sense of this terrific call of human crime for resistance and of human misery for help, though it seems to me as the voice of a river of blood which can but sweep me down in the midst of its black clots, helpless."

St. Paul looked out upon a world infinitely worse than the England of Ruskin's day, but with what different results. Its appalling conditions, when compared with the subsequent spread of the Gospel, have made one of the best apologetics for the divine origin of Christianity, and had John Ruskin possessed the deeper grasp of this entire question, of how we look upon our fellow-men, upon their wealth and environment, their poverty and shame, their righteousness and sin, he could have shared in the illustrious hopes of the prisoner who died shouting in triumph.

It is safe to say that had the world depended upon its wise and great ones, then it had not known God. Many of these still refuse to learn the thought of the great Florentine, that all science and philosophy and education are the outflowings of Pentecost and its regenerating power. They have too often turned wisdom's weapons against herself, and in their criticisms and complaints concerning evangelical Christianity, we frequently discover that she nursed the pinion which impelled the steel; she supplied these men the life and light they would fain deny to her.

Brethren, let no man glory in men, or allow a mistaken intellectual servility to deflect us from the central authority in Christ. If education cannot protect the higher issues of life in wisdom, love and brotherhood from the lower forces of sin and the reign of selfish desire, much less can legislation, or heaped-up wealth, or the extent of territory and the opulence of its resources. And education has never, when unaided, succeeded in doing this. "The world," said Matthew Arnold, "could not live by Greek culture," and he was the herald of sweetness and light. "The world could not live by it." There's the rub. Dr. Hayman, in an article written for the Fortnightly Review some years ago, declared that if a map of Europe were before us, shaded in proportion to the known vice and crime, the darkest shadows would seem to rest exactly where the boast of intellectual privilege is greatest—in Saxony, the very shrine of modern culture and the fortress of free thought. He adds statistics to prove the turpitude. Nor is this infrequent; the laurel has often been trailed in the dirt, and pestilence has exhaled from the garden of the Muses.

Count over the great possessions of civilization and you will discover their source in the divine Reconciler and in the fruits of His reconciliation which are ripening the world over, and when I use the term civilization, I mean by it, in brief, liberty which Christ imparts to every man, liberty in all its meanings, and safe-guarded by its own inherent moralities from any license, and with it the power of bearing it and using it as a sacred duty and privilege and to the advantage of our fellow-men.

I mean the growth of honor and manliness and unselfishness and sincerity, and the strength of the social countenance no longer given to defraud any human being of a particle of his right and inheritance, but always and cheerfully set for the virtues which ennoble and sweeten life.

There is scarcely a monstrous paradox in the social order to-day which cannot be traced to the refusal of a man to link every other man with the efficient causes of the Kingdom of God, and the failure to look upon him as a brother in Christ, and to estimate him by the law of Christian comity.

In your toil the willing grace of God ever seeks all men among whom you labor to bring them unto the holy fellowship of this glorious Gospel. You are nowhere required to place any limits upon your efforts; you are everywhere admonished not to do so. In Christ there is neither bond nor free, Jew nor Gentile. The obscurity, the poverty, the wretchedness of our various fields signalize them for us. They must be first and foremost in every consideration and effort. Pagan philosophers would have mocked such a sentiment as this, but it formed the mainspring of Roman rehabilitation after the shattering blow of the Reformation, and none can read the story of her earliest missionaries of the Cross in America, explorers and monks who belonged to that ancient faith, without exclaiming: "Would to God their zeal had been ours or our creed had been theirs!" Carlyle, to whose works John Morley pleasantly refers as the "Gospel of Silence in thirty volumes," speaks of the war for the Union, which blazed your pathways into the fastness of American heathenism, as "The Nigger Agony of the United States."

He is in continual revolt against the broad principles of Christian democracy, and is always making his eloquent pleas for force and the hammer of Thor. His amazing genius did not save him from the delusions of the fleshly vision, and much which he has to teach concerning our mission to our fellow-men is a recrudescence of theories which have been destroyed by the sacrifice of the Cross.

Another evil result of this defect in the fleshly outlook upon life was pointed out by Edward Irving in his criticism of the drift of error in the philosophy of these times, and all he surmised and predicted then has come to fulfillment since. "It seems to me," said he, "that there is a confusion of essential distinctions, an attempt at two standards of moral judgment, one for the man of genius and literature, the other for the vulgar."

Mr. Irving was right. We who stand behind the work of this Association are continually met by the mistaken assumption that men of great gifts are possessed of equivalent morals, and that the prerogatives of genius enable it to be a law unto itself. You who labor among the millions of our colored citizens and Chinamen and Indians find the same false view based upon the accident of birth, and the fact of superiority is made to depend upon the tinge of the skin. Sometimes in the pictures of the work you are so splendidly doing we see the ragged and woe-begone condition among those to whom you have been sent by Christ; but I have sometimes surmised that if the hidden man of the heart could be revealed by a spiritual X-ray, we could furnish you sorrier spectacles from the centers of civilization than you find on the rim.

Let us away with these base perversions of our national life. Let us fight to the death that which will slay us if we do not slay it. The idea is practically held, even when theoretically repudiated, that moral poverty can be atoned for by mental wealth and racial prejudice. When a preacher of righteousness accuses one of these men of reversing the decalogue, he is reminded of his commercial achievements, of his victorious campaigns, of his political eminence, of the color of the skin, or of some gift of speech and action which should exclude this favorite son from criticism. Morality here is in as much peril as faith when we have writers who would fain persuade us that we attach a fictitious value to obedience and to righteousness, and that we have need to revise our Puritan judgments. But we shall do nothing of the kind, because we cannot, as missionaries of the Cross, accept intellectual eminence as a sign of lofty morals, any more than we can receive tickets of physical weight as certificates of character.

We cannot shut out from the inclusive meanings of the blessed evangel any single child of the race, and we rejoice in the courage of our Chief Magistrate, who receives at the Executive Mansion of this nation a distinguished son of our African citizenship who is an apostle of the principles for which I am pleading. Therefore, the criticism of the princes of literature and the animadversions of scientific theories, which have transgressed their legitimate limit, and the vulgar taunts of men who do not understand that God values one human soul for which Christ died more than all the gold of the earth, will no longer trouble the ambassadors of this Gospel, who bear in their bodies and spirits the marks of the Lord Jesus. Let us push it forward with the noble simplicity of the text, and conscious that in the end the day is ours.

There is another thought involved in and arising out of this Scripture, which is this, that human life, stripped of shrouding mantles and disguise from the beginning until now, sets forth great and outstanding facts of the highest practical value for our effort. Conscience and reason and judgment have been so powerful and wide-reaching, that in all ranks and conditions of men they form a safe court to which we may appeal. They have not only served to chasten the passions of mankind; they have directed those passions toward the light of life.

Socrates' "Adumbration of a Conscience," the lofty speculations of Plato, the advance in ethical perception of the Stoics, the meditations of the East, the legislative vigor of the West—these all proclaim a determinative fact that men have a certain religiousness of nature. They contain ideas, capacities, instincts and aspirations which, though often obscured, are never obliterated.

It is not the business of the Church to create but to discover these, and the later fields of Christian enterprise, by their large success, show the truth of the argument. A Rabbinical legend tells us that when the law was given forth at Sinai, all unborn Jews were present to hear it, and they afterwards entered the world familiar with its thunders.

Brethren, Christ completed that legend at Calvary, where, in full view of the Cross, and knowing, as none else knew, how its hidden meanings beleaguered every human heart, he said, "All souls are mine." Of His fullness they have all received, and grace for grace. Men draw near to your ministry, not in utter nakedness, but with the trailing cloud of glory clinging to them.

They come to the word of the preacher possessed of the light which Wordsworth has described in immortal stanzas written in the dewy calm of his mountain home, those thoughts,

> "Which, be they what they may,
> Are yet the fountain light of all our day,
> Are yet a master light of all our seeing;
> Uphold us, cherish—and have power to make > Our noisy years seem moments in the being > Of the eternal silence."

Tertullian's cry for the heathen in their native state, how that the Gospel had need of man, simple, and untouched by the academy, without the veneer of the thinkings of men, is not without meaning for the American Missionary Association. We shall place no less emphasis upon Mr. Carlyle's importance and the need of such master minds because we insist on the redemption of the race to which Tertullian and Booker T. Washington alike belong.

We live in the heart of a people whose genesis and history are providential, whose progress has been superb, whose future contains the auguries of world-democracy, and its weal or woe.

We are the sons of men whose sturdy Protestantism was the child of conscience, the pupil of philosophy, the companion of poetry and the interpreter of God afresh. To no other people of the earth does the world look as it does to us for answers to some of its most vital and pressing questions. Our late birth, our happy deliverance from the evil necromancies of the earlier times, our faith and ancestry, our message and its lawful import, will compel us to render the answers I name.

In the meantime our stewardship is being tested by the presence of so many races and colors within immediate reach of our civilization and dwelling beneath the one banner. As we deal with these so will God deal with us. Faithful here we shall be called to larger trusts, but if our fealty is lacking, the seeds of disintegration and decay will quickly ripen.

The Teutonic blood from which we sprang disturbed the philosophic dreams of Marcus Aurelius. Tacitus speaks of this forest-loving parentage with contempt for their barbarism and admiration for their wild daring. Neither of these great Romans imagined such a race would be the supplanters of their own, that it would assert a chief and lordly place in Europe, occupy the half of a new-found world, inherit India and fill the islands of the seas. That it would breed heroes and statesmen, men of blood and iron, such as the great Charleses, Franconian Henrys, Norman Williams, Plantagenet Edwards—this was scarcely possible.

But, under the history of the wonderful transition of the Cross, these shaggy woodsmen went further, and produced Bacon and Shakespeare, Goethe and Erasmus, Luther and Knox, Wesley and Washington, Lincoln and McKinley.

What ever-accelerating force, what ever-increasing influence, history here testifies! And the religious society was always the forerunner of such revolutions, the Christian Church always marched at the head of these changing civilizations. At the moment when the Roman Empire was breaking up, when political unity perished, then religious unity appeared; and the idea of a universal spiritual society saved the world from frightful disorder. These things are for our encouragement, to warn us against the peril of departure from the sources of our strength. In the ending of a splendid utterance at Boston a few months ago, when the Home Missionary Society had completed the seventy-fifth anniversary of its growing usefulness, Dr. Lyman Abbott succinctly portrayed the situation. He said: "It is for us Christian men and women, representing here to-day the great constituency of the Congregational churches, representing in some sense here to-day the greater constituency of all the Christian churches of this land—it is for us to see to it, God helping us, that this nation shall make a revelation of God of which we shall not be ashamed; that we shall find a principle of unity that will make out of these discordant nationalities one Christian people."

Dr. Abbott spoke a sound word of prophecy then, and since he uttered it the blood of another martyr President bids us hasten to make that revelation by showing the vision Paul had of the Cross of Reconciliation, by claiming with him, as a principle of unity, "Henceforth know we no man after the flesh."

We have seen that the fleshly estimates will not carry forward the building of the Kingdom of God, and, because of this, they fail in the building of the state. Secular interests, trade combinations, military alliances, racial sentiments, patriotic effusions, will alike decay unless the true life develops them from within. A strong, active community of faith and love must be behind the moral development of society, and a state which, by this indwelling grace, though not by any definite legislation, is not in the deeper sense a church, is not long for this world a state.

O, America! most favored and blest of any land, if the light within thee be darkness, how great is that darkness. In vain our manifold equipments, if the heart beating under this huge body is not right and clean and good. Then comes the day of poverty, a destitution the bitterest and most fatal which can afflict an intelligent people conscious of the forfeited presence of the living God. Poverty of conscience, of soul, of outlook, such as poisoned the springs of life in the gifted peoples of the past, and, though the stream continued to flow through fair landscapes, it was foul and deadly; surely

> "This is death, and the sole death,
> When man's loss comes to him from his gain,
> Darkness from light; from knowledge, ignorance,
> And lack of love from love made manifest.
> A lamp's death, when replete with oil, it chokes;
> A stomach's, when surcharged with food, it starves."
> —Browning: "A Death in the Desert."

In southern Italy there spreads a famous landscape of extraordinary loveliness, a favored spot of bridal between the earth and sky. And yet the whole region is volcanic, the columns of smoke and steam arising out of the dark-leaved olives, the purple vineyards and the fragrant roses. Beneath all the opulence of color and smell and fruit there rages a fathomless abyss of fury and of flame. Our civilization, apart from the Gospel, is a paradise within a crater, and ever and anon, as in Buffalo's tragedy, we shrink back from the horror and the awfulness of this perversion.

We should be gratefully thankful for such a gathering as this, if only from the instinct of self-preservation. Our millions should flow to its coffers; for it our tears should fall, for it our prayers ascend. We should keep the Gospel by imparting it, and find it scattering to increase, blessing both him that gives and him that takes; and when our eyes are constrained and purified by the sweet influences raining from the Cross, we shall behold men as He who hung thereon saw them, and capture the complex forces of to-day as did St. Paul the corrupt ones of his own time.

THE CONCLUDING WORD.

Comrades in this hallowed service, permit a son in the gospel to offer you heartfelt congratulations upon the work of the Association in the days that are past. You have made an entrance gate for the divine life this broad land over. You have steadily refused, in the presence of hostility of a persuasive kind, to see men after the flesh. You know, more than any of us, the energy of that great love which to-day is enthroned above, because yesterday it was crucified here. You have gone out, desiring not the isles of the blest, nor the quiet seats of the just, to live the life and maintain the defense and establishment of the city of God upon the earth. May I venture to plead for you, for myself, for the church on earth, that our supreme need is named by the Apostle in the last word of the text: A new vision of Christ, a quickening of the return movement of Jesus, that every thought may be brought into captivity unto His obedience.

Exactly what the word of St. Paul means the scholars have not determined. But this much seems certain. He would say, Before the great divide in my career, my Messianic conception was essentially local, and purely carnal, I identified the great Deliverer with appearances, with national interests and political restoration. I did not then know Him as the world's Priest and King.

But when One died for all, that meant for me universal salvation. When One rose again, that meant universal lordship. He does the same infinite service for all; He makes the same infinite claim upon all. Henceforth I know even Jesus after the flesh no more.

How strangely this experience has been repeated in the history of the church. With what belittling ideas of elect nations and men have we reduced the Cross and its meanings. And although the New Testament literature of the gospel contains all the necessary conditions to put us within its vital touch, yet even here the historical surety is wisely guarded by economy of revelation.

For behind and above and forever superior to the Christ of prophecy, the Christ of the Apostolic writings, the Christ of the past ages and conflicts, there sits enthroned—

The Living Christ of to-day, the ever present Christ of all ages, who doth not faint nor grow weary, and whose years shall not fail. In the administration by His holy Spirit of the blessings of redemption, it is our distinct privilege that God should thus reveal his Son in us, even as he did in Paul, that we might also preach even to the Gentiles. And when this has been accomplished, if we remain obedient to the heavenly vision, then methods may change and theologies crumble, and the horizon widen, and worn-out conceptions break down. But through these fissures and rents the new life will pour and carry greater channels of blessing for itself. Two thousand years ago the weary watchman queried the night, and said, "We see not yet all things subjected unto Him." What then was the basis of their confidence? Ah! "We see Jesus."

And we see all men in Jesus, and the healing of all their hurt by Jesus, and their eternal sonship and heirship through Jesus; and seeing Him, we wait with holy patience and loving labor until He hath made the pile complete.

Shepherd and Bishop of souls! Clothe Thy servants with this authority and baptize them with this unction.

We have sought a glimpse of Thy beautiful and radiant form, who for the suffering of death art now crowned with glory and honor. We are comforted to remember that both He that sanctifieth and they that are sanctified are one, for which cause Thou are not ashamed to call the humblest and the lowliest Thy brethren.

Now send us forth again in the unity of Thy life, in the clemency of Thy love, in the power of Thy accompanying presence, until the world, rid of its fleshly entanglements, shall be Thyself re-incarnate, robed in Thy resurrection beauty, and immortal in the gift of Thy life. Amen!

BRIEF HISTORY.

Organization. The American Missionary Association was formed in 1846. It is distinctively a Christian missionary society to spread the gospel of Christ wherever it has opportunity. It was organized with pronounced opposition to slavery, which then existed, and against all race and caste prejudice, which still exists. It was preceded by four recently established missionary organizations, which were subsequently merged into it. They were the Amistad Committee, the Union Missionary Society, the Committee for West India Missions among the recently emancipated slaves of Jamaica, and the Western Evangelical Missionary Society for work among the American Indians.

In the foreign field, in 1854, its laborers numbered seventy-nine, located in West Africa, Jamaica, the Sandwich Islands, Siam, Egypt among the Copts, Canada among the colored refugees and in North America among the Indians.

The home department embraced two distinct fields, the West and the South. There were 112 home missionaries employed by the Association in 1860, fifteen of them being located in the slave states and in Kansas.

The missions in the slaves states gave rise to some of the most stirring events in the history of the Association, which has the distinction of beginning the first decided efforts, while slavery existed, to organize churches and schools in the South on an avowedly anti-slavery basis.

Among the Negroes. The crisis so long impending came at length, and the Union armies, entering the South in 1861, opened the way for the instruction and elevation of the colored people. The Association felt itself providentially prepared to engage in this work, and the first systematic effort for their relief was made by it. Large numbers of "contrabands," or escaping fugitive slaves, were gathered at Fortress Monroe and Hampton, Va., and were homeless and destitute. The Association, on the 17th of September, 1861, established the first day-school among the freedmen. That little school laid the foundation for the Hampton Institute which the Association founded later, and was the forerunner of the hundreds that have followed.

The Proclamation of Emancipation, dated January 1, 1863, insured the permanent freedom of Negroes who reached the Union lines. The American Missionary Association rapidly extended its work. At Norfolk, the school of the previous year now numbered 1,200 pupils. Teachers were also sent to Newbern and Roanoke Island, N. C., to Beaufort, Hilton Head, St. Helena and Ladies' Island, S. C., and to St. Louis, Mo.; and its force was scattered over the field held by our armies in the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas, Missouri, and Kansas.

Close of the War. Freedmen's Bureau. Boston Council. The year 1865 was marked by the close of the Civil War, by the establishment, by act of Congress, of the Freedmen's Bureau, and by the holding of a National Council of Congregational Churches in Boston, which recommended to the churches to raise $250,000 for the work among the freedmen, and designated this Association as the organization providentially fitted to carry it forward. The Association accepted the responsibility, appointed district secretaries at Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and collecting agents in other portions of the Northern states. It also solicited funds in Great Britain, and succeeded in securing that year a little more than the $250,000 recommended by the Council. Its receipts from all sources ran up from $47,828 in 1861, to $253,045 in 1866, and $420,769 in 1870.

But in the South there came a reign of terror under the infamous Ku-Klux Klans—the Thugs of America. The colored people were often assaulted by mobs, dragged from their homes at midnight, and shot down in the streets. But there was no want of courage on the part of our teachers to enter or remain in the field; the number of teachers, which was 320 in 1865, was enlarged to 528 in 1867, 532 in 1868, and 533 in 1870.

Permanent Educational Institutions. It was during this very period that the beginnings were made for most of our permanent educational institutions. The Association must train the teachers and preachers for this people.

The Association now sustains as higher institutions, Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana; Tillotson College, Texas, and J. S. Green College, Georgia, together with forty-three normal and graded schools and thirty-two common schools scattered over the South and among the mountains, five schools among the Indians, twenty-one among the Chinese on the Pacific Coast, one in Alaska and two in Porto Rico.

Theological departments also have been established in Howard University, Fisk University, Talladega College and Straight University. Industrial instruction first began in Southern mission schools in Talladega, Ala., and was early introduced into many of our schools and has been constantly extended. Talladega College and Tougaloo University have large farms. In all the larger institutions and normal schools mechanical arts are taught to the boys, and household work, cooking, sewing, washing, nursing, etc., to the girls. From these schools go forth annually hundreds of well-qualified teachers and ministers.

Church Planting. Simultaneously with the founding of these permanent institutions, the Association began the planting of churches among the freedmen. They were formed mainly in connection with the educational institutions, and were intended to be models of true church life. The work of church planting has been pressed forward with a steady hand until the churches now number 249, located in nearly all the states of the South, among the Negroes, the mountaineers and the Indians, with most fruitful results. Sunday-schools, temperance efforts and revivals of religion have been marked features in the work. Christian Endeavor Societies were promptly organized and have been rapidly multiplied.

Conferences or asssociations have been formed, and of these there are now nine, designated as the Conferences of North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Mountain Work. The early labors of the Association in home mission work were directed to the white people of the West and South. The mountain region of the Central South embraces West Virginia, southwestern Virginia, southeastern Kentucky, western North Carolina, eastern Tennessee and portions of northern Georgia and northern Alabama. It is 500 miles long and 200 miles wide, and contains a population of about 2,000,000, seven-eighths of whom are white. Churches, preaching stations or schools have been established along or near the line of railroads traversing the mountain districts of Kentucky and Tennessee, and sweeping nearly across both states; in Kentucky at Williamsburg, Pleasant View, Corbin, Grey Hawk, Combs and Campton; in Tennessee, at Jellico, Pomona, Grand View, Pleasant Hill, Bon Air and Mill Creek; in North Carolina, at Saluda, Whittier and Blowing Rock; in Alabama, at Nat (Bending Oaks) and Joppa. The Sunday-school work in these districts renders most efficient service in laying the foundation for churches and day-schools, and in promoting the cause of temperance.

The Indians. Some of the earliest labors of the Association were among the Indians. In 1852 it had twenty-one missionaries stationed among the Indians of the Northwest. Various causes conspired to the gradual diminution of these missions. But in 1882 an arrangement was made with the American Board by which it transferred to the Association its Indian missions in this country, and the Association withdrew from missions in foreign lands. At the time of the transfer the Association had missions at S'kokomish, Wash., Leach Lake, Minn., and Spokane Falls. The transfer from the Board committed to its care the mission and school at the Santee Agency, Neb., Oahe, S. D., with outlying stations on the Cheyenne and White Rivers, and the mission and school at Fort Berthold, N. D. Since these missions and schools came under the care of the Association the facilities and force of workers have been increased, and missions have been added at Fort Yates, N. D.; Rosebud, S. D.; the Crow Agency, Mont., and the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Agency, Oklahoma. The churches number twenty, with a membership of 1,414. Schools number five, with 207 pupils. The out-stations number fifty-two.

Alaska. Our Alaskan Mission at Cape Prince of Wales was formed in 1890. It is now entirely supported by the special contributions sent to our treasury for this purpose. In connection with the educational and mission work a herd of reindeer is in the care of a missionary. The report of our missionaries in Alaska presents a very hopeful picture of work among the Eskimos.

Chinese in America. The American Missionary Association was one of the pioneers in mission service among the Chinese immigrants to California. It began the work as early as 1852. In 1874 Dr. W. C. Pond, pastor of the Bethany Church, San Francisco, was appointed superintendent.

The number of workers is forty-six, and schools twenty-one, located at Berkeley, Fresno, Fruitland, Los Angeles, Marysville, Oakland, Oroville, Pasadena, Petaluma, Riverside, Sacramento, San Bernardino, San Diego, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Vernondale, two at Santa Cruz, and three in San Francisco.

Over a thousand of these pagans have come into the Christian life, and a number of them have returned to their native land as missionaries.

The converted Chinamen have long desired the establishment of missions in their native country, to which, if they should return thither, they might resort as a Christian home, and from which they might go forth for mission work among their countrymen. The Chinese Missionary Society, composed of those who have been converted in Christian missions, and which was organized in 1886, and commenced work in China in 1890, has already contributed above $15,000 to missions in China. With this they have established headquarters at Canton with property worth $40,000. They have also property in Hong Kong valued at $9,250. They have also a twenty years' lease of a good chapel in Ci Ning City, where they have organized a church.

Porto Rico. The American Missionary Association follows the flag. It did this in the Civil War, bringing the blessings of Christian instruction to the Negroes. It followed the same course at the close of the war with Spain. Porto Rico came under the flag and became a part of the national territory. The responsibility for the Christian instruction of the people fell with especial force upon our American churches. The American Missionary Association carefully investigated the field through representatives who were sent to the island. The need was found to be very great. There was an immediate demand for well appointed Christian schools for the instruction of children and youth, and also for the preaching of a broad and free gospel to the people. In 1899 eight teachers were sent to this field to establish and maintain these schools, and an evangelist to preach the gospel as widely as possible throughout the island.

Two schools have been established. One is located at Santurce, near San Juan, a strategic position for a large work; the other is at Lares, in the western portion of the island. The evangelist holds a large circuit of preaching stations through the eastern portion of the island, where there are scarcely any other missionary efforts. There is great need for increased income to the Association to meet the demands of this large and growing field,

Bureau of Woman's Work. Formed in 1883. It gives direction and efficiency to the various lines of women's aid to the American Missionary Association. Women's State Missionary Unions and organizations co-operate in raising funds for the prosecution of the work of the Association.

Publications. The American Missionary magazine is issned monthly by this Association. It contains fresh information from the mission fields, the reports of importance of various committees and other matters of value to those studying these great mission fields. The magazine is published at fifty cents per year. It is generously illustrated, and presents in new form fresh material in each issue.

Large numbers of interesting leaflets are also published by this Association. These leaflets bring the most recent information obtainable and must stir missionary enthusiasm. They are issued for general use, and are distributed as desired among the constituents and those interested in the great national and religious problems. Communications should be directed to the editor.

The American Missionary Association.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. This Society shall be called the American Missionary Association.

ART. II. The object of this Association shall be to conduct Christian missionary and educational operations and diffuse a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures in our own country and other countries which are destitute of them, or which present open and urgent fields of effort.

ART. III. Members of evangelical churches may be constituted members of this Association for life by the payment of thirty dollars into its treasury, with the written declaration at the time or times of payment that the sum is to be applied to constitute a designated person a life member; and such membership shall begin sixty days after the payments shall have been completed. Other persons, by the payment of the same sum, may be made life members, without the privilege of voting.

Every evangelical church which has within a year contributed to the funds of this Association, and every State or local Conference or Association of such churches, may appoint two delegates to the Annual Meeting of the Association; such delegates, duly attested by credentials, shall be members of the Association for the year for which they were thus appointed.

The pastor of any evangelical church contributing to the funds of the Association within a year is thereby constituted a voting member for that year.

ART. IV. The Annual Meeting of the Association shall be held in the month of October or November, at such time and place as may be designated by the Association, or, in case of failure to act, by the Executive Committee, by notice printed in the official publication of the Association for the preceding month.

ART. V. The officers of the Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee of fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot.

At the first Annual Meeting after the adoption of this Constitution, five members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of one year, five for two years and five for three years, and at each subsequent Annual Meeting three members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of five years, and such other members as shall be required to fill vacancies. No member of the Executive Committee who has served one full term of five years shall be eligible for re-election till one year has passed.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents, and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in office occurring between the Annual Meetings; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision when necessary for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the Executive Committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the Annual Meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

ART. VII. No person shall be made an officer of the Association who is not a member of some evangelical church.

ART. VIII. Missionary bodies and churches or individuals may appoint and sustain missionaries of their own, through the agency of the Executive Committee, on terms mutually agreed upon.

ART. IX. No amendment will be made to this Constitution except by the vote of two-thirds of the members present and voting at an Annual Meeting, notice of the amendment having been given at a preceding Annual Meeting.

CHARTER OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

Being Chapter Three Hundred and Fifty-eight of the Laws of 1862, as Amended by Chapter Seven Hundred and Ninety-Six of the Laws of 1871, Chapter Fifty-two of the Laws of 1886, and Chapter Three Hundred and Ninety-five of the Laws of 1889 of the State of New York.

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SEC. 1. William E. Whiting, Thomas Ritter, Henry Belden, James O. Bennett, Anthony Lane, Thomas C. Fanning, Samuel Wilde, C. B. Wilder, John Lowry, Josiah Brewer, William B. Brown, Alonzo S. Ball, Lewis Tappan, S. S. Jocelyn and George Whipple and others now acting as officers and members of the American Missionary Association, located in the city of New York, together with such others as may be hereafter associated with or succeed them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate, by the name of "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION," for the purpose of conducting missionary and educational operations, and diffusing a knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, in the United States and other countries.

SEC. 2. The said corporation shall possess the general powers and be subjected to the provisions contained in the third title of chapter eighteen of the first part of the Revised Statutes, so far as the same are applicable and have not been repealed or modified, and are hereby authorized to hold its meetings in any State or Territory of the United States and in the District of Columbia.

SEC. 3. The management of the affairs and concerns of the said corporation shall be conducted by an Executive Committee, to be from time to time appointed or elected by the said Association, and to consist of not less than twelve members, any five of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of its business; and all persons now holding office in said Association shall be like officers in said corporation, and with like functions until the next annual meeting of the Association.

SEC. 4. The said corporation shall have power to receive and disburse funds, and to purchase, receive, hold and take by donation, deed, devise or bequest, any real or personal estate which has been or will hereafter be given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it for the purpose stated in section first, or which may accrue from the use of the same; subject, however, to the provisions of chapter three hundred and sixty of the Laws of eighteen hundred and sixty, entitled: An Act relating to Wills; but it shall at no time hold property the annual income of which shall exceed one hundred thousand dollars;* and shall always have full power to grant, bargain, lease or otherwise dispose of the same, provided that the proceeds from such grant, bargain, lease or disposal shall never, in any manner, be diverted to any other purpose than that for which the property was originally donated.

BY-LAWS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

ART. I.—MEETINGS.

The Committee shall hold its regular meeting, on the second Tuesday of each month, at 3 o'clock, P. M. Special meetings may be called at the written request of any two members of the Committee. The call for any such special meeting and the notices sent out shall state the business to be considered.

Notices of the regular and special meetings of the Committee should be sent by mail to its members, or otherwise communicated in writing, at least one day previous to the time of meeting.

ART. II.—OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

At the first regular neeting of the Committee after the Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, a Chairman, a Vice Chairman and a Recording Secretary shall be chosen by ballot, who shall hold office for one year, or until their successors are elected. At the same meeting the following Standing Com-

* By Chapter five hundred and fifty-three of the Laws of 1890 of the State of New York, the Association now has power to take and hold property the yearly income derived from which shall not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

mittees for the year shall be appointed, to consist of seven members each, three to constitute a quorum,

1. A Committee on Finance, one of whom shall be the Chairman of the Executive Committee.
2. A Committee on Missions.
3. A Committe on Support.

Each of these Standing Committees shall elect a Chairman and a Secretary from their own number, and shall hold a monthly meeting to consider matters pertaining to their departments.

A Committee on Appropriations, of four members, shall also be formed each year in the manner hereinafter designated.

ART. III.—DUTIES OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

CHAIRMAN.—It shall be the duty of the Chairman to preside at all meetings of the Committee, to facilitate the transaction of its business, to sign, when necessary, checks upon the bank accounts of the Association, and to appoint all standing and special committees not otherwise provided for, subject to the approval of the Executive Committee.

VICE-CHAIRMAN.—In the absence of the Chairman, or in his disability to act, the Vice-Chairman shall perform his duties.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.—In the absence or inability of both, a temporary Chairman may be appointed by the Executive Committee.

RECORDING SECRETARY.—The Recording Secretary shall keep the minutes of the Committee, and read them at its regular meetings. He shall cause all Committees to be notified, in writing, of their appointment within twenty-four hours thereafter, and shall inform them of the business referred to them. In his absence or inability to act the Chairman shall appoint a substitute.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Finance, to examine the accounts of the Treasurer for the month preceding each regular meeting of the Executive Committee before such meeting, taking the books of account kept by him, and comparing them with his statement of the month's receipts and disbursements and with the vouchers, and to certify to the correctness of such statements when approved by them. They shall also cause to be kept a book, wherein shall be set forth in detail (1) all stocks and bonds owned by the Association, at par, with a note of the original cost of the same to the Association; (2) all real estate (both land and buildings) and other property of the Association, with the full cost of the same; and (3) all property held on special deposit or in trust. This book shall be at all times open to the inspection of the members of the Executive Committee and the record shall be so added to and amended, from time to time, under the direction of the Finance Committee, as to show at all times a correct statement of the property of the Association, and of any special trusts in its hands. All title deeds to real estate and certificates of stocks and bonds owned by the Association shall be in charge of this Committee, who shall provide a proper place for their safe keeping. This Committee shall, when occasion requires direct the sale and transfer of stocks, invest any funds of the Association, not required or designed for current expenses, and in general shall have the oversight of financial concerns of the Association, under the direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Missions to report to the Executive Committee, at its regular meeting every month, such suggestions or proposed action as shall seem to it desirable for furthering the efficiency and economy of the missionary and educational work of the Association. It shall also have power to manage the current work of the Association assigned to it, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Executive Committee.

COMMITTEE ON SUPPORT.—It shall be the duty of this Committee to meet at least once in two months to consider methods of promoting a missionary spirit throughout the churches, and of securing from the churches and friends of missions by addresses and publications, and through the various district offices and agencies and otherwise, the amounts required for the support and constant enlargement of the work, and to report to the Executive Committee such recommendations as shall seem desirable.

Each of these Committees shall appoint its own meetings, keep books of record of its proceedings (the minutes of each Committee being read at the regular meetings of the Executive Committee) and consult and advise with the Corresponding Secretaries, with the Treasurer of the Association, and with the District Secretaries and Agents in regard to its work.

COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS.—It shall be the duty of the Committee on Appropriations to consider the work of the Association carefully, and to present to the Executive Committee, at its meeting in May or June, a detailed statement of the amounts required in each department of the Association for the proper conduct of its own work, and an estimate of the probable receipts of the Association, together with its recommendations as to the amounts which should be appropriated for the next fiscal year. This Committee shall consist of the Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Chairmen of the three Standing Committees.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES may be appointed from time to time as required. Standing and Special Committees can be formed only of members of the Executive Committee. All Special Committees shall examine and report upon every matter referred to them with the facts in substance, and their opinions and recommendations, so that the Executive Committee may be fully enabled to act thereon.

APPEALS.—Every appointee of the Association has the fullest liberty of appeal to the Executive Committee. Such communications shall be referred to the appropriate Committee according to the part of the field from which they come, for examination and a report on the matter involved, at the next meeting of the Executive Committee, when they shall receive careful attention in executive session.

ART. IV.—DUTIES OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARIES.

The Corresponding Secretaries shall conduct the correspondence of the Association and of the Executive Committee, except that which relates immediately to the Treasurer's department, and shall have the charge and direction of the work of the Association under the Executive Committee, and shall present to the various Standing Committees such suggestions and plans as shall seem to them desirable for the efficient work of the Association. They shall also prepare each month, and put into the hands of each member of the Executive Committee, before its regular monthly meeting, a schedule of the business which the Standing and any Special Committees may report to the Executive Committee for its action, and any other business they may desire to bring before the Executive Committee. It shall also be their duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees, and to the Executive Committee, all matters relating to their several departments, and to sign checks upon the bank accounts of the Association.

All appointments of missionaries, whether they are to act as pastors or general missionaries, presidents and professors of chartered institutions, principals of high and normal schools, district secretaries, field superintendents and other agents, and all matters involving questions of property or affecting the policy of the Association, shall be referred to the Executive Committee for final action.

ART. V.—DUTIES OF THE TREASURER.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to receive all money contributed or intrusted to the Association, and to give receipts therefor; to deposit it to the credit of the Association in such bank or institution as may be designated by the Finance Committee; to keep clear and accurate accounts of all sums received and expended by the Association; to make payments and remittances in accordance with, and never in excess of, the appropriations made by the Executive Committee; to endorse checks and drafts for deposit, and sign checks for the purpose of the Association; to report to the Finance and Executive Committees each month the receipts and disbursements for the previous month, and at the end of the fiscal year, for the year, and to keep all books of account required by them; to conduct the correspondence relating immediately to his department and to perform such other acts as are necessary to the faithful execution of the duties of his office.

His books of account and vouchers for payments shall at all times be open to the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.
3. Report of the Treasurer.
4. Reports of Corresponding Secretaries and District Secretaries.
5. Reading the minutes of the Standing Committees and action thereon, in the following order: (1) Finance. (2) Missions. (3) Support. (4) Appropriations.
6. Reports of Special Committees.
7. Unfinished business.
8. New business.
9. Executive session.

The business of each special meeting shall be limited to the items mentioned in the call for such meeting.

ART. X.—AMENDMENTS.

These By-Laws may be amended at any time by a vote of a majority of the members present at any regular meeting, notice of such amendment having been given in writing at the previous regular meeting, and in the notices sent out for such meeting.

the inspection of any member of the Executive Committee, and shall be submitted by him each month to the Finance Committee for their examination.

It shall be his duty to present to the Standing and Special Committees and to the Executive Committee such financial business as needs their action.

ART. VI.—DISTRICT SECRETARIES.

The Executive Committee shall appoint such District Secretaries as they may deem expedient, who shall visit churches and in other ways disseminate information concerning the condition and needs of the Association throughout the districts assigned to them. They shall also collect funds, and perform such other duties as may be required. They shall keep in constant conference with the New York office and every month shall send to it, for the Executive Committee, a report of their work the previous month and of the condition of the interests of the Association in their several districts.

ART. VII.—CHECKS AND PAYMENTS.

All checks upon the bank accounts of the Association may be signed by (1) the Chairman (or Vice-Chairman or Temporary Chairman) of the Executive Committee, (2) a Corresponding Secretary, or (3) the Treasurer. Any two of these signatures shall render a check valid, but no check shall be valid with one signature only. All transfers of stock, conveyances of real estate and other instruments requiring the seal of the Association shall be signed in the same manner.

All payments of the Association shall be made by check payable to order, except petty cash expenditures, which shall be paid by the Treasurer and at convenient times be aggregated, and a check shall be drawn to his order therefor.

No disbursement shall be made without authority of the Executive Committee.

ART. VIII.—CLAIMS FOR DISBURSEMENTS BY OFFICERS AND EMPLOYEES.

All claims for disbursements by any officer or employee shall be accompanied by vouchers, except for telegrams, postage and traveling expenses, and charges below twenty dollars in amount, all of which shall be certified by the claimant to the Treasurer, with the items.

ART. IX.—ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The following shall be the order of business of the Committee at its regular meetings:

1. Prayer.
2. Reading of the minutes of the last regular meeting and of intervening meetings.

LETTERS AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

Relating to the work of the Association should be addressed to the Corresponding Secretaries, relating to the AMERICAN MISSIONARY should be addressed to the Editor, relating to the Finances should be sent to the Treasurer, and for the Bureau of Woman's Work to the Secretary, all at 4th Avenue and 22d Street, New York City.

DONATIONS AND SUBSCRIPTIONS

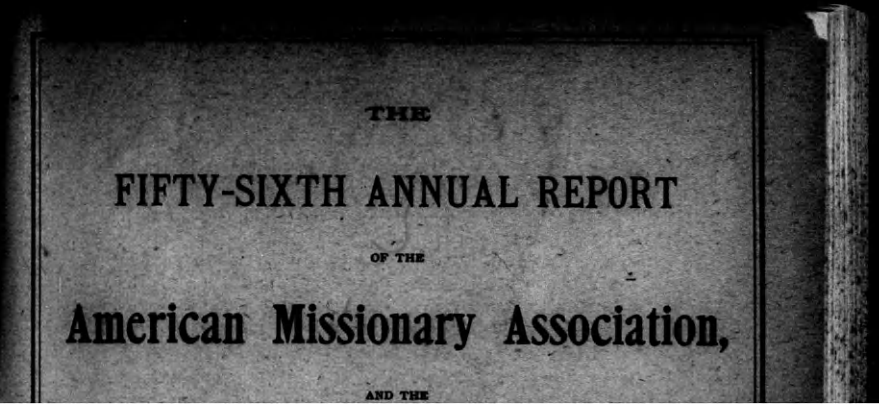
In drafts, checks, registered letters or post-office orders may be sent to H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer, 4th Avenue and 22d Street, New York; or when more convenient, to either of the Branch Offices: 615 Cong'l House, Boston, Mass.; 153 La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

AIM AND WORK.

To preach the gospel to the poor. It originated in a sympathy with the almost friendless slaves, and in its work recognizes no distinction of race or color. Since emancipation, it has devoted its main efforts to the South, endeavoring to prepare the FREEDMEN for their duties as citizens and Christians in America, and as missionaries in Africa. It also establishes missions and schools on the anti-caste basis among the WHITES, especially in the mountain districts. As closely related to this, it seeks to benefit the caste-persecuted CHINESE in America, and to extend the blessings of the gospel and civilization to the INDIANS of North America. In view of the necessity of elevating the WOMEN of these races, the Association has a BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK, to which it especially invites the co-operation of the Christian women of the churches.

MEMBERSHIP.

A payment of THIRTY DOLLARS will constitute a person a life member. (See Article III of the Constitution.)



LEGACIES.

Important legacies have been lost to the Association by informality. Care should be taken to give full name, "THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION." The following form of bequest may be used:

I GIVE AND BEQUEATH the sum of———dollars to "The American Missionary Association," incorporated by act of the Legislature of the State of New York.

The will should be attested by three witnesses (in some states three are required—in other States only two), who should write against their names their places of residence (if in cities the street and number.) The following form of attestation will answer for every State in the Union: "Signed, sealed, published and declared by the said (A. B.,) as his last will and testament in the presence of us, who at the request of said (A. B.,) and in his presence, and in the presence of each other have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses." In some States it is required that charitable bequests should be made at least two months before the death of the testator; but this rule does not apply to bequests in the State of New York to this Association.

FIFTY-SIXTH ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

American Missionary Association.

The Fifty-sixth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association convened in the meeting-house of the Second Congregational Church, New London, Conn., Tuesday, October 21, 1902, at 2.30 o'clock P.M.; and was called to order by the President, Rev. Washington Gladden, of Ohio.

The hymn "All hail the power of Jesus' name" was sung, and prayer was offered by Rev. Livingston L. Taylor, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Organization.

The Nominating Committee recommended the following names of persons for the Business Committee, and they were elected:

Rev. James W. Bixler, Rev. F. W. Greene, Dea. C. W. Chapin, Gen. W. A. Aiken and Rev. George A. Hall.

Program Adopted.

It was voted to adopt the program as printed and recommended by the committee.

Election of Secretaries.

The Rev. Asher Anderson, of Boston, was elected Recording Secretary, and Rev. Livingston L. Taylor was elected Assistant Recording Secretary.

Addresses of Welcome.

Addresses of welcome were given as follows:

In behalf of the churches of New London, Rev. James W. Bixler, the pastor of the Second Church.

In behalf of the citizens of New London, Hon. Wilson M. Dart, Mayor.

In behalf of the churches of Connecticut, Rev. Lewellyn Pratt, of Norwich.

In behalf of the State of Connecticut, Ex-Gov. O. Vincent Coffin, of Middletown.

The response in behalf of the Association was given by President Gladden.

President Roosevelt.

A letter from the President was read, in which Mr. Roosevelt regretted his inability to be present. It was referred to the Business Committee for appropriate answer.

*Jubilee Singers.

A quartet of Jubilee Singers sang "Steal away to Jesus," and "Lead, Kindly Light."

* The Quartet was composed of the following: F. J. Work, 1st Tenor, student in Senior Class, Fisk University; Maximilliam Martin, 2d Tenor, student in Junior Class, Fisk University; B. Landry, Class 1902, Fisk Teacher in Gilbert Industrial College, Baldwin, La.; I. M. Marquess, Class 1902, Fisk University, student in Dartmouth College.

Treasurer's Report.

The report of the Treasurer was made by H. W. Hubbard, Esq., Treasurer of the Association. The certificate of the Auditors was read by the Recording Secretary. They were accepted, and it was voted that the statement and certificate be published with the printed report of the session.

Report of the Executive Committee.

The annual report of the Executive Committee was read by the Chairman of the Committee, Charles A. Hull, of New York. It was voted to accept the report, and that it be referred in its several sections to various committees, which shall be named by the Nominating Committee, to report upon them at some future session.

Resignations.

The following communication was received and read:

We, the undersigned, members of the Executive Committee of the A. M. A., whose terms of office expire in 1903 and 1904, hereby tender to the Association our resignations as members of the Executive Committee, to take effect upon the election of our successors, that the Association may be free to elect its committee for the several terms provided for in the last Amendment to Article No. 5 of the Constitution; and we desire to state that these resignations are presented without reserve, and are intended to enable the Association to carry out the wishes of its constituency without delay or embarrassment.

Business Session.

It was voted that a member be added to the Committee on Amendments, and that the committee thus formed be requested to present their report in the morning.

Amendments.

The amendment proposed by Mr. Emerson at the last Annual Meeting, viz., the insertion of a new article in the Constitution, to read as follows: "The President and Vice-Presidents of the Association shall be members ex-officio of its Executive Committee," was amended by vote to read, "The President shall be a member ex-officio of the Executive Committee."

As amended it was adopted.

The amendment to Article IV of the Constitution, proposed by Rev. W. B. Thorpe (p. 17 Min. 1901), was laid on the table.

REPORT UPON LIMITED REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNING MEMBERSHIP.

The report given by Rev. Elijah Horr in behalf of the Executive Committee, upon "limited representative governing membership," was accepted, and it was voted that the same be acted on at the next Annual Meeting.

EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION, OCTOBER 7, 1902.

The Special Committee on Limited Representative Governing Membership submitted their report, and it was voted that the same be accepted and entered upon the Minutes of this committee, it being recommended to the Annual Meeting for adoption:

ARTICLE III.—MEMBERSHIP.

The members of this Association shall consist of honorary life members, life members, members elected by the churches, and the officials of the Association during their respective terms of office.

1. Any person chosen as President, Vice-President, Recording Secretary, Treasurer, Corresponding Secretary, Auditor or member of the Executive Committee, shall be a voting member during the term of his service.

2. Life members appearing on the roll at the date of the passage of this article shall retain their voting right, unless it be voluntarily surrendered.

3. The churches shall be represented in the voting membership of this Association by members elected in number and manner as follows:

(a). Each State Association or State Conference of Churches may elect three members, and in addition one member for every five thousand church members.

(b). At the first election of the State Associations or Conferences, one-third of the members shall be elected for one year, one-third for two years and one-third for three years, and thereafter one-third shall be elected each year for a term of three years. In any year the State bodies may elect members to fill vacancies.

(c) It is recommended that the number of members be in all cases divided between ministers and laymen as nearly equally as is practicable.

4. In any State where one or more churches not enrolled in any Congregational Association or Conference contribute to the treasury of the A. M. A., they shall be entitled to representation at the Annual Meeting of this Association in the proportion of one delegate to every 2,500 members.

5. Any person on whose behalf fifty dollars shall be paid into the treasury of this Society, accompanied by a request for honorary life membership, shall be an honorary life member, with all the privileges of membership, except voting.

Invitation for Next Meeting.

Letters were read by the Chairman of the Business Committee from pastors and others of Cleveland, Ohio, requesting that the meeting in 1903 be held in that city; also from San Francisco, Cal., for same date; and from St. Louis an invitation to meet in that city in 1904.

Upon recommendation of the Business Committee it was voted to accept the invitation from Cleveland, Ohio.

It was voted that in the future correspondence with reference to Annual Meetings be referred to the Executive Committee with power.

Upon the recommendation of the Nominating Committee, Rev. C. M. Southgate was added to the Committee on Salaried Officers; and also that the Rev. M. H. Fishburn lead the Devotional Services Thursday evening.

Periodicals and Union Annual Meeting.

It was voted that the matters of a single missionary periodical and a union annual meeting of the five societies be approved by the Association.

Amendments not Retroactive.

It was voted that in the judgment of the Association the amendment with respect to the Executive Committee be considered as not retroactive.

It was voted that the election of officers be the order of the session on Thursday, 9 o'clock A. M.

Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, 7.30 O'CLOCK.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. J. E. Roy, of Illinois, who, after an anthem by the choir, read Rom. xvii:26-29, and Rev.

vii: 9-12, and led in prayer. The quartet sang, "I'm Going to Join the Band," and "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Messages from Mission Fields.

Addresses were given as follows:

Upon the Porto Ricans, by Rev. Charles B. Scott, of Porto Rico. Upon the Indians, by Rev. James F. Cross, of So. Dakota. Upon the Negroes, by Rev. H. H. Proctor, Atlanta, Ga. Upon the Highlanders, by Rev. J. K. Higginbotham, of Kentucky.

Addresses.

Mr. William Shaw, Treasurer of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, addressed the Association upon "Why Christian Endeavorers should support the American Missionary Association."

The closing address was given by Rev. Harry P. Dewey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., upon "Individuality in Service." Hymn No. 1209, "My Country, 'tis of Thee," was sung, and the session at 10.30 o'clock, upon the Benediction by Rev. J. E. Roy, adjourned.

THURSDAY MORNING, 8.30 O'CLOCK.

Devotional services were conducted by the Rev. M. H. Fishburn.

The minutes of Wednesday's sessions were read and approved.

Finance and Nominating Committees.

The following names of persons were reported by the Nominating Committee as members of the Finance Committee: Henry K. Hyde, of Mass.; Charles A. Denny, of Mass.; William A. Aiken, of Conn., Silas H. Paine, of New York, and James E. Brown, of New York. Upon recommendation of the Nominating Committee, the following persons were elected Nominating Committee for 1903: Rev. Charles O. Day, of Mass.; Rev. W. A. Bartlett, of Ill.; Rev. E. M. Chapman, of Vermont; Rev A. F. Skeele, of Ohio; and Ralph Emerson, of Ill.

Constitutional Amendments.

It was voted that Article V and Article VI be amended to read as follows:

ART. V. The officers of this Association shall be a President, five Vice-Presidents, a Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries, a Recording Secretary, a Treasurer, Auditors and an Executive Committee consisting of the President (ex-officio) and fifteen members, all of whom shall be elected by ballot as hereinafter provided.

The President, Vice-Presidents, Recording Secretary and Auditors shall be elected each year by the Association at its Annual Meeting.

At each Annual Meeting, after the adoption of this Article of the Constitution, three members of the Executive Committee shall be elected for the term of five years, and such other members as shall be required to fill vacancies. No member of the Executive Committee who has served one full term of five years shall be eligible for re-election till one year shall have passed.

The Corresponding Secretary or Secretaries and the Treasurer shall be elected each year by the Association upon nomination of the Executive Committee.

ART. VI. To the Executive Committee shall belong the collecting and disbursing of funds, the appointing, counseling, sustaining and dismissing of missionaries and agents and the selection of missionary fields. They shall have authority to fill all vacancies in their own membership or in the officers of the Association occurring between the annual meetings until the next annual meeting; to apply to any Legislature for acts of incorporation or conferring corporate powers; to make provision, when necessary, for disabled missionaries and for the widows and children of deceased missionaries, and in general to transact all such business as usually appertains to the executive committees of missionary and other benevolent societies. The acts of the Committee shall be subject to the revision of the annual meeting.

Five members of the Committee constitute a quorum for transacting business.

Hymn No. 974: "Work, for the Night is Coming," was sung.

Secretarial Paper.

The Paper of the Secretaries was read by Secretary Charles J. Ryder. It was accepted by the Association and its recommendation as suggested was adopted.

Addresses.

The Rev. C. W. Carroll, of Ohio, addressed the Association upon "Efficient Missionary Methods in Local Churches."

The quartet sang, "Bye and Bye" and "Old Kentucky Home."

An address upon "How to Increase Enthusiasm, Sympathy and Gifts," was made by Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, of Conn.

The Hon. Arthur H. Wellman, of Mass., addressed the Association upon, "The National Significance of the Work."

The quartet sang, "I Woke Up Praying," and "Little Simon met a Pieman," and "Into that Morning."

The President addressed the Association upon "The Leavening and Transforming Power of Christian Work."

Miss Yeomans, of Fisk University, spoke upon her work in the South.

The quartet sang, by request, "Lead, Kindly Light," and the Association adjourned for a trolley ride.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, 2.30 O'CLOCK.

Woman's Meeting.

The Woman's Meeting was called to order by Vice-President James W. Cooper. Hymn No. 459 was sung: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." The devotional services were led by Miss Coit, of New London, who read a selection from John xv and led in prayer.

Addresses.

Addresses were given as follows:

"Of Greeting and Welcome," by Mrs. Washington Choate, President of the Connecticut Home Missionary Union. "The Annual Report of the Bureau of Woman's Work," by Miss D. E. Emerson, of New York, Secretary of the Bureau; upon "Indian Missions," by Rev. J. F. Cross, of Rosebud Agency, So. Dakota; upon the "Mountain Missions," by Miss Mary E. Westgate, of Blowing Rock, N. C.; upon the "Past, Present and Future of Negro Womanhood," by Mrs. Ella Sheppard Moore, of Tennessee, Mrs. H. H. Proctor, of Georgia, and Mrs. Minnie Crosthwait, of Knoxville, Tenn., respectively. They were specially introduced to the Association by Miss Emerson.

A double quartet sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

An address upon the "Importance and Necessity of Consecration" was given by Mrs. C. M. Lamson, of Massachusetts.

Appeal for Offerings.

An appeal was made by the president in behalf of Miss Yeomans' work, and offerings were received.

Church Work in the South.

A report and an address, in connection, were given by Rev. Edward M. Noyes, of Massachusetts., Chairman of the Committee, upon "Church Work in the South."

The closing address of the afternoon was given by Rev. H. H. Proctor, of Georgia, and after singing by the quartet the meeting adjourned.

THURSDAY EVENING, 7.30 O'CLOCK.

The session opened with singing of the "Palms" by the choir of the church. The Rev. Lewellyn Pratt read the 72d Psalm, and prayer was made by Rev. George E. Hall.

Addresses.

An address was given by Talcott Williams, Esq., of Philadelphia, upon "The Elevation of the Negro."

The quartet sang "Nellie was a Lady," "Somebody's Buried," and "Nobody Knows the Trouble I Know."

An address was given by the Rev. Amory H. Bradford, of New Jersey, Moderator of the National Council, upon "Broadening Brotherhood."

Mr. Bush, of New London, sang "The Lord is my Shepherd."

The closing address was made by President Gladden. Upon motion of Rev. William McLane, of Connecticut, the following resolution of thanks was heartily adopted:

Resolution of Thanks.

Resolved, That the thanks of the American Missionary Association be tendered to the Second Church of New London, and to other churches and Christian people, for their cordial hospitality; to the pastor of the Second Church and his associates for their thoughtfulness and generous provision; to the choir of the Second Church for their valuable services in music; to the donor of the delightful trolley excursion; to the railroads for special rates, and to all who have in any way contributed to the comfort, pleasure and success of the Fifty-sixth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association. We tender also our deep sympathy to the First Church of this city in the loss of their beloved pastor, Rev. S. Leroy Blake, and earnestly and lovingly commend them to the divine grace and comfort that are through Jesus Christ their Lord.

Minutes.

It was voted that the minutes of Thursday be referred for reading and correction to the Executive Committee.

Adjournment.

The session was closed with prayer and benediction by the Rev. P. S. Moxom.

Attest: ASHER ANDERSON,
Recording Secretary.

FIFTY-SIXTH ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 30TH, 1902.

INTRODUCTORY.

The diversified work of the American Missionary Association is now carried on in twenty-two states and territories of the United States, reaching from Alaska to Porto Rico. From its originally small beginnings this work has providentially grown from year to year until it now includes six different races, ranging from those just emerging out of a savage condition to those who share the heritage of the foremost races in the world. The principles on which the Association was organized and from which it began its missionary service, are unchanged, while from year to year its methods have been varied toward increased efficiency and success. The Association has been providentially called to minister mainly to the poor and needy, the untaught and undeveloped peoples of the republic. It has never recognized race lines as delimitations of its service. As in other ages and races, so in our times and among our varied peoples, it has been found that the gospel can reach and regenerate the most ignorant and degraded, and that forms of education, touched and inspired by Christian consecration, bring fruitful results wherever they are exerted under the leadership of the Great Teacher.

MOUNTAIN SCHOOLS.

Number of Schools	11
Number of Instructors	68
Number of Pupils	2,198

We have had another year of encouraging work. The secretary in charge has personally visited all the larger institutions and most of the secondary schools in the lowlands and the highlands. Everywhere he has found that with the years and the progress of the work, consecration does not falter nor lose courage. Patiently the teachers hold themselves to the work to which they are devoted, and as class after class goes out from the school, numbering several hundred pupils a year, it is just so much more Christian leaven to be introduced into the great mass of ignorance and need. The influences of successive generations of students, like nature's slow and silent processes, are surely bringing forth thirty, sixty and a hundred-fold. It is simply impossible to measure these influences, and they are not the less potent in that they are not spectacular.

Our six institutions for the higher learning are: Fisk University, Tennessee; Talladega College, Alabama; Tougaloo University, Mississippi; Straight University, Louisiana; Tillotson College, Texas, and J. S. Green College, Georgia.

While these institutions are termed colleges and universities, the majority of their students are not in the college courses of study. They have pupils in the kindergarten, the primary, grammar and normal grades, in the college preparatory department, in the manual, industrial and agricultural schools, in classes and departments for the training of preachers, as well as in the collegiate studies. The collegiate department includes comparatively few of the students, generally those who have had the patience and courage to go on with their training after years of preparation in the lower grades. But these six colleges and universities during the present year report 271 students now in the college courses; this number will be increased, only so far as to admit those who are fitted to take up college work and have the perseverance to devote years to a more thorough education.

Fisk University records an attendance this year of over 500. The first year of the new president has been marked both by his sagacious interior administration of the institution and by persevering and well directed services in behalf of its endowment. In Talladega College the year has been marked by laying the corner-stone of the new memorial chapel, and by affording additional facilities for the accommodation of girls and suitable boarding accommodation in the extensions of Foster Hall. It is a significant fact that graduates of Talladega are making fine records in the post-graduate departments of Yale University. The 600 students of Talladega come from no less than ten different states. After thirty years of educational work at Tougaloo, which has steadily increased in useful volume and efficiency, the last year has been marked by outward signs of progress in the new chapel and the new infirmary building for the care of the sick and the training of nurses. The work of Tougaloo, like that in Talladega and elsewhere, includes extensive instruction in agriculture in connection with carrying on a large farm, and also training in architectural drawing, woodwork and the working of iron and steel During the thirty-three years of work at Straight University it is estimated that some ten thousand different pupils have received instruction. The aggregate attendance of more than seven hundred students during the year has been the greatest in its history. Some important permanent improvements, such as a fine iron fence and the addition of a cooking-school and course for industrial study have been made during the year. Three of the graduates of the school have given $1,000 to the university as a memorial of their mother. Tillotson College, from its opening over twenty years ago to the present time, has aimed to give solid instruction in the elements of common school education and training in advanced work to all those who have completed high-school courses and are preparing to teach. As a result, its students are in demand for teacherships and hold some of the most responsible positions in the state. Additions extending the accommodations and enlarging the industrial plants are an imperative need. The J. S. Green College, has been pushing its important work in Georgia with large attendance, and will undoubtedly extend its usefulness more widely each succeeding year.

Our forty-three normal and graded schools register an attendance of nearly eight thousand pupils. The largest of these institutions is Le Moyne Institute, of Memphis, Tennessee, reporting 612 students, and carrying on a most efficient work of training teachers to meet the increasing demand. These schools are engaged in supplying the greatest educational want in the South, teachers for public schools; though many of the graduates of these institutions have gone into higher school work. At Marion, Alabama, the year has witnessed most self-sacrificing efforts on the part of the teachers to help build the fine new schoolhouse. In Cappahosic, Virginia, the school has taken on an entirely new character under the efficient administration of the new principal. This has been the first year of occupancy of new buildings at Dorchester Academy, McIntosh, Georgia. Unfortunately, the last of the year witnessed conflagrations at both Williamsburg and Grand View, which destroyed two of the most useful buildings in our mountain work. At Williamsburg public meetings were held and large sums subscribed toward remedying the disaster.

Our thirty common schools record an attendance of 5,465 pupils. Our higher schools include all the grades of school work; but the primary schools which the Association has carried on have been located largely in places not adequately cared for by the public schools.

CHURCH WORK IN THE SOUTH.

Number of churches	230
Ministers and missionaries	139
Church members	12,155
Total additions	1,429
Added on profession	1,190
Benevolent contributions	$2,813.68
Raised for church purposes	$39.397.82
Sunday-school scholars	17,311

Last year we enrolled a larger number of new churches than for any year since 1895. The present year has not been marked either by great advances or regressions. There has been steady progress in individual churches, especially in the increased responsibility about management of their own work. The general increase in the number of churches is manifest from the fact that ten years ago our Southern churches numbered 140; they now number 230. The membership of these churches is 12,155, of whom 1,190 were added during the year on profession of faith. Churches raised towards their own support $39,398, and for benevolent contributions $2,813.

The improvement of the four-fifths of the Negro population who live in the rural regions is often exaggerated. It is still shadowed with an ignorance which has barely been touched by the light of a scanty school training for a few weeks of the year and with a church-life peculiarly infiltrated with superstition. In vast plantation populations the old slave church still stands. Honesty, truth and purity are not taught, because neither people nor preacher have come to realize that these virtues are essential to the religious life. The ethical power of Christianity is scarcely felt, and "the plantation preacher is the curse of the people." The time is ripe for a forward gospel campaign in this great, needy black South of the back country. Such beginnings as have been made are full of promise. It is true now as it was at the very first, that Christianity can be preached to the poor and the ignorant, and that the beginnings of true religion among them need not wait for previous preparation by education. In the work of the Association the preaching of the gospel stirs educational aspiration, and the service of the school inspires a hunger for pure religion. The ministration of our churches is educational, because they awaken desire for larger intelligence; and that of our schools is religious, because their training is inspired and vivified by the Christian motive. The aim is one, to bring souls to Christ and to train them for Christ.

EDUCATIONAL.

The two schools, established when Porto Rico was first occupied by the American Missionary Association, have been continued during the year.

Santurce is a suburb of San Juan. It is well situated for an educational institution. The Association in opening a school here made no mistake. During the year there has been an enrollment of 172. The class of pupils reached is encouraging. It represents the different elements of society, and brings together those who represent almost the extremes in social position and financial conditions. There are many of the humbler classes whose children gather in this school. In the evening a class of young women, representative of the leading people of the community, gather especially for the study of English. The school occupies a small plant of ground which it is proposed to cultivate for the sake of industrial training for the boys. All sorts of tropical fruits may be raised here, and this will afford an opportunity for instruction in agriculture. The very abundance in tropical fruits, and the fact that seasons differ but little during the year, tend to a slovenly and uneconomical method of agricultural work. This school, developing along this line of industrial instruction, must prove of great advantage.

At Lares a different element of people is reached. The school here is almost entirely attended by the children of Porto Ricans. The enrollment during the year indicated an increasing interest in the work of this institution. The influence of the school is felt far beyond the limits of the community in which it is planted. Two pupils from the higher grades have received teachers' certificates from the examiners of the public schools. Through these teachers the influence of the school will be increased. The educational work at Lares is more advanced than that in most of the schools in the island. The pupils are bright and attentive, and the outlook for the future is hopeful.

CHURCH WORK.

Rev. Francisco Castro has carried on a highly successful work in the southeastern part of the island. He has already organized a church of 315 members at Humacao, another at Juncos, and has done out-station work at Hacienda Oriente, Playa de Santiago, Piedras, Mango, Caguas, and some other places. In the northeastern part of the island, at Fajardo and vicinity, Dr. John Edwards has continued his work. Dr. Edwards opened his work in December, 1899, by preaching to seven persons. Six of these are now members of the church which has been organized. Within the current year nearly two hundred people have subscribed their names in the presence of the congregation as an expression of their desire to become Christians and belong to the church. Dr. Edwards has also carried on labors at Luquillo, and has made evangelizing tours throughout all the eastern part of the island. In the central part of the island, church work has been carried on throughout the year by Rev. Sebastian L. Hernandez, who has had his principal place of service in Lares, and organized there a church of forty-one members. He has established an out-station work, where he has large gatherings, and hopes of permanent growth. All the indications point towards a large development of our evangelizing work in Porto Rico.

In our missions in the Dakotas the year has been one of much restlessness and confusion, owing to the great controversy over the lands of the Indians. Strenuous efforts were made both on the reservations and among the friends of the Indians throughout the country to resist the projected leases of their lands. Important modifications were secured, and the condition is very much better than was feared at some time. The whole question of reservation methods and government supervision has become an active issue.

Our educational work, the principal schools of which are at Santee, Oahe and Fort Berthold, has gone on during the year with its constant good results. Missionaries located in the immediate neighborhood of government schools have been able to exercise effective moral influence, not only over those in the government schools, but over their kinsfolk throughout the camps.

Efficient service in this direction has been carried on in the Crow Agency, Rosebud, Grand River and Oklahoma Missions. Some marked changes during the last five years are noted in the reports of the latter mission. The majority of the male Indians have now abandoned the blanket and wear the clothes of civilization; but the women continue almost entirely to use the Indian costume. The younger Indians have attained a considerable facility in the use of the English language. The introduction of Christian Endeavor Societies has made an important change in the tone of religious work in connection with the schools. These societies in the two schools have a total membership of over one hundred.

ALASKAN MISSION.

The Alaskan missionary work has gone steadily forward throughout the year. The average of attendance at the religious services has been 107. This year some of the Diomede Eskimos have been over from the islands in the middle of the Behring Strait and have been regular attendants at our services. Others have come across the strait from Siberia, and the opportunity has been improved to bring the gospel to bear upon their minds. The mission day-school has been continued and the government Bureau of Education has also maintained a school in the mission building.

This year is signalized by the return of Mr. Lopp and his family and by the appointment of Mr. Lee in his place. Mr. Lopp, after many years of faithful service, has felt it necessary that his grown children shall have the privileges and opportunities of the home-land. The twelve years of his pioneer missionary work have indeed been years of remarkable success. He reports that in 1890 the natives were found to be a filthy, dishonest, distrustful and superstitious people. More than one hundred of these natives are now personally Christian, and their influence has changed the sentiments and disposition of the settlement. The Association esteems itself fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Lee, who, with his wife, has already spent over a year among the Eskimos of the eastern coast, and, therefore, knows their habits and dispositions, and will be able to enter on the work with great advantage.

CHINESE AND JAPANESE MISSIONS.

STATISTICS.

Number of missions	20
Whole number of workers, (34 white, 10 Chinese)	44
Number of pupils in schools	1,226
Number giving evidence of having been converted	159

These missions have been carried on under the efficient superintendence of Dr. Pond, who has been the very soul of the work for so many years; and they enroll 34 teachers and 1,226 pupils. Dr. Pond feels very deeply indeed the importance and even the necessity of a much larger development of this work. He strenuously urges increased appropriations for its support. It has been a great affliction to him that promising doors of opportunity which were open have not been entered into because of lack of means. The work has had a most beneficent influence, not only over many hundreds of Chinese on the coast, but also in the ancestral country to which many of them have returned.

The last decade has witnessed a remarkable increase in the Japanese population of California. In 1890 it was 1,147; in 1900 it had become 10,151. In our national territory there has been a similar increase, the number rising from 14,000 to 86,000. These American Japanese consist very largely of young men, many of them are quite well educated; all of them are strongly desirous of learning the ways of our American civilization. In Los Angeles, where there are over 700 Japanese, a second Japanese mission has been begun. It is proposed to form an association of the Christian Japanese similar to the one existing in our Chinese missions.

BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

Through this department programs and literature have been furnished liberally to Women's Missionary Societies, many thousand copies of letters from the field have been circulated, and a large and varied correspondence conducted. Contributions have been received from state and local Women's Societies to the amount of $25,611.89, and also much valuable barrel help to replenish furnishings in dormitories and mission homes.

We greatly value this interest and help from women's organizations, and trust it may be sustained and increased annually.

FINANCIAL.

RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES.

The receipts of the Association for current work for the fiscal year ending September 30th, 1902, were as follows:

Balance on hand at the beginning of the year		$779.74
From Donations	$169,796.81
" Estates	133,942.78
" Income, Sundry Funds	6,409.50
" " Talladega College, Erwin Fund	4,000.00
" Tuition	49,669.41
" Slater Fund, paid to Institutions	5,001.00
		368,819.50
Total, including Balance		369,599.24
The Expenditures were		368,347.40
Balance on hand Sept. 30th, 1902		$1,251.84

The receipts were $17,069.30 more, and the expenditures were $15,775.04 more than last year. This is the fifth year that the Association has come to the Annual Meeting with a balance in hand at the close of the year. There has been received on the mission fields for board and incidental expenses and church support about $125,000 in addition to the receipts reported above. There has also been received as income from funds entrusted to the Association, not included in current receipts, $3,702.89 from Avery Fund, remitted to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions for work in Africa; $476.10 for Atlanta University, and $216.41 for Berea College.

The endowment funds have been increased by the receipt of $5,000, a bequest in the will of J. S. Ricker, Portland, Me., deceased, the income to be used for the education of Freedmen, and by the sum of $5,000, appropriated by the Trustees of the Estate of William E. Dodge, New York, deceased, to the Association, for Talladega College, the income to be used for aid of theological students in this institution. Our thanks are publicly expressed to the trustees for their remembrance of Talladega College and its students who are in preparation for the ministry.

RESERVE LEGACY ACCOUNT.

There has been credited to the Reserve Legacy Account the net sum of $14,900.42, which, added to the balance on previous year of $59,006.75, makes a total of $73,907.17. The legacy plan adopted at the last Annual Meeting requires that two-thirds of this balance shall be appropriated to current receipts for 1902–1903, and the remaining one-third to the current receipts for 1903–1904, and that at the beginning of the new fiscal year all receipts from legacies not designated shall be divided into three equal portions, one-third to be appropriated to the current expenses of the year, one-third to expenses of the second year, and the remaining third to the third fiscal year. Your committee desires that the Reserve Legacy Fund should reach $100,000. So great are the fluctuations in receipts from legacies from year to year, it becomes necessary to have this fund to enable your committee to secure an average sum from legacies for current work from year to year.

DANIEL HAND EDUCATIONAL FUND.

INCOME ACCOUNT.

Balance to credit of this account at beginning of year	$3,418.60
Income received during the year	66,635.94
Total	$70,054.54
Expenditures during the year	66,577.40
Balance on hand and appropriated	$3,477.14

In addition to the income, the Association has received for the Daniel Hand Educational Fund the sum of $14,440 in cash and securities from Wilbur F. Day, executor of the estate.

The use of the income from the Daniel Hand Fund in maintaining educational work under the supervision of the Association for colored people in the South, is carrying out the long-cherished desire of Daniel Hand. Daniel Hand resided for very many years in the South, and knew from personal knowledge the educational needs of the colored people. He also acquainted himself with the methods of the Association in conducting its religious and educational work in the South. His confidence in the Association in his gift of $1,000,000 to it while he lived, and in making the Association his residuary legatee in his will, is one of the most significant testimonies the Association has ever received.

SPECIAL ACTION.

Various matters were referred to the Executive Committee by the last Annual Meeting. These matters grew out of the report of a Special Committee of the Association, and were in part the result of various recommendations made by the last National Council, and have had the careful attention of the committee, which has sought to carry out the instructions given by the Association. A detailed report follows, so that the action of the committee and the condition in which these matters stand at present may be entirely clear:

Acting upon the instructions contained in the resolution adopted at Oak Park, directing us to communicate with the officers and Executive Committee of the other four home societies, and to endeavor to arrange for a united annual meeting in October, 1902, your committee entered at once into correspondence with the committees of the other societies. The difficulties in the way of such a meeting were found to be insurmountable. By the constitution of this Association, its meeting must be in the autumn. The annual meeting of the American Board also is in the autumn, but that of the Home Missionary Society is in the spring. The difficulty also of securing accommodations for so large a body as would naturally attend the united meeting is apparent, and was urged by the other societies. No action was taken by the other societies, and consequently we have no recommendation to make.

The last Annual Meeting also voted "That the Executive Committee be and it is hereby requested to co-operate with the other five societies in the publication of (such) a united magazine." Your Executive Committee urged this course upon each of the societies which issues a monthly magazine, but without result. Pending some concerted action in this matter, the committee, recognizing the disadvantage to the Association of its issuance of a quarterly while other national societies continue their monthly magazines, voted to again make THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY a monthly periodical.

Special Committees representing the Executive Committees of the Societies interested met together last May to consider the votes of the Association at its last annual meeting and the recommendations of the National Council, as to the separation of the fields of the A. M. A. and the C. H. M. S., and the appointment of one Treasurer for the three Societies in New York. As the result of their deliberations important conclusions were reached, which were submitted by the special committees to the Executive Committees of the respective Societies. Their reports were approved by each Board and were published in THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY for May, and also in our denominational papers.

It was unanimously concluded in reference to the separation of the fields that the South was the great field of the American Missionary Association and the West of the Congregational Home Missionary Society, and that if friction should arise in occupying any field "a Committee of Conference from the Executive Committees shall meet and adjust the difficulties."

The reports of these Committee did not recommend the election of a single treasurer for these different Societies, stating that they felt that the duty of the treasurer was not simply to receive and disburse funds, but included matters much broader and more complicated, like the investment of funds, the collecting of large legacies, and the control and direction of real estate and mortgages, together with the large trust funds especially held by this Association. They close their recommendations as follows: "We are therefore of the unanimous opinion that a change from the present method would not conduce to either economy or efficiency in the administration of these Societies."

Acting upon the instructions of the Association, your Executive Committee appointed two of its members upon the joint committee of our benevolent societies suggested at our last annual meeting "to secure harmony and co-operation in the raising of funds" and for other purposes. This joint committee has organized and begun work.

As instructed by the last annual meeting we have considered the recommendation of the National Council for a "limited representative governing membership," and a full report thereon will be presented to the Association at its business meeting.

FIELDS OF SUPPORT.

An increasing interest in the regular and occasional publications of the American Missionary Association has been evident during the year just closing. We have appreciated the somewhat frequent reference to articles in the magazine which have found their way into the secular press. A new method of disseminating information concerning our missionary work has opened to us during the past few years. Periodicals of general literature have been furnished with the plates representing our field of mission service and often with copy by our editor which have appeared in these periodicals. This has been a very valuable reinforcement to the department of our literature.

Leaflets on this work have been sent out almost solely upon requests. There is an increasing demand for such leaflets.

During the summer a large body of missionaries has been busy among the churches, Endeavor Societies, and mission circles in telling the story of their own work in different fields. The self-sacrifice involved on the part of the teachers in such work after a year of hard labor in a mission field your committee greatly appreciated. We acknowledge with gratitude the cordial reception these missionaries have had in the various communities to which they have been. These missionaries are a reinforcement to the small body of secretaries and others who are regularly employed in this service.

State and Local Conferences have cordially welcomed our representatives and given them an appreciative hearing. If those who are regularly available for this service were multiplied in numbers manyfold the time of each speaker could be fully occupied.

In many instances pastors have presented the work to their own churches. The greater preparation of such sermons and the presentation of the information thus gathered by the pastor in his own church is probably the most efficient way of increasing interest in the work of the Association. The pastor stands on vantage ground in his own pulpit and has the emphasis of the personal relationship which he sustains to his people and speaks with convincing and moving power. Your Committee thoroughly appreciates such service and trusts the number of pastors making the work of the Association a subject for an annual address may be increased.

Individual contributions are increasing in volume year by year. This indicates a tendency on the part of those interested in various missionary fields. The desire manifests itself on every side to keep in touch with the local mission and even the individual missionary. This indicates an increasing interest in missions and your Committee rejoices in it. Many individual gifts go directly to a school or mission in which there has been awakened a personal interest.

Although it is gratifying to report this increase of receipts over last year it should be remembered that for the last two years legacies have been exceptionally large and that it is very unsafe to establish work upon the supposition that they will continue so large. After a deliberate and careful forecast the conviction of your Committee is imperative that increased contributions are necessary for the maintenance of the present volume of work. New fields are also opening, both inviting and important. The normal development of the work requires a large increase in contributions in addition to those necessary to maintain the work as it is. In the providence of God these splendid opportunities are opening before us as never before, and the grave responsibility is upon the churches to meet with increased generosity this growing work.

CONCLUSION.

The Fifty-sixth year of the life of this Association has been an encouraging year. In the mission fields the results have been large and the outlook for the future is hopeful. The sympathy manifested and the support given to the work are abundant evidences of abiding and increasing interest in this great work.

Recognizing the prayerful coöperation of the great body of our Christian fellowship in this work and the good hand of God in His guidance, we enter upon the new year with hope and courage and every confidence that still larger results await the faithful and sacrificial services of our noble missionaries in the future.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN EDUCATIONAL WORK.

REV. EDWARD H. BYINGTON, CHAIRMAN.

The educational work in the South may be considered the trunk of the work of the American Missionary Association. Out of it have branched the church work and the efforts for the other hampered people under the Stars and Stripes. We note with satisfaction that these other interests and claims have not been allowed to sap the vital force flowing into this work. Our educational institutions in the South have increased in number, enjoy a strengthened teaching force, have broadened their courses and raised their standard.

Our six chartered institutions have varied departments, are manifold in their lines of influence and reach into distant regions, both in the drawing of students and the exerting of influence. In one respect the influence of our schools in the South may be said to surpass that of similar institutions in the North, for in the latter many come from homes and surroundings which equal, in their intellectual, social and religious atmosphere, the educational institutions which they attend. But most of the students in our schools find influences in every way superior to their former environment, and receive at once a strong and inspiring upward influence.

Too much emphasis cannot be laid on the work of our higher institutions, including the normal schools, which contain over 1,500 pupils. We believe in the higher education for those who show ability and aptitude. This is the most important part of the work of this Association. We utterly protest against the position that primary studies and industrial work are all that should be taught the Negro. This Association must not swerve from its object; better facilities and more advanced courses of study should be the aim. An examination of the courses of study in a large number of the educational institutions of the American Missionary Association shows that many of them are abreast of our best Northern schools in modern methods.

There appears, however, a diversity in the courses of study, those in some institutions appearing decidedly superior to others. It seems to your committee that the different schools might learn from each other, and even after making allowances for difference in localities and circumstances, much that one school has found satisfactory might be introduced in the others. For example, several have introduced bookkeeping, and one at least shorthand and typewriting. These commercial courses are exceedingly popular in our Northern high schools, and if employment along these lines is open to the colored youth in the North and South their extensive and general introduction is greatly to be desired.

Some of our normal schools offer fine advantages in pedagogy, psychology and practice in teaching. Others, that almost ignore such work, or postpone to nearly the close, should be stimulated to imitate their wiser brethren. Some institutions give a suitable place to modern history, while others do not. Some recognize the value of instruction in citizenship and economics; others seem to think Latin and Greek more important. We question seriously the prominence given to the dead languages in some of our normal courses, and especially in the collegiate courses.

We recommend:

First—That all our normal schools be urged to follow the example of those that are giving considerable prominence to methods of teaching, including pedagogy and psychology, and that if time for this cannot be secured otherwise, the work in Latin and the higher mathematics should be shortened.

Second—That the commercial courses be encouraged, and that bookkeeping, typewriting and shorthand, already taught in some of our schools, be made more general, that the students may be prepared for the commercial careers which are multiplying in the North and South alike.

Third—That considerable prominence be given in such of our schools as are not already doing it, to the study of history, and especially the history of the United States, including a knowledge of the lives of our leaders and the great principles and epochs of our national life. That in the collegiate and other advanced courses this be accompanied with studies in economics and sociology, and that the time for this work be secured by making, after the manner of some Northern colleges, the classics optional, rather than obligatory. In other words, that the advanced and advancing students be led to master the great forces and factors of our own land, and of modern life, rather than the intricacies of the dead languages.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN CHURCH WORK.

REV. E. M. NOYES, CHAIRMAN.

The report of Dr. Woodbury was made notable last year by the record of a gain of 29 new churches and an increase of $16,300 in receipts from their members. It is natural that so rapid an extension should be followed by a period devoted largely to the development and culture of the new territory thus occupied. Accordingly we find but one addition to the number of churches, but note that steady progress is observed in the individual churches.

We call attention to some significant features of this church work.

First. Its steady growth is gratifying. Little more than a generation ago we had not a single church in this section. In 1880 there were only about 60 churches. Ten years ago, 140. Today, 230, with 12,155 members. In the last five years of the old century 48 churches and 2,070 members were added; in the first two years of the new century, 20 churches and 3,116 members. Every year the increase in membership by those who come on confession of faith is just about 10 per cent. The steadiness of this onward march is impressive and encouraging.

Second. We note the fidelity to high moral and ethical standards. In spite of the attraction of the cities, four-fifths of the Negroes in the Black Belt, or more than 3,500,000, still live on plantations or in small villages. This rural population is saturated with superstition, is densely ignorant, and has been trained to a type of so-called religion which is marked by a bitter sectarianism and emotional extravagance rather than by a regard for honesty, purity and truth. Churches which insist upon intelligence in the pulpit and upon the practice of morality as essential to the religious life encounter much opposition among such a population. Nevertheless, we find great encouragement in the increasing desire for better things and the constant call upon us to help organize free and pure churches.

Third. We are impressed with the difficulty and the necessity of training these churches to self-reliance. Three-fourths of our Southern churches are among the Negroes. The years of bondage left to the Negro as an inheritance not only tendencies to immorality, but the habit of dependence upon white leadership. It is difficult to develop among these weak churches the power of initiative, the spirit of independence and self-reliance which our polity demands. But for that very reason a free and independent church has a mission among them. These people are poor, and it is not strange that 108 of our 230 churches among them still need aid from our treasury in supporting their pastor. They are missionary churches; but out of their poverty they gave $39,398 for their own support and $2,813 for benevolence. We commend the wisdom of the policy of training them as rapidly as possible to manage their own affairs and provide for their own maintenance.

Fourth. We are impressed with the inter-relation of our church and school work. The churches preach the gospel to the ignorant and awaken a hunger for education. They are sending a constant stream of young people to our schools; and from the schools there go out continually into rural communities young men and women who can never again be satisfied with a form of church life that easily accommodates itself to superstition and immorality. They demand a pure church, and as their numbers increase this demand grows louder and more insistent.

It was necessary in early days to emphasize the educational function of this Association. The splendid series of schools then planted are its chief glory. That work is as necessary as ever and must be maintained. But it is now well established, though it must be further extended. The same foresight, enthusiasm and generosity must now be devoted to extending our church work. Few mission fields in the world offer an equal opportunity. The church is still the divine agency. Through these free churches, working hand in hand with the colleges and schools, the victory will yet be won over superstition, ignorance, prejudice and sin. Nothing else can fill the place of our churches among these needy people.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AND ALASKAN WORK.

REV. DWIGHT M. PRATT, D.D., CHAIRMAN.

In comparing the report on Indian Missions with that of last year several changes are to be noted. The number of churches remains the same; the number of out-stations, workers and the benevolence have decreased. Yet, in spite of this apparent loss, substantial gain has been made in church membership and in attendance at the six mission schools. It is evident from the report of the Executive Committee that unusual difficulties have attended the Indian work. The Association has been hampered by the unsettled condition of the Indian lands and by the failure of the Government to safeguard them from the encroachment of white settlers. Had not this Association and other friends of the Indian cared for his interests and prevented the wholesale leasing of his lands, further educational and evangelistic work in his behalf would have been rendered well-nigh impossible. Evidently great injustice would be done the Indian, and affairs would become still more unstable, were it not for the presence and influence of the missionaries and agents of this Association. For this reason, if for no other, it seems to your committee that the Association should hold aggressively to its work through this critical period of transition.

We note with special satisfaction the moral and spirital influence our missionaries are having on the pupils in our Government schools and on the adjacent communities. No schools in our country have been more secularized than those established by our Government for the Indian. Our United States Commissioner of Indian Affairs freely acknowledges that they have failed of their purpose in uplifting the race. This fact emphasizes the importance of the work done by our missionaries. No other agency is ministering to the higher wants of this dependent people. Never in our national life have we had a more complete demonstration of the inadequacy of education without religion to uplift and save a race.

It is also very gratifying to note the outward changes wrought by the ideas and customs in vogue at our mission stations. The blanket of the wild man is being exchanged for the clothing of the civilized, and the language of the savage for the cultured speech of the Anglo-Saxon. Young people are responding to the ideals of the Christian Endeavor covenant with a consecration that puts many of our white youth to shame, and the beneficial effect on their religious life and work is very marked.

Our home churches have little conception of the number and vastness of our Indian reservations. They are scattered all over our national domain from the Mississippi to the Pacific, and from Minnesota on the north to Mexico on the south. As our Government withdraws its paternal care from these reservations, there will be an immense need and an equally great opportunity for the Christian Church. By larger gifts and a more complete consecration, the Church should prepare itself to meet this need.

Our Alaskan work is full of promise. One year ago Dr. David Beaton, chairman of this same committee, prophesied that Eskimos, quickened and purified by the love of Christ, would some day find their way into Siberia and carry the Gospel to their kindred in that vast Asiatic continent. The prophecy is being more than fulfilled, but in a most unexpected way. Instead of the western migration, Eskimos from the islands of Behring Strait, and even from Siberia itself, are finding their way to our islands and coming in touch with the spirit and power of Christianity. Marvelous possibilities are wrapped up in such an interchange of life. The transformations of the immediate future promise to be rapid and far-reaching.

It is a cause for deep regret when such experienced and consecrated workers as Mr. and Mrs. Lopp are compelled to leave the Alaskan field; but it is a signal proof of God's watchfulness and care when an equally consecrated worker is ready to enter these vacant and lonely stations on the outposts of the world. It was a marked Providence that prepared Mr. Lee for this work by a year's experience among Eskimos and an acquaintance with their customs and nature.

The twelve years of Mr. Lopp's work witnessed the transformation of a filthy, degraded, superstitious, heathenish people into a decent and civilized community, with 100 genuine Christians to set the standards of community life. This is, indeed, a miracle of grace. Such a manifestation of a spiritual power ought to convince the Church that the days of Pentecost are not ended.

Every Annual Report of this Association tells of difficulties overcome, victories won, souls saved, foundations of a larger spiritual empire laid. Your committee recommends the earnest prosecution of the work. It ought to be enlarged. It ought to be supported by the increasing generosity and enthusiasm of all our churches.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CHINESE WORK.

REV. HARLAN P. BEACH, CHAIRMAN.

The twenty-six lines of the Annual Survey having to do with the work of the Congregationalists for representatives of two great empires, and other facts that have come to your committee's attention, awaken their interest, occasion some regrets, raise certain questions and quicken great desires.

I. The work for the past year has on the whole grown in strength and usefulness, particularly if measured by that richest resultant of all missionary effort, the actual winning of a goodly number, hitherto unprecedented in the Association's history, to an allegiance to Jesus Christ. It means little to us, perhaps, to hear that 159 have given evidence of true conversion; yet if one remembers the practical atheism of the land whence most of them came, the unhappy impression concerning the failure of our nominally Christian land to produce the fruits of even ordinary righteousness, the incubus of secret societies, especially the dreaded hatchet men, and the manifold temptations, imported and found here, which beset these men, it is certainly because of a moral miracle that the missionaries can make so good a report. Indeed, despite these obstacles, the number won by each worker compared very favorably with the percentage of gain in our more active churches.

The educational work of the Association will not seem unduly emphasized if it is remembered that of the 89,863 Chinese on our mainland in 1900, ninety-six per cent. could neither read nor write; while of the 29,305 Japanese here at that time, ninety-six and nine-tenths per cent. were equally ignorant of our mother tongue. As this education is carried on through the medium of the Bible and of Christian books, its twofold value is evident. Moreover, such instruction is a tangible benefit which is greatly appreciated, since it aids the recipient to earn a better living, and at the same time it places the worker in the highest position possible next to the parent, according to Confucian ideas, namely, that of begetter of knowledge in the mind, the teacher. Minister Wu, in speaking of the work of missionaries among his countrymen, said that there were two varieties of foreign helpers that China most needed, the educator and the physician. The value of the instruction given to 1,276 Chinese and Japanese in A. M. A. schools is beyond our computation.

A momentous factor which can never be entered in statistical tables is the effect of the godly and loving labors of the workers, Chinese, Japanese and American. As Dr. Pond and his efficient staff of women missionaries, and Chinese and Japanese helpers, go about their self-sacrificing ministry, it cannot fail to make its lasting impression. One hears on Chinese soil the praises of such living testimony to the power of the Gospel. Ideals grow from these ministrations that abide and make those ministered unto think of the mission chapel as a heaven on earth, and of the workers as veritable angels.

II. It is to be regretted that this sole organization of our denomination laboring for the Chinese and Japanese in America, should be so hampered through lack of funds, and that this difficulty takes from the work during much of the time its efficient superintendent. The very cheapness of the enterprise—starvation salaries encouraging a strike almost—ought to put the denomination to shame. But when the budget is read and later the record of results, it should make us resolve to liberally support an agency which yields such large returns. One also thinks with longing of what might be accomplished if all that Dr. Pond could wisely expend on the enterprise were furnished him. Its failure to materialize is due to a lack of vision on the part of our Congregational Christians who think far more about the small number of Chinese and Japanese in the United States than they do about the strategic importance of winning these representatives of great races, men whose future influence will be most marked. As one compares the work of the present year with that of ten years ago, or with the record of last year, scarcely any progress is noted. It is true that if the Association holds its own in the Chinese section of its work, it is really making progress; since the 107,488 Chinese on our mainland in 1890 had dwindled to 89,863 at the last census. Notwithstanding this fact, the value of the work is so great that we ought to have made greater progress and in more directions than one or two.

III. Your committee is tempted to raise a question concerning the sex and nationality of the workers. According to the last census, there were 85,341 male Chinese and 4,532 females, while there were but 985 Japanese women to 23,341 Japanese men. This would suggest that the majority of the workers should be men; and when the original prejudices of these Orientals, which is stronger than that of the Pauline epistles, against woman's playing the role of teacher of men is taken into account, we question whether the proportion of the workers, which year before last was one white male missionary to thirty white women missionaries, ought not to be nearly equalized.

A related query arises as to whether it would not be well to make strenuous efforts to increase the proportion of Chinese and Japanese workers, even if it means reducing the number of white missionaries. The ratio of American to foreign workers this last year is about three to one. In view of the intimate knowledge that Orientals have of their own people and the practical inability of the foreigner to penetrate the inmost experiences and sinfulness of the Chinese and Japanese, it would seem desirable to increase the staff. Yet in raising both of these questions the difficulties involved, especially the questionable character of the preference of many Orientals for women teachers, are not forgotten. Then, too, there are advantages which could be urged for the existing proportion of the American and women workers.

IV. The desires of your committee, if they could be realized, would remedy all the real disabilities heretofore mentioned, and they would go even farther. While the Association's emphasis of the duty of our individual congregations toward the scattered Chinese and Japanese in their midst is a proper one, there remains much land to be possessed in the realm of bringing this duty to the attention of our churches. If Dr. Pond could be released long enough to present this message before our leading Associations, Congregationalists would do far more than they are now doing along this line.

Even more important, perhaps, than the agitation of parochial responsibility for Orientals within a given church's bounds, is the better understanding of the difficulties of the work, the most profitable methods of carrying it on, etc. Anyone who understands these races and who visits the ordinary Chinese Sunday-schools in America is at once shocked at some things which he sees, and is pained at the waste of force and efficiency often witnessed. Are we not in a position, as an Association, either to convene a conference of such isolated workers for consultation on the problems of the enterprise, or to print in our periodical or in a special pamphlet some helpful suggestions concerning the work?

Another desire of your committee is to see a closer co-operation between the workers of the Association in America and those of the American Board in the province of Canton and in Japan. Some co-operation already exists and has proven its value in southern China; but can it not be made more helpful still, especially in the direction of securing for the Pacific Slope helpers trained in the Canton district? The Presbyterians of the United States and those of Canada, and the Methodists who are working for America's Chinese and Japanese, have testified to the value of such trained men; and they have also depended for their leading white workers upon missionaries who have been prepared through a Cantonese apprenticeship in China itself.

V. In conclusion, your committee desires to express gratification in view of the exceedingly commendable work accomplished at so trifling a cost for so large a number of these typical men and women of the East. The Association has not yielded to the temptation to neglect these two races because of their small numbers; but it has had the wisdom to weigh rather than to count men, and to look for true results in the last day rather than at the present hour. Its missionaries are doing the work of patience and intension, assured that if the inertia of a great body is difficult to overcome, there is a correspondingly important movement when it is finally effected. What has been so well done in the past can and will be better done in the future, if Congregationalists will provide the means, and if a believing multitude of Christians will remember the work in prayer. Two empires of unparalleled antiquity and of great present power are at stake; and ours is the opportunity, through an Association which has abundantly proved its ability to carry on successful work among them, to render a special service in this time of national transitions—a work which will abide through all time.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON PORTO RICO.

REV. H. A. BRIDGMAN, CHAIRMAN.

The glamour of the first Protestant missionary onset upon Porto Rico has gone. It will not be possible very much longer to enlist in behalf of the propaganda there the enthusiasm and the energy which usually accompany a new undertaking. Sooner than we realize our venture in this tropical island will fall into the category of old and familiar work, to be pushed none the less vigorously, but to be related to the broad field of the Association's operations, and possibly to receive no more than its proportionate share of public attention. But it is not too late to utilize to the full the accessory impulses and motives connected with America's recent dramatic entrance upon the duties and opportunities of a world power. Viewed in this light, the portions of the Executive Committee's report devoted to Porto Rico merit more than ordinary consideration. We are impressed first with the fact that the notable forward movement of the year has been the establishment of two churches at what are supposed to be strategic centers. The chief function of this Associotion is popularly considered to be an educational one, and yet expanding work in Porto Rico has demanded and justified the planting of churches. It was inevitable that the two lines of labor would be conjoined. No modern missionary enterprise can succeed which does not make provision for both education and evangelism. Yet in Porto Rico we see the rather unique phenomenon, so far as the work of our Association goes, of churches following rather than antedating schools. Per contra, other denominations, which began their efforts in Porto Rico intending to devote themselves principally and exclusively to preaching the gospel, are being forced more and more by the very exigencies of the situation to enter the educational field. We presume that our Association, without neglecting obvious opportunities for effective church work, will, as in its Southern field, devote itself largely to the great and inviting field of Christian education. That is working along the lines of least resistance, for it must be confessed that the Porto Ricans as a body are hungrier for education than for the distinctive thing which we call the gospel. Moreover, with not one-fifth of the children of school age yet provided with educational advantages, it will be a long while before the United States Government, splendid as is its system of schools already inaugurated, can meet the appealing needs of the islands. Furthermore, if the system of government schools were much more perfect than it is, the function of raising up teachers for them would still devolve upon the denominational schools, and they would have to be operated day and night in order to produce the men and women needed. The leaders of the Porto Ricans during the next generation ought to come from the Christian schools of the island. There, and there mainly, will the native youth be likely to receive that broad intellectual equipment and that positive religious impress which will qualify them to lift their fellows to the levels of thought and life on which all the citizens of this Republic and the inhabitants of its dependencies may be hoped ultimately to stand.

We recommend, therefore, prosecution with more persistency and thoroughness even than heretofore of the educational and evangelistic work. We suggest that special attention be paid to the personnel of the teaching force, and that it be recruited from the ranks of the best educated young men and women of the United States; that the possibility of a strong, large, well-equipped institution, after the type of the Southern schools of the Association, be carefully considered, and that the constituency of the Association be asked greatly to increase its gifts to this special field.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

HENRY K. HYDE, CHAIRMAN.

The Committee on Finance reporting last year called attention to the fact that this committee is unrecognized specifically by the Constitution or By-laws of this Association, and must be considered as a kind of fifth wheel to an already well-equipped coach. Yet, as they well observed, this does not imply that it is in consequence useless. For one thing, it affords an opportunity to inform the Association anew of the good fortune it enjoys in being able to enlist in service on its Executive Committee men of the soundest business judgment. As trustee for the benefactions of the dead as well as the gifts of the living, it should and does possess the prudent and conservative management of its financial affairs which the nature of such a trust demands. To those of the Executive Committee whose special duty is the oversight of its finances this Association is greatly indebted for the skill and care with which they have discharged that duty. In this connection it may not be amiss to state that the total cost of administration of the Treasurer's department is very low, considering the volume and total amount of business transacted.

In the conduct of its business the Association may rest assured that, so far as our observations extended, modern methods have been adopted resulting in expedition and concise method of statement. Particularly deserving of commendation is the employment by the auditors of a certified public accountant. This insures regular and thorough inspection of accounts, and is as satisfying to the Treasurer as to the auditors themselves.

It is a cause of congratulation that the record of the last few years has been maintained and that the annual report again shows a balance on the right side of the ledger. This statement of itself is an indication of the careful management of its affairs as well as of liberality on the part of its supporters. Considering the tremendous pressure that must be brought to bear for additional appropriations for the extension and betterment of the work, as only those who hear and feel the force of such appeals realize, the maintenance of the work in such degree as the gifts of the donors indicate necessitates the exercise of the most careful and candid judgment. The proper balancing of different claims means a nice discrimination and the inevitable refusal of some worthy applicant. To so adjust these varied interests as to keep this Association out of debt is no mean task. The temptation to unwise enlargement of the work has been in a measure removed by the adoption of the plan for a reserve legacy fund, which plan we heartily commend. This fund now stands at $73,907.17. The amount received during the past year from estates was considerably in excess of the average for the last ten years. Under former conditions the whole amount would have been available for use during the year just closed, but with wisdom gained from experience, a considerable proportion has been set aside for the future. Under the admirable plan recommended by the Executive Committee and adopted at the Annual Meeting of the Association a year ago, the receipts from legacies for the year just beginning are not all to be expended in the current twelve months, but distributed over a period of three years. This will undoubtedly equalize somewhat the widely fluctuating receipts from this source and allow a reasonable anticipation of income to be made. But, after all, the responsibility of the work rests not on the dead but the living, and the present reduction of hitherto available funds serves to emphasize the need of a continued increase in contributions from living donors. The extent of the work in which we are engaged should increase from year to year with the enlarged resources of our church members and the country at large.

In conclusion, we desire to record our appreciation of the courtesy of the Treasurer in furnishing us all desired information, our approval of the methods employed in his department, and our belief that the finances of the Association are in a sound and healthy condition.

Obituary.

REV. ARTEMAS EHNAMANI.

Artemas Ehnamani was born at Redwing, Minn., in 1825. His parents were of the Dakota Indian tribe. As a boy he passed his life along the waters of the Mississippi and on the shores of Lake Pepin. His father, who was a priest of the Indian religion, brought him up in the traditions of his tribe. In early life Ehnamani was often on the war trail in the enemy's country, as war was frequent among the Ojibwas and Dakotas. The lad thus gained toughness and renown. He was married to an Indian princess of his own tribe.

Up to manhood he had never seen a Christian missionary. He was a thorough heathen, inducted into the mysteries of the Indian religion by his father, who left with him at his death his medicines and mystic charms. In 1862, after the Dakota War, he was prisoner in Mankato, Minn. Here he came face to face with the gospel of Jesus Christ. When he learned of the Son of God who came to the earth to save men his heart at once responded, and he gave Him his allegiance. He was one of the Christian Indian apostles. Licensed to preach in 1866, he was ordained pastor of the Pilgrim Church at Santee Agency, Neb., in 1867. His ministry was long and abundant in fruitfulness. He rejoiced at the yearly council as larger numbers of the wild tribes were gathered each year into this Christian convention. He passed away, after a brief illness, on the eve of Easter Day, 1902.

OF
BUREAU OF WOMAN'S WORK.

MISS D. E. EMERSON, SECRETARY.

During the year just closed, and upon which we report, the American Missionary Association has taken its God-given message through the wide range of its missionary field—to the colored and mountain people of the South and the people of Porto Rico, to the Chinese, to the Indians of the Northwest and the Eskimo in Alaska. This message, put into the language of Phillips Brooks, thrills with significance: "You are God's child; rise up and be God's child." It has been the message through the fifty-six years of this Association's history; the fatherhood of God; all men of every race and condition included in the brotherhood; all should be helped to arise and stand in the dignity of their rightful heritage as God's children.

To do this requires missionaries and money. Two hundred and fifty-four churches and one hundred and seven schools have been the agencies for reaching the people; four hundred and sixty-three women teachers have been among those engaged in the schools where 15,959 pupils have been under instruction. Preachers and teachers to the number of seven hundred and forty-nine have been in the field the past year. The amount expended for the year's work was $368,347.40.

Toward this there have been received through women's missionary societies $25,611.89. Of the thirty-three State Unions contributing, seventeen have increased their contributions over those of last year, and fifteen have given either the same or less. The Association values the assistance given to the work through these contributions and also that received through barrel and box supplies, much of which has aided materially in the support of the missions. The annual need in this direction in the field of the Association is very large.

We would express our thanks to all the contributing friends. It has been particularly helpful when local and State treasurers have passed the money immediately as soon as collected to the channel whence it would flow into the A. M. A. treasury to meet the field obligations.

Various measures have been taken by the Association through its Woman's Bureau to give information upon, and enlist interest in, this field of missions. The demand for literature has been greater than ever before, for programs and for distribution at neighborhood rallies, county and state meetings. We are gratified that again this year so many in sending for literature have furnished the postage, a matter of so small outlay to the individual or society, but amounting to a large tax on one treasury for the hundreds of cases where literature is requested.

Speakers have been provided for special meetings. Missionary letters from the field have been sent to societies aiding in the support of teachers. Through the woman's pages in THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY magazine, methods in use by different State Unions and local societies have been made known, programs have been outlined, responsive exercises furnished, and of the latter extra copies struck off to send to those desiring them. Mite-boxes, log-cabin and dime banks have been issued. At intervals during the year secretarial letters have been sent out giving special missionary news. About three thousand women's societies have in this way been kept in touch with the field. The response shows that all these various helps are necessary and appreciated. In addition to the supplying of literature, field letters and speakers, it is a part of the Woman's Bureau to give information as to special objects of work—assignment of barrel supplies, etc.—and to encourage contributions for the work.

Only a bare suggestion of what has been accomplished in all these schools and missions in one year's time can be given in this brief report. The four hundred and sixty-three women workers have been busy, indeed, as school-teachers, industrial instructors, matrons, preceptresses, Sunday-school teachers, Christian Endeavor leaders, missionary visitors—many serving in all these capacities, for it is proverbial that the missionary must be equal to every sort of a demand.

The desire expressed by the new missionary only recently arrived in Alaska is the desire of every true missionary teacher for her pupils in this field, "If only we can put white souls in them."

At a recent meeting of Christian Indians held at Santee, a teacher writes of the joy of seeing that their labor had not been in vain, as the Indians met for the Communion service, their Young Men's Christian Association meetings, the Christian Endeavor and the mothers' meetings, and for the family worship held by families or groups of campers morning and evening.

One working for the colored people writes:

"We rejoice much because many dear young people in our school will remember this year as one of surrender of self to God." From another colored school: "This has been a blessed year to us. More than fifty-four pupils have given themselves to Christ. The school has increased, and never has there been such a spirit of work as there has been this year." A Mountain school-teacher writes: "How we have rejoiced at the ingathering of fruit—forty students have decided for Christ." From another Mountain school: "We have received showers of blessings this year; the spirit of God was poured out, resulting in the conversion of many of our pupils. We have set up several Ebenezers, one when sixty-eight out of a membership of eighty-six Christian Endeavorers signed the temperance pledge." No wonder that teachers count it a blessed year when so many of their pupils have placed themselves on the Lord's side. There are one hundred and seven just such schools of the Association for Christian work, besides the church missions, and this responsiveness to Christian teaching is found in all parts of the field.

For the coming year we bespeak for the American Missionary Association—

(1) Large money gifts. The Association has planned for its schools and churches conservatively, upon a careful and moderate scale of expense, but even thus so great a work requires large supplies. In view of the importance of this field, its diversity of race, the cost of conducting missionary schools (conditions that pertain alike to the Board of Foreign Missions and to the American Missionary Association), we can but urge larger contributions from Women's Societies to the American Missionary Association; contributions more nearly commensurate to the work undertaken, according to the part women should have in its support.

(2) Subscriptions to THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY magazine, fifty cents a year. It is a monthly, illustrated, each number revealing clearly some interesting phase of the work invaluable for missionary current events. Its woman's pages are open to the report of any successful methods in conducting meetings or raising funds. Your subscription will help the treasury of the Association, and the magazine will help you in interesting some one hitherto indifferent.

(3) More prayer. In a sister denomination report was made upon an enterprise undertaken by a few purposeful women. "First they prayed." Then they made their plans, laid out their work. "And then they prayed." Success followed. Let us pray and work and pray, that hearts may be stirred and made willing, and the Lord's offering brought in liberally. That the American Missionary Association may increase its Christly work, teaching these needy races in our country how to rise up and be indeed God's children, instruments of intelligence and of righteousness in this land that extends to them the privilege of citizenship, and is itself set as a light and leader among the nations of the earth.

REPORT OF AUDITORS.

We have employed Frederick C. Manvel, Certified Public Accountant of the State of New York, to examine the books and accounts of H. W. Hubbard, Treasurer of the American Missionary Association, for the year ending September 30th, 1902, and herewith submit his statement of the results of his work as a part of our report.

We have also made a careful examination of all Bonds and other securities held by the Association and find the same to agree with the records in the books and balance sheet of same date.

The Treasurer's Bond was submitted to us and found to be in order.

New York October 14th, 1902.

EDWIN H. BAKER,
JOHN E. LEECH, } Auditors.

MR. EDWIN H. BAKER,
MR. JOHN E. LEECH } AUDITORS.

GENTLEMEN: New York, October 13th, 1902.

I have thoroughly examined the accounts of the Treasurer of the American Missionary Association for the year ending September 30th, 1902.

I verified the totals in the Cash Book of the receipts and payments, compared the cancelled checks with the entries in the Cash Book, using them as vouchers. I compared the totals of the receipts and payments with the entries of the monthly reports, including those published in the American Missionary.

The cash balances to the credit of the Association in the several Banks and Trust Companies have been certified to me, by their officers, as being in each instance in agreement with those stated in the books of the Treasurer.

The postings in the General Ledger and the amounts in the Trial Balance Sheet were verified, and I assisted in the examination of the securities of the Association in the Safe Deposit Vaults verifying the statement of Resources entered in the General Balance Sheet.

The current receipts this year exceeded the payments by the amount of $472.10, which amount, added to the balance brought over from last year, makes the total of $1,251.84 to the credit of this account at the close of the year.

As the result of this audit I am able to report that I have found the records of the transactions of the year correctly entered, the balance as stated, on hand, the vouchers and papers in good condition, and the commendable methods, statistical reports and system of bookkeeping which have been in practice in former years are still maintained.

Respectfully submitted,

[Signed] FREDERICK C. MANVEL,
Certified Public Accountant of State of New York.

REPORT OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT—1901-1902.

G. H. GUTTERSON, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

Notwithstanding its small area and sterile soil, New England is now, and always has been, the most productive region in which to seek money for all descriptions of missionary work. Its citizens have given vast sums for colleges and academies, hospitals and churches in all lands. The sun never sets on their missionary institutions, and it is safe to say that in all this philanthropic and religious work Congregationalists have had the larger part. The morning prayer of their missionaries is heard around the world. All the wealth of the Congregational denomination is not by any means to be found in New England, yet the missionary societies still look to it for a large part of their gifts and legacies, and not in vain.

According to the census of 1900, there were 633,649 Congregational church members in the United States. Of these, 248,695 were in New England and 113,235 in Massachusetts. Out of a total population of 4,013,535 in New England, less than a quarter of a million are of our faith. In the financial year of the A. M. A., 1901-1902, New England, leaving out Connecticut, gave 60,230.26 in donations to the work of this Association. This was $4,652.69 less than in the preceding year; most of this decrease was in the State of New Hampshire. Vermont gained over $600, and Massachusetts slightly. The other States showed loss. During the same period the same States yielded $75,012.83 in legacies, a slight increase ($174.81) over last year.

The total income of the A. M. A. for 1901-1902 from donations and legacies was $303,739.59; $135,243.09 came from five New England States. Adding to this sum the totals from Connecticut, and we have $200,569.25 given by the 248,695 Congregationalists in New England.

The working force in the Eastern District remains the same as for the last few years. The details of the work accomplished from the Boston office during the year closing December 30, 1902, are as follows: State and national meetings attended, 12; conferences, 18; colleges, academies, literary clubs, 13; Christian Endeavor meetings, 8; other religious meetings, 70; churches visited, 173; addresses delivered, 296; invitations to speak, 375; letters written, 5,713; special postals, 3,366; leaflets, 29,009; collection envelopes, 23,442; callers at the office on business, 3,327; number of miles traveled, 31,068.

A special feature of the year's work was the presentation of the work of the A. M. A. before the Boston Ministers' Meeting in Pilgrim Hall on March 3d, by Mr. Charles A. Hull, of New York; Rev. Dr. Dunning, of Boston; and Dr. Talcott Williams, of the Philadelphia Press. It was a most successful meeting.

Rev. Spencer Snell, the college pastor at Talladega, Ala., put in a month's hard work in western Massachusetts early in the year, visiting sixteen towns, making seven public addresses, and calling upon fifty-three persons.

We are much indebted to the following members of our great missionary force who generously devoted portions of their summer vacation to the work of raising funds and addressing audiences: Prof. W. J. Decatur, of Talladega; Miss M. L. Boynton, of Tougaloo; Prof. O. B. Loud, of New Orleans; Rev. W. J. Ballou, of Tougaloo; Rev. Cyrus Hamlin, of Tougaloo, Prof. G. C. Burrage, of Macon; Miss Susan M. Marsh of Wilmington. These have spoken in nearly forty different cities and towns. We know that there are other teachers who have done equally faithful and effective work this summer whose names do not appear in the above list.

REPORT OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT—1901-1902.

JOSEPH E. ROY, DISTRICT SECRETARY.

The Fifty-fifth Annual Meeting of the American Missionary Association, held in this district at Oak Park, Ill., was in the midst of a flush of A. M. A. activity. The Sabbath preceding was observed in Chicago as a Field-Day. Appropriate services were held in seventeen leading churches. Their pulpits were occupied by Secretaries and missionaries. These meetings were well reported by the city papers; a grand uplift for the Association was secured; and all became a delightful prelude to the more stately anniversary service that followed in the First and Second churches of Oak Park. Another local preliminary contributory to the glow and power of the great convocation was the session of the Congregational Club of this city, with its own Four Hundred, which, as held at the Auditorium Hotel on the Monday night previous, was devoted to the honoring of the Association—its orator of the day being also the preacher of the annual sermon on the following night, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, D.D., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Besides the Field-Day and the Club's function, that anniversary was held in the midst of a series of A. M. A. rallies that were going on through the months of September and October through this District, whose itinerary reached ten states, the speakers being the District Secretary, and George V. Clark, of Charleston, S. C. The number of prominent churches reached was sixty-three, while the addresses made would count up nearly double that number. The General Associations visited were in five states. Mr. Clark's addresses were increased in power by the singing of these songs of the captivity.

Mr. Clark was also detailed as an assistant in this District for the months of March, April and May, during which he represented the A. M. A. in a Nebraska campaign of some twenty churches in which all of our national Congregational societies participated, the District Secretary joining in the concluding Field-Day at Lincoln, the capital.

Another short tour was made by the District Secretary, in company with Rev. A. D. Blakeslee, who used his own lantern, among neighboring churches.

The District Secretary during the year has spoken at six state associations and two local. Lincoln's Birthday was celebrated by six illustrated lectures in as many churches, showing his relation to the work among the colored people. He has presented the cause in person to eighty-seven churches. A different circular letter has been sent out each month to the churches whose schedules bring the A. M. A. into that period. In the closing month of the year an appeal was sent out to the churches which had not as yet made an offering. That missive occasioned the addressing of 750 of the 2,200 churches of this District. But the most of these were either quite young or otherwise enfeebled so that they could scarcely be chided for that omission.

A second time during the year the Chicago Congregational Club took the opportunity to put honor upon the work of this Association, calling Rev. H. H. Proctor up from Atlanta to make an address upon "The Negro's Contribution to the National Life." The President, S. S. Rogers, Esq., paid a glowing tribute to the veterans in the support of the Association and its principles in the days of detraction and opposition.

The system of securing personal representatives in the local associations, as reported heretofore, has been continued and has resulted in the acceptance of the position by pastors in more than half as many of these bodies, which have a total number of eighty.

No report of this kind can be complete without a grateful and commendatory mention of the services rendered this cause by the women, the Sunday-schools and the Endeavor Societies. And all of these organizations count this Association as one of their beneficiaries. In this nourishing of the missionary spirit among the women and youth there is great promise.

The Homeland Prayer-Meeting, held with punctilious regularity and devout zeal, gives this Association its full share of recognition, often calling upon the local secretary and missionaries who may be in the region to make addresses. Our Bureau Secretary finds this union, and indeed all of them, among her most effective coadjutors. Nor is it alone the women of Illinois who are enriched by these stated prayer and fellowship meetings; but as they are all reported in The Advance, the good influence is multiplied greatly.

The admirable analysis of receipts given out by Treasurer Hubbard month by month, yearly, in comparison of each month and year with the previous one, to the District Secretaries, affords them the means of repeating the same to the constituency.

And so that report for the closing year, as follows, makes out a gratifying total of gifts from the living $42,718.43, which is $15,245.13 more than those of the previous year. Though the legacies have fallen off $9,607.20, this yet leaves a fine increase of $5,637.93 for the year. Surely this is right that the living saints should come to the help of the saints in glory, than whom none can be more gratified at such evidence of abiding and enlarging love (caritas) for these backward races of our country.

The returning prosperity of the West is showing itself to some degree in this increase upon the previous year. A farmer in Nebraska, who has been accustomed to send ten dollars a year, has just now sent double that amount, saying, "The abundant wheat harvest of Nebraska makes it possible for me to mail you a contribution of twenty dollars."

THE MAN AT BETHESDA.

SERMON

BY

CHARLES E. JEFFERSON.

Delivered at the Annual Meeting, New London, Conn., Oct. 21, 1902.

"A certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years." John v, 5.

Thirty-eight years is a long time. It is a long time to any man. It is a longer time to a man who is sick. And to a sick man who has no friends, it is longer still. To the man at the pool of Bethesda time had become interminable. All days to him were alike: chill and drab and hopeless.

Strange to say, no one had ever seen this man. For years he had lain at one of the prominent centers of Jerusalem. Men constantly passed the spot where he was lying, but no one ever saw him. Merchants and traders, vinedressers and shepherds, scholars and church officials, the keen-eyed men of their day and generation came and went, but not one of them ever saw this man. This was because every man was thinking of himself. One had bought a piece of ground, another had bought five yoke of oxen, another had married a wife, and so none of them had time to come to this man's assistance. And that is why they could not see him. We do not readily see a man who is likely to stop us when we are in a hurry. He was invisible even to the crowd of invalids in the midst of whom he lay. His fellow sufferers as they hobbled or shuffled by him, did not see him, for their eyes were fixed upon the bubbling water which was to bring them swift relief. Sickness does not always open the heart and refine the spirit; it may close the one and dull the other. Invalidism is a soil in which the flowers of paradise sometimes grow with marvelous luxuriance and celestial bloom, but just as often it is the soil in which flourish brambles and briars, and all the poison weeds of an abnormal selfishness. The sick men at Jerusalem had organized their life around the principle which lay at the foundation of the civilization of their day. Every man for himself: that was their motto. And the reason why no invalid saw this hopeless cripple was because he was at the rear end of the procession. Year after year the blind and the halt and the withered, like so many priests and Levites, passed by on the other side, and no good Samaritan ever came.

It is not a pleasant picture, and yet we ought to look at it, for it gives us a bird's eye view of the world which Jesus came to save. To the Hebrews God had sent prophets in a long succession, teaching them the ways of mercy, but the servants, one after another, had been killed, and the husbandmen of the vineyard had refused to bring forth fruit. The episode at the pool of Bethesda is an awful commentary on the moral degradation of the Hebrew people. A sick man lies for years within the sight of water which he believes will heal him, and in all the great and pious city there is not one hand reached out for his relief. Day after day, week after week, month after month, the sacrifices and anthems and prayers of an elaborate worship went on in the temple, but not a man in all the priesthood seemed to know that there was a brother man a few yards away who had something against him. While the fire was kept burning on the temple altar, the fire of hope in a human heart, the divinest fire on earth, was left to flicker feebly and at last go out. The man at the end of the procession lay in darkness and the shadow of death.

But in the fulness of time on a never-to-be-forgotten day, a man comes down to the pool of Bethesda who has a genius for seeing men. Running His swift glance over the faces of the crowd, His eyes rest at last on the wan face of the man at the end of the procession. He looks at him, He comes toward him, He speaks to him, He asks him a question. The man pours out the dismal story of his woe, but before the last dark syllable has died on the air the man is on his feet—so swiftly has infinite mercy come to his relief.

The story is significant because illustrative of the disposition and habit of the world's Redeemer. What He did at Bethesda He always did, and does, and will forever do. How large a part of all His public career can be covered by this picture of Bethesda! "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." "They that are whole have no need of a physician, but they that are sick." "I come to call not the righteous, but sinners to repentance." So He said and says, and will say forever. He began his ministry by holding up an ideal sketched by Isaiah's master pen, and said to the people who knew Him best: "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. For the spirit of the Lord is upon Me because he has anointed Me to minister to the world's neglected." Strange to say, this announcement of His program stirred up opposition at the very start. But He never wavered or turned back. He said He would preach the gospel to the poor and He did it. The poor were the victims of the cruelty
